IN producing this first portion of the Promptorium, the Editor, having for various reasons been induced to withhold for the present his more detailed Preface, feels it requisite to offer a few preliminary observations. The present edition is formed upon the text of the Harleian MS. 221, which has been selected as the most ancient, the most correct, and the most copious of the MSS. of which the existence has hitherto been ascertained. The additions that have been made from other MSS., and from Pynson's edition, are numerous ; these, as likewise the corrections and various readings, are distinguished from the text by being placed within brackets, with the indication of the sources whence they are severally derived. In a few instances, where the reading of the Harl. MS. appeared so faulty as to justify an alteration of the text, the rejected word has been given in the notes ; but more frequently it has been considered preferable to leave the reading of the MS. unaltered, and to give the various reading, which at once suggests the correction. The authorities whence various readings have been taken are indicated in the following manner. MS. in the Library at King's College, Cambridge, (κ.); MS. in the collection of Sir Thomas Phillipps, Bart. at Middle Hill, and formerly in the Heber Library, (H.); MS. in the Chapter Library at Winchester, originally in the possession of Thomas Silkstede, Prior of Winchester, A.D. 1498, (s.) A fragment contained in Harl. MS. 2274, afforded a few readings, which are marked by the number of the MS. The edition printed by Pynson, in 1499, has supplied numerous additions and various readings, distinguished thus, (p.); and a few, the critical importance of which is but trifling, have been selected from the editions by Julian Notary, 1508, (J.) and W. de Worde, 1516, (W.) The work was reproduced by the last-named printer in 1510, 1512, and 1528; but Pynson's text appears to have been followed in all the subsequent editions, with partial abridgment chiefly of the Latin portion of the work, and some trifling variations.

The integrity of the MS. selected as the groundwork of the present edition having thus been, in all essential respects, preserved, the following modifications have been deemed advisable. The original consists of two distinct portions, and alphabetical arrangements, a nominale, and a verbale, according to the usage, of which other instances occur in contemporary works of a similar nature. The disadvantage of thus separating the verbs from the nouns, and other parts of speech, was evidently material, and the arrangement has been simplified by throwing the whole into one alphabetical order. The indications of genders, declensions, and conjugations, as likewise of certain inflexions of the Latin words, which conveyed important information to the student of Latin, for whose benefit the work was compiled, but are devoid of any utility as regards the present purpose, have been wholly omitted. Wherever it was practicable, the Latin words have been corrected by reference to the authorities cited; in all other cases no attempt has been made to alter the barbarisms of a debased Latinity, which, displeasing, indeed, to the eye of the classical scholar, are not devoid of information to the archaic student.

It has been found impossible to preserve the perfect regularity of alphabetical arrangement, in consequence of the disorder that had been introduced by the scribe, who, writing more by ear than careful observation of orthography, has in his transcript continually vitiated the spelling of the original. To have corrected these corruptions, introduced by the second hand, would have been incompatible with the principle of preserving, in its integrity, the text of the MS.: the transposition of the words would have destroyed the evidence of their original spelling indicated by the alphabetical arrangement. Some words have, however, where it appeared advisable, been transposed; and if the Editor should be reproached with an excess of caution in not making many alterations of the kind, he hopes that the inconvenience will be ultimately remedied by means of an orthographic Index, which it is proposed to supply, wherein the reference to words disguised by the most obsolete and uncouth spelling may be effectually facilitated. The contractions have throughout been printed at length with the exception of the final  $\bar{m}$  and  $\bar{n}$  : these have been left in cases where any question might arise as to their power. The chief difficulty in this respect has occurred in regard to the verbs, and, although the Editor has little doubt that the termination -nne was here intended by the contraction  $\bar{n}$ , yet the irregularities of the spelling, and indications of contraction, that occur in the MS., in this instance, have induced him to leave these, and all questionable cases, to the decision of those whom they may interest. In a few instances where the contraction has appeared to be redundant, or erroneous, it has been printed as it stands in the MS., so that it may be rejected or retained, at the option of the reader. A prolongation of the last stroke of the m or n, which occasionally, as it is believed, denotes the mute final e, has been indicated in the following manner, m', n'. It must also be noticed, that y is to be sought in the place of i ; that sh is invariably written sch ; and that p, which is occasionally, by inadvertence of the scribe, written th, takes the penultimate place, usually assigned to it in the Anglo-Saxon alphabet. The letter ȝ is found in the place of z, at the close of the alphabetical arrangement ; as, however, its various and undefined powers would have been insufficiently represented by that letter, the Saxon character has been retained, with the exception only of a very small number of words, in which, the letter having evidently the simple and ordinary power of z, that character has been employed.

In the selection of illustrative materials, the Editor has sought to keep equally in view the curious character of the work, as affording definite evidence of archaic usages, and its philological importance. He has thought it also more desirable to establish by contemporary evidence the existence of an obsolete word, or show the immediate source whence it was introduced into the language, than to enter upon etymological speculations.

The Author excuses himself for the dialectical peculiarities of his work, written in conformity with the language of Norfolk, with which alone he was acquainted ; a comparison, therefore, with the existing dialect of East Anglia appeared to be desirable, and it has been carried out as far as it was practicable. Of numerous contemporary or ancient authorities, whence illustrations have been largely drawn, several MSS. of the Latin-English Dictionary, entitled Medulla Grammatices, compiled, according to Bale, by the same author as the Promptorium, have been chiefly consulted, as likewise the same work in its printed form, under the title of the Ortus Vocabulorum. Of the Medulla Grammatices, or Grammatices, the MSS. which may especially be cited are, among several in the Harleian Collection, those marked 2257 and 2270; two valuable MSS. in the collection of Sir Thomas Phillipps, Bart. 8244 and 8306 (MSS. Heber 1020 and 1360); and the MS. in the Chapter Library at Canterbury, which is the more remarkable on account of the large number of corresponding Anglo-Saxon words which have been added in the margin, as it is supposed, by the hand of Somner. A copy is also preserved in the Pepysian Library at Cambridge, erroneously described as an English and Latin, instead of a Latin-English Dictionary, and another in the Library at Holkham. The most ancient MS. hitherto noticed is in the possession of the Editor; and it must be observed that, although the work is substantially the same, the variations of the text in all these copies are found to be very great, and deserve careful comparison. A highly valuable MS., dated 1483, consisting of an English and Latin Dictionary, wholly distinct from the Promptorium, and written apparently in the North-Eastern parts of England, is cited as the Catholicon Anglicum. For free use of this important source of illustration the Editor is indebted to the kindness of its late lamented possessor, the Right Hon. Lord Monson. The curious work of John Palsgrave, entitled "Eclaircissement de la langue Françoise," 1530, the quaint sentences of Horman's Vulgarium, 1519, and various other early printed authorities of equal rarity, have been made available to the utmost of the Editor's ability. But much has been inevitably left without any explanatory comment; and the Editor is apprehensive that the elucidations which he has been enabled to offer will too frequently be found insufficient or defective. In a work that has demanded much minute research and detailed reference, numerous errors must, with the utmost care, have occurred; and he will thankfully appreciate any corrections or suggestions with which those who are interested in such researches may favour him. Considerable inconvenience has arisen from the impossibility of gaining access to treatises from which the Latin words in the Promptorium were derived. The author cited as “Mirivalensis, in Campo florum,” is unknown, and all researches in order to discover that work, which supplied many of the most curious and obscure terms, have hitherto been fruitless. No MS. of the Derivationes Ugucionis has yet been found which answers to the description here given, “Ugucio versificatus;” and the “Commentarius curialium” is likewise still a desideratum. On these points of difficulty the Editor, in behalf of his endeavour to offer in the present work some contribution towards the archaic lexicography of the English language, would solicit the aid of those who are more conversant than himself with early MS. literature.

PREFACE.

ON the completion of a long-promised contribution to English lexicography some introductory notices seem indispensable, as an accompaniment to one of the most valuable linguistic monuments of its class to be found in any European country. Whether we regard the Promptorium Parvulorum<sup>a</sup> as an authentic record of the English language in the earlier half of the fifteenth century, as illustrative of the provincial dialects of East Anglia, or as explanatory of the numerous archaisms of a debased Latinity that pervades early chronicles and documents, its value can scarcely be too highly estimated. If, on the other hand, we take into consideration the curious evidence which it supplies to those who investigate the arts and manners of bygone times, it were difficult to point out any relic of learning at the period equally full of instruction, and of those suggestive details which claim the attention of students of mediæval literature and antiquities in the varied departments of archaeological research.

These considerations, not less than the great scarcity of the work, whether we enumerate the MSS. hereafter described, or the few and often mutilated copies of editions by the fathers of English typography, Pynson, Julian Notary, and Wynkyn de Worde, preserved to our days, were inducements to undertake a task which has now, after many unforeseen impediments, been brought to completion. I will not, however, consume time in seeking to propitiate those whose indulgence I might hope to win, for shortcomings and imperfections which no one perhaps can more truly estimate or regret than myself. The student of early literature who has engaged in the minute toils which such an undertaking demands, or in the wearisome labor of collation, may be willing perhaps to regard with leniency deficiencies and even inaccuracies into which the editor may have been betrayed in the course of his work.

<sup>a</sup> In the MS. at King's College, Cambridge, the work is entitled, in the prologue, "Promptorius Parvulorum;" in Pynson's edition "Promptorius Puerorum;" and in that by Wynkyn de Worde "Promptuarium Parvulorum Clericorum." The last title is doubtless most correct. Promptuarium in classical latinity signifies a store-room or repository; in mediæval times it denoted the department in a conventual or collegiate establishment or the like, whence stores were dispensed, which in a monastery was under the charge of the Cellarer. The author gives "Boterye; eclarium, promptuarium;" p. 45; "Celer; promptuarium; Celerere of the howse; cellerarius, promptuarius;" p. 65; "Spence, botery or celere; cellarium, promptuarium;" p. 468. As illustrations of the use of the term by mediæval writers, I may mention the "Promptuarium argumentorum dialogice ordinatum," Colon. 1496, "Promptuarium exemplorum," appended to the "Sermones de Sanctis" printed by Julian Notary in 1510, "Joh. Herolt Promptuarium," Nuremb. 1520, and "Jo. Piniciani Promptuarium Vocabulorum;" Aug. Vind. 1516. The title, it may be observed, was adopted for a Latin-French and French-Latin vocabulary, "Promptuarium Latinæ Linguae," printed at Antwerp by Plantin, 1564; and the well-known series of medallion portraits first published at Lyons in 1553 is entitled "Promptuarium Iconum Insigniorum."

The special subjects to which I have limited my observations in the following preliminary notices may be thus stated:—

I. The author of the Promptorium, with such traces as may be found of his history or of his literary labors.

II. The sources from which his Latinity was derived.

III. The MSS. of the work, and also the printed editions which have been available in the preparation of this volume.

I. We are enabled to ascertain with certainty, from the author's own statement given in the Harleian MS. at the close of his Preambulum, that the Promptorium was compiled by a Dominican Friar of Lynn Episcopi, Norfolk, A.D. 1440.<sup>a</sup> This monastery of Black Friars or Friars-Preachers stood in the eastern part of the town. Few traces of it are now to be seen. It is believed that this house existed in the reign of Edward I., and was founded by Thomas Gedney.<sup>b</sup> An anchorage is stated to have belonged to it,<sup>c</sup> and herein possibly the author, who describes himself as “fratrem predicatore*m* reclusum Lenne Episcopi," had sought a retreat from more active duties to devote his leisure to the task which he had undertaken. If the library of his own house could not supply him with the works necessary for his literary purpose, doubtless they could have been easily obtained from those of other houses belonging to the Order.

<sup>c</sup> There was a chapel of St. Catherine in the conventual church, and with this chapel probably the above-mentioned anchorage was connected. Henry le Despencer, Bishop of Norwich, wrote a letter to the mayor and burgesses of Lynn, 5 Rich. II, desiring that they would grant their part of the house of St. Catherine to John Consolif, a servant of Lord le Despencer, the bishop's brother, there to live a solitary life upon the alms of the good people; the other part of the house, belonging to the Archdeacon of Norwich, having been before granted to the said John Consolif. Blomefield, at supra, p. 513. There was a remarkable hermitage at Lynn, in a cave on the sea-shore, in the bishop's marsh, at a spot called “Lenne Croueli,” where, as appears by a document dated 1349, a lofty cross, 110 feet in height, had been erected for the benefit of seafaring men. But hermits and recluses were essentially different.

There is no reason to suppose that the word reclusus is here used in any other than its strict sense of an "ankyr," one who was shut up in a building specially appropriated to the purpose, and with a solemn service, by episcopal sanction; after which he could not leave his cell except in case of necessity or with the permission of the bishop.<sup>a</sup> The expression in the preface, "Lenne sub regula paupertatis astrictus," probably refers to the vows taken on the occasion of his becoming a Dominican friar. The author has himself explained the word "ankyr" by "recluse," and rendered it anachorita (p. 12). An instance of a friar being a recluse (inclusus) at Pagham in Sussex is mentioned in the will of St. Richard, Bishop of Chichester;<sup>b</sup> and we read of an anchoress within the nunnery of Clemen-thorpe, near York, in 1475.<sup>c</sup>

The author was, as we learn from his own words, bred, if not born, in Norfolk: "comitatus Northfolchie modum loquendi solum sum secutus, quem solum ab infancia didici, et solotenus plenius perfectiusque cognovi." It may deserve observation that the peculiarities of the local dialect of the county should have been thus distinctly noticed at this period. We are, however, informed that, at an earlier time, Samson de Botington, abbot of St. Edmundsbury 1182—1211, was accustomed to discourse to the people in the vernacular of Norfolk, the county in which he was born and bred, and that he had a pulpit for the purpose in the conventual church.<sup>d</sup>

There has hitherto been some uncertainty in regard to the name of the <sup>a</sup> Hearne has given a note, hereafter mentioned, in which the compiler of the work is stated to have been "frater Ricardus Fraunces, inter quatuor parietes pro Christo inclusus." Ames has inserted a note by a Mr. Lewis, who was led to the conclusion that he had actually been starved to death between four walls; but Herbert observes that the phrase means no more than that he was confined or imprisoned; to which Dibdin adds "most probably a voluntary recluse or monk." compiler of the Promptorium. In the Glossary to Hearne's edition of Langtoft's Chronicle, under the word "Nesshe," the following statement appears: "Maken nesshe is interpreted mollifico and molleo (so 'tis expressed for mollio,) in the Promptorium parvulorum sive clericorum (call'd also Medulla Grammaticæ), a very scarce folio book printed by Richard Pynson in the year 1499, being the 14th year of the reign of King Henry VII. at which time it was look'd upon as a work of great use and excellency, as may appear from this printed note at the end. ¶ Ad laudem et ad honorem." &c. (as given in the account of Pynson's edition, p. xlii. infra.) "The author was a preaching or black Fryer, and follow'd the dialect of the East parts of England, to which he had been used from his infancy, as he tells us in his Prologue. His name was Richard Fraunceis, as I find by this note written in an old hand at the beginning of a copy of this book that was lent me by Mr. Ward of Longbridge, viz. ¶ Nomen Compilatoris istius libri est Frater Ricardus Fraunceis, inter quatuor parietes pro Christo inclusus."<sup>a</sup> Against this statement, however, which is at most the anonymous note or tradition of some previous possessor of the book, may be cited, first, an entry of equal authority in a copy of the same edition by Pynson in the public library at Cambridge—"Autor hujus operis fuit Galfredus Grammaticus dictus, frater Ordinis S. Dominici." To this friar we find the authorship ascribed by the learned Bale, Bishop of Ossory, himself an East-Anglian, not indeed under the title of the Promptorium, but as the Medulla Grammatices, distinctly identified however by the incipial words of the Preambulum as the work more commonly known by the name first mentioned. Bale, whose Catalogue of the writers of Great Britain was published at Basle in 1557,<sup>b</sup> writes also thus with his accustomed critical asperity:—"Galfredus Grammaticus, ad scholas semper a puero nutritus, sub corruptis, obscuris, ac barbaris præceptoribus, prima ejus artis rudimenta edoctus, corruptior ipse aliorum tandem magister evasit. Sibi ipsi nihilominus, non aliter quam olim arrogans ille Palæmon, adiectus, multa tribuebat, tanquam essent cum eo nato simul et bonæ literæ, et bene dicendi artes abortæ, atque cum eo demum moriente et illæ simul essent interituræ. <sup>c</sup> The Synonyma were printed by Pynson in 1496, 1500, and 1509, "cum expositione magistri Galfridi Anglici," namely, the author of the Promptorium here mentioned; also printed by W. de Worde, 1500, 1505, 1510, 1514, 1517, 1518. The first edition, by Pynson, is in the Bodleian (Auctarium, Q. 2, 5, 9); the expositio is in Latin, with a few English words; for instance, "perichelides, Anglice a bee" (A. Sax. Beag, beálh, corona, armilla). The words are arranged alphabetically by order of subjects, e. g. "Ocellum dic os minimum funis quoque ludum, qui se de more portant per inane puella:" thus expounded by the grammarian Galfridus, "et dictum est ocillum quia in ora moveantur hue et illuc, vel quia ora astantium ad risum moveant, vel quia solebant impelli in ora transeuntium, et iste vocatur Anglice (a totre or a rydyng rope,)" namely, a swing for children. See Dibdin, Typ. Antiq., vol. ii., pp. 97, 612; and p. lxxviii. infra.

<sup>e</sup> Tanner (Bibl. Brit. p. 305) refers to a MS. of this work in the library at Lincoln Cathedral, unfortunately not included among the cathedral libraries of which the MSS. are enumerated in Catal. MSS. Angliæ. I am indebted to the Rev. G. F. Apthorp, Senior Vicar of Lincoln Cathedral, for information that there is a MS. of the Medulla Grammaticæ, the Latin-English dictionary above cited among the works of Galfridus Grammaticus, and that the volume contains a "Liber Hymnorum," stated to be by the same author as the dictionary. The shelf-mark of the MS. was formerly H. 35; in the present arrangement it is A. 3, 15.

Pits,<sup>a</sup> always a keen opponent of the bitter censures of Bale, gives the following commendation of our author, whilst he concurs in ascribing to him the compilation of the Promptorium, which, however, he likewise designates by the title of Medulla:—

“Galfridus Grammaticus in orientalibus Angliæ partibus natus, ordinis S. Dominici Monachus, ut mecum multi sentiunt. Vir bonus et simplex, atque ita rebus Grammaticis impense deditus, ut inde cognomen assumpserit, et in iis discendis atque docendis omnem pene suam ætatem consumpserit. In quo genere non illaudata reliquit posteris documenta, quæ et Parisiis et Londini fuerunt aliquando typis mandata. Scripsit autem hæc.

“Præceptiones Pueriles, librum unum. Hortum vocabulorum, librum unum. Ut etenim multos nostræ præ . . . Medullam Grammatices librum unum. Cernentibus solícite clericorum . . . In Poetria nova, librum unum. MS. Oxonii in Coll. Balliolensi.<sup>b</sup> Et alia. Claruit anno postquam peperit Virgo 1490.” The list includes also the works on the writings of Neccham, John de Garlandia, &c. enumerated by Bale, as above cited.

Bishop Tanner, in his Bibliotheca Britannico-Hibernica, follows the statements of Bale and Pits, repeating the list of the writings of Galfridus Grammaticus, “annon potius Starkey”? as the Bishop remarks. Among these he noticed that the Hortus Vocabulorum was a Latin-English Dictionary, adding to Bale’s brief account part of the title more fully given in the printed work as hereafter described. He proceeds to notice as follows Geoffrey’s English-Latin Dictionary, the MS. of which, now in the Harleian collection, No. 221, the learned prelate appears to have examined in Sir Simonds d’Ewes’ library:—

<sup>b</sup> Bishop Tanner observes that this work was written by Galfridus Vinesauf. In the list of MSS. at Durham, 1391, we find “Nova Poetria Galfridi Anglici qui vocatur Papa Stupor mundi.” Cat. Vet. Eccl. Dun., Surtees Soc. p. 11. Hence obviously this work is erroneously assigned by Pits to Galfridus Grammaticus, who lived in the following century. See also Cat. Vet. ut supra, p. 177: Codd. Coll. S. Trin. Cant., Catal. MSS. Angl. t. ii., p. 99, No. 446. Mr. Coxe, Catal. MSS. Oxon., Coll. Ball. nos. cclxiii., cclxxvii., ascribes the Carmen “De Poetria nova,” dedicated to Innocent III., to Galfridus de Vino Salvo.

'Cernentibus solícite clericorum.' Lond. 1499, fol. MS. eccl. Lincoln. H. . . . . Quod sequuntur Nominale, Verbale, in cujus margine scribitur Galfridus Starkey; quære annon hoc sit cognomen Grammatici. . . . . Claruit A.D. 1490. Bale et Pits, locis citatis."<sup>a</sup>

The identity of the name Galfridus will, I think, scarcely dispose us to accept the suggestion of the Bishop of St. Asaph as regards the marginal scribbling which he noticed in this Lincoln MS.; the name Starkey, not unknown in East Anglia, is more probably to be regarded as that of a former possessor of the volume than that of the author. Whatever may have been his patronymic, I think that we may confidently ascribe to the Dominican recluse of Lynn, Galfridus, designated, from his special studies in an age of very debased learning, "Grammaticus," the laborious achievement of the first English-Latin and Latin-English Dictionaries. No doubt can, I think, be entertained of his identity with the expounder of the "Equivoca" and the "Synonyma" of John de Garlandia, who is entitled "Magister Galfridus Anglicus" in the editions of those popular treatises printed by Pynson and W. de Worde.

The author describes with simple earnestness in his Preambulum the troubles of aspiring scholars, who, amidst the prevalent barbarism of his times, thirsted for knowledge like harts for the water-brooks, and in vain sought for guides, so that like wild asses they fainted in sobbing and sighs; according to the lament of the prophet, the young children ask bread, and no man breaketh it unto them! He "drew up for their use," as expressed by the Rev. J. E. B. Mayor, in his valuable Essays on early Lexicography, "a slight compendium, 'opus exile,' chiefly from the Catholicon, Campus Florum, and Dictionarium. The most ignorant calumniator of the middle ages could not speak of the poor recluse ('sub regula paupertatis astrictus') in more disparaging terms than he applies to himself. 'Rudis et inscius, plusque aptus discere quam docere,' he contents himself for the most part with abbreviating the works of earlier grammarians, occasionally seeking counsel from the mouth of his betters, but very rarely venturing to pronounce sentence in his own proper person. He arranges the English words in alphabetical order, first placing under every letter the nouns and other parts of speech except verbs, and then the verbs by themselves." The title of the work denoted its use; from its brevity it would be readily procured and consulted by all parvuli or clerici. Mr. Mayor proceeds as follows: "The preface ends in a strain which was natural to scholars who, having seldom any means of procuring books except by transcribing them with their own hand, and being at the mercy of any scribe who might wittingly or unwittingly travesty their most careful works, learnt to detest a blunder as worse than a crime: 'I humbly with prayers entreat all pedagogues, teachers, and masters, that when they have examined this little work, they will approve what may by God's assistance have been rightly written, and will piously correct and emend what is written ill or erringly; since humble grammarians and boys may look on this short volume as on a mirror, and find freely and immediately the common words which belong to the Latin tongue.'"<sup>a</sup>

Fortunate indeed had it been if the original conscientiously elaborated by Geoffrey's own hand had been preserved to our times. We should not have been exposed to manifold perplexities occasioned by vitiations of the text through the heedlessness of transcribers. In offering to students of our old language and literature the results of minute collation of all the known MSS. of his work, by which many corruptions of the text may be amended, I can only renew the simple appeal of the author, "ut, cum exile hoc opus perspexerint, quod Deo me juvante sit recte scriptum approbent, et quod male aut devie pie corrigant et emendent."

Scarcely inferior in interest to the Promptorium, as an aid to the student of fifteenth-century language and literature, is the Latin-English dictionary, the first work of that description, entitled Medulla Grammaticæ or Grammatices. The notices of the recluse of Lynn, to whom we are undoubtedly indebted for the Promptorium, would be incomplete without some account of the Medulla, and of such MSS. of that valuable compilation as I have been enabled to discover. The two works have been ascribed, with much probability, to the same author. I have, however, failed to discover any contemporary statement to that effect; the name of Galfridus, it is true, is found as that of the author in several MSS. of the Latin-English dictionary in question, but such entries are, I believe, by a later hand. This ascription may be solely on the authority of Bale, who gives, as before cited, among the writings of Galfridus Grammaticus, the following:—

“Medullam Grammatices, lib. i. Cernentibus sollicite clericorum.”

The Prologus of the Latin-English dictionary, the Ortus, printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1500, begins “Ut etenim multos,” &c. I have never found this preface in any MS.: the only prologue occurring in MSS. hereafter described of the dictionary entitled Medulla, of which I believe the Ortus to be a modified reproduction, begins “Hec est regula hujus libri.” See notices of these MSS., p. l. to liv. infra.

The second work attributed by Bishop Bale to Galfridus, under the title of Medulla Grammatices, seems to have been in fact the English-Latin dictionary or Promptorium, the prologue of which begins alike in the MSS. and in the printed copies with the phrase given by Bale—“Cernentibus sollicite clericorum.” But in the colophon of Pynson’s edition of 1499 we find—“Finit excellentissimum opus, &c. quod nuncupatur Medulla Grammaticæ.” See p. 539 infra. In Wynkyn de Worde’s edition the corresponding phrase is—“opus ... quod merito Medulla Grammaticæ apud nos, vel Paruulorum Promptuarium nuncupatur.” Hence doubtless, has arisen some discrepancy which it is desirable to point out, since Pits and the learned Bishop Tanner have followed Bale in ascribing to our author one dictionary (English-Latin) under a title which properly belongs to another.<sup>a</sup>

The MSS. of the Medulla are more numerous than those of the Prompto-

<sup>a</sup> It deserves notice that these authorities agree in ascribing the authorship of the “Hortus Vocabulorum” to Galfridus Grammaticus, and it will be remembered that Bale first published his account in 1548, about a century possibly after the recluse at Lynn brought his labors to completion. There can be little doubt that they contributed largely to that book, although his original compilation may have been amended and rium; they vary in their contents in a remarkable degree; it might indeed seem that each transcriber made such modifications of the text as pleased him, or that he engrafted upon it the additional words and explanatory glosses which he found inserted by any previous hand. The text also varies greatly from that of the Ortus printed by Wynkyn de Worde, a work of considerable rarity, in the compilation of which materials were undoubtedly derived largely from the Medulla, but with certain additions from other sources, such as the Breviloquus, the Cornucopia, probably the dictionary by Nicolas Perotti so entitled, and the Gemma Vocabulorum. It is difficult to account for the great variations to be noticed in MSS. of the Medulla and in the early Latin-English Dictionaries which I believe to be substantially the same as that work. None of those known to me can be assigned to an earlier date than the latter half of the fifteenth century. As an illustration of this remarkable want of conformity, I may offer the renderings of "Ciniſlo," a remarkable word which will be found in the Promptorium as the rendering of "Askysye" or askefise; p. 15, infra.<sup>a</sup> The principal variations which I have found are as follows:—

"Ciniſlo, a fyre blower, a yrene beter" (sic). (Harl. MS. 1,000.) "A feyre blowere." (Harl. MS. 2181.) "A aske bathe, s. qui sedet in cineribus, et calefactor ferri." (Harl. MS. 2,270) "A fire blower, and a heter of blode iren, or a axe wadelle." (Harl. MS. 2,257.) "An askfist or iren heter." (Add. MS. 24,640.) "Askebawe, qui s. sedet in cineribus, et calefactor ferri." (Canterbury MS.) "An aske fyse or irne eter." (MS. Coll. Phillipps, 8,244.) "A fyre blowere, an yryn hetere, an askefyce." (MS. ibid. No. 8,306.) "Qui flat in cinere, vel qui preparat pulverem muliebrem, angl' aske fyste a fyre blawer or a yrne hotter."

enlarged by some other hand from the works above enumerated, before its issue from the press of Wynkyn de Worde, in 1500.

* The reading in Harl. MS. 221 is Askysye or Askesye, but possibly the word may be more correctly Askefise; it was a term of reproach among the Northern nations, denoting an unwarlike fellow who stayed at home in the chimney-corner like a cat among the ashes. See Ihre, Lexic. Suio-Goth. v. Aska, and the Saga of Rolf, how the Askefis won the King's daughter to wife. A corresponding French word is given by Hollyband, "Cendrier, he that keepeth the chimney-corner, a sluggard," rendered likewise by Cotgrave "a sluggard, slowbacke, idlesbie, house dove, one that sits lurking in the chimney corner." The word may be preserved, as I am informed, in the name of a house in Lincolnshire, Askeſe Hall, near Spalding, once the abode of Maurice Johnson, but now usually written "Ayseough Fee Hall."

(Ortus, first edition, by W. de Worde, 1500.) “Qui flat in cinere vel qui preparat pulverem muliebrem, Anglice a fyre blower, or an yren hoter.” (Ortus, edit. 1509.)

At the close of this Preface will be found a list of MSS. of the Medulla Grammaticæ and of other Latin-English Dictionaries of the fifteenth century, which probably may be classed therewith. An account of the various editions of the Ortus Vocabulorum is there also given.

II. I proceed to offer some remarks on the sources from which the Latin words in the Promptorium were derived, according to the list given by the compiler. See p. 3, infra.

1. The first of the “auctores, ex quorum libris collecta sunt vocabula hujus libelli,” is the most ample and highly esteemed of mediæval dictionaries, the Catholicon or Summa of Johannes de Janua, or Januensis, de Balbis. It has been repeatedly printed, the earliest edition being the noble volume produced at Mayence in 1460, which was followed by another at Venice in 1487. According to Du Cange, the author, a native of Genoa in the thirteenth century, combined the works of Papias and Ugutio, and reproduced a dictionary largely augmented, “ex multis diversis doctorum texturis elaboratum atque contextum,” as stated in a colophon from which we learn that his labors were completed in the year 1286.<sup>a</sup> However severely this great work and also the treatises by John de Garlandia and other such writers are decried by Erasmus, in his lamentations regarding the degraded character of rudimental education at the commencement of the sixteenth century, the student of mediæval antiquities or of the literature of the period will find in the Catholicon an auxiliary rarely to be consulted without advantage and instruction.

2. Ugutio, Ugutio, or Hugo, a native of Pisa, was Bishop of Ferrara towards the close of the twelfth century. Ughelli supposes that he died about 1212.<sup>b</sup> The Elementarium compiled about A.D. 1053 by Papias appears to have supplied the groundwork of his dictionary, of which the design is thus set forth in the preface: “Opus divina favente gratia componere statuimus, in quo, præ aliis, vocabulorum significationes, significationum distinctiones, derivationum origines, etymologiarum assignationes, et interpretationum reperientur expositiones, quorum ignorantia Latinitas naturaliter indiga quadam doctorum pigritia non modicum coaretatur." Numerous MSS. of the Vocabularium of Uguitio exist, but it does not appear that it was ever printed.<sup>a</sup> It will be noticed that the compiler of the Promptorium cites not only the work in majori volumine, but also one in a metrical form designated Uguitio versificatus.<sup>b</sup>

3. Brito.—The treatise by William Brito, to which frequent reference is made by the compiler of the Promptorium, is probably his "Summa, sive opusculum difficultum vocabulorum Biblie," an explanatory Glossary of words occurring in Holy Writ, sometimes entitled "Lexicon sive Vocabularium Biblie," or, as described by Fabricius, "Vocabularius cum vocabulorum Hebraicorum in Bibliis occurrentium interpretatione Latina." Some account of this work may be found in Du Cange's Preface to his Glossary, § 49, edit. Henschel, t. i. p. 30, and Bandinius, Codd. Lat. t. iv. col. 213. The Summa is in prose, but it commences with some prefatory verses:—

Difficiles studeo partes, quas Biblia gestat, Pandere; sed nequeo latebras nisi qui manifestat Auxiliante Deo, &c.

<sup>a</sup> The following MSS. may be enumerated. In the Bodleian, Laud MS. 1334, 71, "Huicij Pisani Dictionarium Latinum;" and MS. Bodleji, 2486, 9. "Hugutionis Pisani Derivationes magnæ sive Dictionarium Etymologicum;" Cat. MSS. Angl. t. i. pp. 70, 129: "Hugonis, vel Hugutionis, episcopi Pisani derivationes magnæ," &c., Lambeth MS. 80: "Hugonis liber de significatione verborum, sive derivationes magnæ, opus valde prolixum," ibid. No. 129. See also Arundel MSS. in Brit. Mus. 127, 508, and 515, the latter being an abridgement. MSS. are also to be found in the Cathedral libraries at York and Durham; at Balliol College, Nos. 279, 298, and at Caius College, No. 459; Catal. by the Rev. J. J. Smith. In Add. MS. 11611 may be found "Tabula per alphabetum condita a fratre Lamberto de Pisis," an index of all words explained by Uguitio, with the indication of the primary words under which they occur, facilitating the use of the work.

<sup>b</sup> Possibly to be found in the Lambeth Library, MS. No. 502, f. 15, "Regulæ grammaticales versibus conclusæ." In some instances reference is made in the Promptorium both to the work "in majori volumine," and also in the versified form. It deserves notice, that, where the latter is cited, the reference is rarely to the letter which is the initial of the Latin word in question. Thus we find "Cleppyn or clenchnyn; tinnio; Ug. V. in S.—Heere bonde; vitta; Ug. V. in C.—Mete yevare; dapaticus; Ug. V. in A.—Mychare; erro; Ug. V. in P." &c.

Brito was, according to Pits, a native of Wales of ancient British race, a monk of the Franciscan order versed in the learning of his times, and his writings were highly in esteem in foreign lands: he died at Grimsby in 1356.<sup>a</sup> It does not appear that the Summa has been printed. Another treatise entitled Synonyma ascribed to Brito was, according to Fabricius, printed at Paris in 1508. MSS. of the Summa are to be found in the British Museum, Sloane MS. 3319; Add. MS. 10,350, from Heber's library; see also Lambeth MS. 190; MS. Coll. Ball. Oxon., xi.; and MSS. Univ. Libr. Cantabr., Catal. vol. iii., p. 451.

4. Mirivalensis in Campo Florum.—A large number of Latin words, including many of obscure and curious character,<sup>b</sup> are cited as derived from this work, for which I have made diligent search hitherto in vain. In the library of St. Peter's College, Cambridge, there is a treatise thus described; "No. 1748, 86. Liber cui tit. Campus florum. Pr. Fulcite me floribus. Observat ordinem Alphabeticum."<sup>c</sup> This treatise, however, consisting of short common-places from the fathers and canonists, has proved on examination wholly different from the Campus Florum used in the compilation of the Promptorium. I have failed equally in the endeavor to identify the place or monastery from which the name of the author may have been taken. The Cistercian Abbey of Mereval (de Mira Valle)

<sup>b</sup> It may be well to cite a few Latin words given on the authority of the Campus Florum; the following will be serviceable, in any future inquiry, for purposes of comparison, if any work thus entitled should be brought to light; it may have been known by some other title, and hence my search has been fruitless. "Appulmoce, dyschmete; pomacium. Astelle, a schydyd; teda. Babulle; pegma. Bane of a pley; coragium. Baselarde; sica. Caraway, herbe; carry, sic scribitur in campo florum. Hey benche; oreistra. Joppe or folte; joppus. Karde for wulle; campus florum dicit quod cardi sunt pectines ferrei. Kyptre of a welle; tela. Lullynge songe; fescennia. Murche, lytyll man; nanus. Parget or playster for wallys; gypsum. Renlys for mylke; coagulum. Sprete or quante; conta. Stacyonere; bibliopola. Wyylde fyrr; ignis Grecus." These words will show how varied the contents of the Campus Florum must have been.

<sup>c</sup> Catal. MSS. Angliæ, vol. ii. p. 149. The title was taken from the Canticles, and also because, as the author states, he had compiled the work "contemplacione venerabilis patris domini mei domini archiepiscopi Panormitani, videlicet domini Theobaldi de Ursinis de Campo Florum," to whom he had transmitted it for correction. In the University library, Cambridge, is a MS. treatise entitled "Pratum Florum," beginning "Grammaticæ flores presens liber insinuabit." XIV. cent., MS. 1619, f. 98. Catal. vol. iii. p. 240.

in Warwickshire was first suggested; there was a monastery in Champagne called Miravallis or Mureau, in the duchy of Bar; and a Cistercian convent near Milan also bore the name.<sup>a</sup>

5. Johannes de Garlandia in diccionario scolastico.—The writings of this author are of considerable interest to the antiquary, however debased may be the Latinity of his treatises, once among the best elementary auxiliaries for the instruction of youth. It is not without reason that Erasmus thus bursts forth in contempt of the complicated sophistries of the Schools. “Deum immortalem! quale seculum erat hoc quum magno apparatu disticha Joannis Garlandini adolescentibus operosis ac prolixis commentariis enarrabantur.” The curious information, however, preserved in the Dictionarius of John de Garlandia, sometimes called de Gallandia or Gerlandus, may induce us to overlook the imperfect erudition of the period. The work has been edited with care by M. Géraud in the “Collection de Documents inédits sur l’histoire de France,”<sup>b</sup> and subsequently by Mr. Thomas Wright in a valuable volume of Vocabularies edited by him, and published at the expense of Mr. Joseph Mayer.<sup>c</sup> It commences thus,—“Dictionarius dicitur libellus iste a dictionibus magis necessariis quas tenetur quilibet scolaris,” &c. The statements of writers on mediæval authors and literature are contradictory in regard to the period when John de Garlandia lived, and the country of which he was a native. M. Géraud came to the conclusion that he was born in France in the eleventh century; that he travelled across the seas, returned to his native country, and there died; he supposes that the Dictionarius was compiled towards the year 1200. In this opinion my learned friend André Pottier, in his notices of the MSS. in the Public Library at Rouen which are under his care, was disposed to concur. There is a MS. of the Dictionary in that collection, accompanied by other treatises by John de Garlandia, including his Liber Distigii mentioned hereafter. Tanner, however, and some other writers affirm that he was an Englishman, who studied at Oxford, and subsequently established himself in the University of Paris early in the thirteenth century; in 1229 he became a professor at Toulouse, but he returned to Paris, and probably died there soon after 1250. He dedicated his treatise "De mysteriis rerum que sunt in ecclesia," of which a notice will be found hereafter, to Fulke Basset, Bishop of London 1241-1259. Mr. Wright has entered more fully into the history of John de Garlandia in the Introduction to his poem De triumphis Ecclesie edited for the Roxburghe Club, and also in an introductory note in the edition of the Dictionarius above mentioned.<sup>a</sup> He expresses the conclusion, to which I had been likewise led to incline, that these treatises should be assigned to the early part of the thirteenth century.

The author of the Promptorium has drawn so largely upon these obscure relics of mediæval learning that the vexed questions connected with John de Garlandia, and the precise period when he wrote these grammatical treatises once so highly esteemed, are not devoid of interest. Upon this point of literary history, however, the evidence has been conclusively summed up by the Rev. J. E. B. Mayor in a dissertation in the Journal of Philology which I have already cited.<sup>b</sup> Mr. Mayor observes that "the patriotic attempt of Dom Rivet (Hist. Litt. de la France, viii. 83) to establish the French descent of Johannes de Garlandia has been defeated by the fairness of a later editor of that noble work, M. Victor le Clerc (ibid. xxi. 369), who has also proved that Johannes lived, not in the eleventh century, as Gérard maintained as late as 1837, but amid the intellectual stir of the thirteenth. For, in a poem entitled 'De Triumphis Ecclesiæ,' portions of which have been printed by Mr. Wright,<sup>c</sup> he thus at once acknowledges and repudiates his native land . . .

Another poem, 'De Mysteriis Ecclesiæ,' published entire by Otto, commemorates the death of that 'Gemma pudicitiae . . . flos philosophiæ, Aula decens morum, redolens velut area florum,' Alexander of Hales, and is dedicated to Fulco Bishop of London. Now the irrefragable doctor, as Johannes himself tells us, died in 1245, and Fulke Basset retained his see, spite of the need and greed of King and Pope, from 1244 to 1259. Again, the triumph of the church which Johannes commemorates at greatest length is the Albigenian crusade (De Triumphis Ecclesiæ, iv. v. vi.), and in his Dictionary he tells us that he saw at Toulouse, among other engines of war, that by which Simon de Montfort was killed in 1218." There can no longer, I apprehend, be any question as regards the period to which we should assign an author, in whose productions, trifling as their grammatical value may be, the antiquary will still find, and more particularly in his Dictionarius, a large amount of recondite information.

6. Commentarius Curialium.—This curious little work is found in a collection of treatises principally by John de Garlandia, to whom it is also there attributed, preserved in the Library of Caius College, Cambridge.<sup>a</sup> I acknowledge with pleasure the kindness of the Master and Fellows in entrusting to me that valuable MS., which has proved of no slight advantage in the present undertaking. The Commentarius, of which no other copy has come under my observation, consists of six leaves; it is written in double columns, in a small neat hand of the thirteenth century, with marginal explanations and interlinear glosses by a second scribe in paler ink. It commences,—“Commentarius liber iste curialium personarum et rerum et vocabulorum preorditur,” and ends as follows,—“Hec edita sunt parysius sub venerabili cancellario parysius Galtero de castello Theodorici, anno domini m°.cc°.40°. sexto gloriosum et admirabilem partum beate Marie Virginis demonstrante.” If, as appears most probable, this tract, written in the style and manner of the Dictionarius by John de Garlandia previously noticed, can be recognised with certainty as from his pen, this colophon and date at its close supply fresh and conclusive evidence in regard to the disputed question of the period when he wrote, and agree perfectly with the circumstances mentioned hereafter in regard to his work “de Mysteriis ecclesie,” and its dedication to Fulke, Bishop of London, in the first half of the thirteenth century. The Commentarius Curialium seems well deserving of being printed, as illustrative not only of language but of manners and customs, and of social life at that period. The text is moreover full of French words explanatory of Latin terms of which a considerable portion are found scattered through the pages of the Promptorium.

7. Libellus misteriorum qui dicitur Anglia que fulget (quo fulget, Prompt. Winch. MS.)—Among works attributed to John de Garlandia a treatise is mentioned by Bale, p. 153, on the authority of Bostonus Buriensis, entitled “Mysteriorum Ecclesiæ, lib. 1. Anglia quo tendis tua dum.” Pits, p. 184, gives the same line as the commencement of a work with the title thus slightly varied, “De mysteriis Ecclesiæ:” he mentions also a commentary upon it. Leyser includes it in his list of the writings of Garlande.<sup>a</sup> A copy of a metrical treatise with a similar title but commencing “Anglia quo fulget,” may be found in Cott. MS. Claudius A. viii. f. 204 b., concluding thus, “Lucida terribulum redolem campana sonora;” and there is also a copy in a collection of grammatical tracts chiefly by John de Garlandia in Caius College Library, Cambridge.<sup>b</sup> The prefatory lines commence thus:—

In the margin is written : " Domino F. episcopo London. Magister J. de Karlandia (sic) seipsum et opus suum de misteriis ecclesie." There are interlinear glosses as well as marginal comments by a later hand; over basis aurea in the third line is to be read "alludit nomini suo," namely Basset. This work is a mystical explanation in hexameter verse of rites of the church, vestments and appliances of sacred use, &c. The difference of opinion among writers on mediæval literature, as regards the time when John de Garlandia lived and the country of which he was a native, has been already noticed. The assertion of Pits, that he was born in England, has been followed by Fabricius, Moreri, and Du Cange; and, although the dedication of the poem which I have here noticed is doubtless insufficient evidence to prove that the friend of a bishop of London was himself an Englishman, yet it may suffice to show that the author was contemporary with a distinguished prelate of that see named Fulke, and none so named is found earlier than Fulke Basset, who was elected in 1241, and died in 1259.<sup>a</sup> It would thus appear that John de Garlandia lived in the thirteenth century, which the evidence previously noticed tends also to prove, and not in the early part of the eleventh century, as stated by the Benedictines in the Histoire Littéraire de la France.

8. Merarius.—In a volume of grammatical tracts mostly attributed to Johannes de Garlandia, preserved in the Library at Caius College, Cambridge, as already noticed, I find appended to the "Diccionarius noticed. Catalogue of MSS. in Caius College Library, by the Rev. J. J. Smith, p. 179. A copy among Archbishop Parker's MSS. C.C.C. Cant. is described by Nasmyth, "Carmen ad Fulconem Episcopum Londoniensem de Ritibus Ecclesiasticis."—MS. CL. No. 4.

<sup>a</sup> M. Géraud, Paris sous Philippe le Bel, Append. p. 583, adverts to this poem by John de Garlandia, but he observes that it is not known who the bishop in question was, his name being indicated only by the initial F. He is, however, identified by the gloss in the MS. above described. The argument that the author was born in France, because the name de Garlandia, possibly from a place so called in Brie, is French rather than English, does not prove that he was not a native of this country, or of a family established in England.

cum comento" by that author, a short tract with an elaborate gloss.<sup>a</sup> A second copy is also found in the same library, following the tract entitled Distigius or Distigium,<sup>b</sup> attributed to the same writer, as hereafter noticed. That little relic of barbarous Latinity, which seems suited rather to darken knowledge than to initiate the unlearned, may probably have been composed by John de Garlandia, although his name does not appear, and I have not succeeded in discovering the tract in question in any catalogue of his productions. It commences thus,—“Merarii nuper cintillanti jubare pannidensi rejecta diployde macellam ex bisso subuculam cum recino duntaxat influo oloserico.” The gloss or commentary gives the following explanation of the title of the work. “Merarii, etc. Hec meraria et hec merenda est comestio qui manducatur in meridie,” &c.<sup>c</sup> On comparing some of the Latin words that occur in the Promptorium with a reference to Merarius or to the Glossa Merarii, as the authority, I find them all in this treatise, which therefore is doubtless that thus cited. It should seem that Merarius signifies the noon-tide time of the day, when it was usual to partake of a “nunchion” or noon-meal. (See Nunmete, infra, p. 360.) Whether the title of the treatise, however, was intended to refer in any manner either to the light of mid-day, or to the timely nourishment then dispensed, I cannot venture to affirm. As a specimen of its almost enigmatical contents, the following paragraph may be cited:—“Arpaco hinc repente mihi pseudofania phalam effetavit in campitro machinatam, in projecto monobatem, in yperliminario diapennem.”

9. Distigius.—In one of the volumes in the Library of Caius College, Cambridge, entrusted to me as before mentioned by the Master and Fellows to aid my researches, I find, among grammatical writings by John de Garlandia and other writers, a treatise consisting of 42 hexameter lines thus entitled, “Opus istud dicitur Distigium, a dia, duo, et stigos, versus, quia in duobus versibus comprehendet autor totam sententiam proverbialem.” There are a voluminous gloss in Latin and a few interlinear explanations. It commences thus, “Cespitat (anglice, stumlyt) in phaleris ippus

<sup>c</sup> So also in the Ortus Vocabulorum I find these words: “Merarius, i. meridianus. —Merarius, est quidem liber.”

(i. equus) blattaque (i. purpura) supinus (i. superbus).<sup>a</sup> This MS. is probably of the close of the thirteenth century. There exist other MSS. of this tract, which has been attributed to John de Garlandia; it has been printed by Mr. Wright in the collection of vocabularies published by Mr. Mayer.<sup>b</sup> The text there given, accompanied by numerous English glosses, is taken from Harl. MS. 1002, fol. 113, sæc. xv., but the text is probably of earlier date. At the end is written, "explicit liber equus caballus;" and hence it may be conjectured that Distigius is the same treatise as that cited in the Promptorium as "liberequi." See p. xxxv. infra. This curious vocabulary contains a considerable proportion of words adopted from the Greek, and in one of the MSS. I find the following observation, "Intencio est quedam vocabula ex Grecis extorta provecis proferre, et etiam fatuis et stolidis qui volunt esse magistri antequam sciant."<sup>c</sup>

10. Robertus Kylwarbi.—Of this voluminous writer, described by Bale as "garrulus sopliista," ample notices have been given by writers who have treated of the eminent men and the literature of the thirteenth century.<sup>d</sup> He was a native of England, educated at Paris and Oxford;

he became Provincial of the Dominican Order in England; was nominated Archbishop of Canterbury by Gregory X. in 1272; resigned the see on being made a cardinal by Nicholas III. in 1278; and died shortly after at Viterbo, as it was alleged, by poison. Among his numerous works enumerated by Pits and Tanner there are several grammatical and other treatises which may have supplied materials to the compiler of the Promptorium, such as the "Tractatus de ortu scientiarum," of which copies exist in Cott. MS. Vitell. A. I., f. 173; in the Bodleian library among the Digby MSS.; in the college libraries of Merton and Balliol, and elsewhere. He wrote commentaries on Priscian's treatise De Constructione, on Donatus, and on various works of Aristotle.

11. Alexander Neccham.—A full account of the voluminous writings of Neckam or Neccham, one of the most erudite scholars of his time, is given by Leland, Pits, Tanner, and other writers on the literary history of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. He was a native of Hertfordshire, born at or near St. Alban's about A.D. 1157, and pursued his studies in the schools of France and Italy, where his learning was held in high estimation. In 1215 he became Abbot of Cirencester; he died at Worcester in 1217. His principal works were theological. He compiled also a treatise "De rerum naturis," a "Repertorium Vocabulorum," an "Elucidarium Bibliothecæ," explanatory of difficult words in the Scriptures; also a treatise entitled "Isagoge ad Artes." The first of these, namely "De naturis rerum libri duo priores," has recently been edited by Mr. Wright for the series of Chronicles and Memorials of Great Britain published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls. It was, however, as I believe, from the treatise "De nominibus Utensilium" of Alexander Neccham that the compiler of the Promptorium derived a large number of Latin words. That curious little work has been given by Mr. Wright, in the collection of Vocabularies to which I have already made frequent reference, from Cotton. MS. Titus D. xx., a copy written about the close of the thirteenth century, and accompanied by interlinear English glosses.<sup>a</sup> The text has been collated with two other MSS. in the Imperial Library at Paris.<sup>b</sup> There was a copy in the cathedral

<sup>b</sup> Among numerous words occurring in the Promptorium with references to Neccham, and likewise found in the treatise "De Utensilibus" given by Mr. Wright, may be cited, library at Worcester, where the author, who is said to have been an intimate friend of Sylvester de Evesham, bishop of that see, and to have died at the episcopal palace at Kemsey, was buried in the cloisters. His mutilated effigy is still pointed out. This manuscript is now unfortunately not to be found: there is a copy in the library at Caius College, Cambridge, another at St. Peter's College in the same University;<sup>a</sup> and at Oxford a valuable copy with a French gloss exists at St. John's College, MS. No. clxxviii. 23.

The works enumerated in the foregoing list, as the principal authorities consulted by the compiler of the Promptorium, were not, however, the only sources from which the materials of his dictionary were derived. It may be of some interest to collect the scattered notices that occur under various words, since they indicate not only the grammatical or other treatises with which the recluse friar of Lynn was conversant, but they may also serve to shew the resources of conventual libraries in the fifteenth century. Mr. Hingeston has pointed out, from the number of rare and valuable works referred to in Capgrave's Chronicle, how extensive a store of learning must have been treasured up in the library of the Austin Friars at Lynn,<sup>b</sup> and it is probable that the library of the neighbouring convent of the Dominicans was not less copiously provided. The works of Aristotle are repeatedly cited; thus under the word "Dysowre," p. 122, is found "Bomolochus," Aristotle's in Ethicis; the same treatise is cited under "Dullarde," p. 135, and, under "Deffe or dulle," p. 116, reference occurs to Aristotle "in politicis." Under "Telte," p. 488, is found a reference to "Egidius super rhetoricam Aristotelis." The "Historia Scholastica," doubtless the popular work of Peter Comestor, a celebrated theological writer of Troyes in the twelfth century, is cited under "Fyyr forke," p. 161, and "Prynce "Garbage of fowlys; entera, vel exta," p. 186 (compare Mr. Wright's edition, p. 97); "Jowpe, garment; jupa," p. 275 (Wright, p. 98); Latche or snekke; pessula," p. 283 (compare Wright, p. 110); "Perre, drynke; pirctum," p. 394 (compare Wright, p. 98).

<sup>c</sup> The word in Harl. MS. 221 is written Homolochus. Βαμλόχος, a low jester, is a word used by Aristotle, Ethics, N. 4, 8, 3, and also by Aristophanes. Compare Ortus Vocabulorum:—"Bomolochus, i. scurra (a brawler):—Bomolochia, i. scurrilitas."

of prestys," p. 413. The "Vitæ Patrum"<sup>a</sup> are given as the authority for the Latin words occurring under "Gylle, lytylle pot," p. 194. Reference will be found to the "Horologium divine sapiencie" under "Amuce of an hare," p. 11, probably the treatise with that title by the celebrated Dominican preacher and ascetic divine of the fourteenth century, Henry de Suson; it was translated into French and English, and was printed by Caxton. Pits, however, ascribes to John Wilton, a monk of Westminster, c. 1360, a treatise entitled "Horologium Sapientiæ," commencing "Sentite de Domino." The name of an author whom I have not succeeded in identifying occurs under "Cawdelle; caldellum," p. 64, where it is said "hoc nomen habetur in commentario Johannis de Gara." Under "Feest; agapes," p. 158, are found the following, "Nota, de Agape in Jure, distinctione xliij. Si quis; et Raymundus, lib. iii. tit. iv." The former of these is a reference to the first part of the Decretum of Gratian, of which several printed editions exist; the latter to the Summa by the Dominican Raimundus de Pennaforte, compiler of the Decretals. Again, under another word, "Frogge or froke, munkys abyte; flocus, in Jure, libro vj.;" p. 179, it is probable that we have a reference to the Decretals. References to "Greg' in dialog." deserve notice; the work in question being probably the Dialogues of St. Gregory the Great, of which several early translations exist. At p. 483 will be found "Swerd berare; spatarius, Greg' in dialog." and in the Winchester MS. "Schyppe, boote; carabus, secundum Greg' x. dialog." I may also here notice the following: "Matyn at the chesse; mato, ij. libro de tribus dietis, cap. ij.;"<sup>b</sup> and "Matynge at the chesse; matacio, in libro iij. de dominis, cap. ij.;" p. 239. Under "Leterone" we find a Latin term for a lectern or desk, discus, given as "secundum li. equi," possibly, as has been already suggested, the metrical vocabulary entitled "Liber Equus Caballus," given by Mr. Wright among the Vocabularies published <sup>a</sup> The "De Vitis SS. Patrum liber" has been attributed to St. Jerome, but hereon the learned have been much at variance. Oudin, t. i. p. 851. The work was doubtless, as Bellarmine and others have observed, compiled from several authors. These lives have been frequently printed; they were translated into several languages. A translation by Caxton from the French, finished, as the colophon states, on the last day of his life, was printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1495. Dibdin, Typog. Ant. vol. ii. p. 43.

<sup>b</sup> Mr. W. S. Walford, to whose valuable suggestions I have very often been indebted, has pointed out that among the books of Charles V. King of France, 1409, occurs a "Liber de tribus dietis," but there is no clue to what may have been the subject of it. See Bibliothèque Prototypographique, p. 81.

by Mr. Mayer.<sup>a</sup> Boetius is cited in the Winchester MS. under "Sokyngre Grownde," p. 463. The work may have been his treatise "De Consolatione Philosophica," or that "De disciplina scolarium." Fabr. Bibl. Lat. The import of the reference occurring as follows has been sought in vain.— "Damasyn, frute; coquinella, secundum Levasey;" p. 113; the citation of that authority here occurs only in the Winchester MS. "Hummyngre; reuma, secundum Levsay," p. 253; "Knast or gnaste of a kandel; emunctura, secundum Levsay," p. 277.<sup>b</sup> I have been unsuccessful also in identifying the author cited as Ricardus under the words "Cyndyr," p. 78, and "Wylke," p. 528; or the signification of the following reference found in the Winchester MS. only; "Sete for worthy menn; orcestra, vel orcistra, secundum cūde" (or cundys?).

It may deserve notice that Galfridus gives, as English words, "Caton," doubtless the Disticha attributed to Dionysius Cato, "Faceet," a popular supplement to that work, and "Donet," the grammar most in use in the middle ages, composed by Ælius Donatus in the fourth century. See the notes, s. v., pp. 63, 127. We find also several service-books, Antiphoner, Grail, Missal, "Poortos," namely the portiforium or breviary for a priest, &c.

The following word may not be undeserving of notice: "Seventene, septem decem, vel decem et septem secundum correcciones fratrum predicatorum," or, according to the reading of another MS. "Cevyntene, secundum nostram correccionem septem et decem." In this passage it is not quite clear what may be the meaning of the word correccio, whether the rule (disciplina) of the Order, or some emendation of the original MS. of the Promptorium remaining in the possession of the friars. The copies prove on collation to present numerous variations not merely in spelling, but in regard to words both English and Latin added or omitted, and moreover certain words are supplied by the text printed by Pynson which I have not found in any MS.

III. I will now enumerate the MSS. and editions of the work.

1. The MS. which has been selected as the Text of the present edition is the Harleian MS. No. 221. It is a small quarto of 205 leaves of parchment in excellent preservation. The writing, of which a fac-simile is given, is probably not much later than the date of the compilation; it is in two columns, and carefully executed, distinct, and remarkably uniform throughout. The leaves measure  $9\frac{3}{8}$  inches in height by  $6\frac{3}{4}$  in breadth. The first twelve are rubricated, the initial letter of each line being in red. The English words also are underlined with the same color. A few errors and omissions have been amended. Each quire of parchment has a checkword at the lower corner of its last leaf, and the leaves are numbered, the signatures running from A i to r, Arabic numerals being used here and also throughout the MS. A small portion is deficient, by some accidental oversight, namely in the verbs between Clyvyū and Cracehyū. This MS. was formerly in the possession of Sir Symonds D'Ewes, Bart. It is doubtless the same which is noticed by Bishop Tanner (Bibl. Brit. p. 305, published in 1748). On the reverse of the fly-leaf at the beginning of the MS. the following note is written, "This book belongs to Sir Symonds Dews Library, and is to be restored." I have been unable to ascertain whether this possessor of the volume was the distinguished statesman and antiquary of that name, compiler of the Journals of the Parliament in the reign of Elizabeth: he died in 1650. In the list of MSS. in the possession of his grandson, Sir Symonds D'Ewes, Bart. of Stow Langtoft Hall, Suffolk, who succeeded in 1685, I find "An ancient Latin-English Dictionary written about the year 1440," the volume probably now under consideration, but inadvertently described as Latin-English instead of English-Latin.<sup>a</sup> There can, however, be little doubt that the valuable library at Stow Langtoft, of which this MS. formed part, had been collected by the eminent scholar, the friend of Selden, Spelman, and Cotton.

On the fly-leaf at the beginning of the Harl. MS. is pasted a slip of paper, with the name probably of a former owner,—"liber hugonis barker."<sup>b</sup>

I may here repeat the observation previously made<sup>c</sup> that this valuable MS., although as I believe from internal evidence only a transcript, has been selected for the groundwork of the present edition, as supplying the earliest, most ample, and most correct text among the MSS. of the work which have come under my observation. The original by the author's hand has not been brought to light, and there are numerous indications of alterations in spelling and other minutiae by the transcriber. The age of the transcript, however, may entitle it to be considered as that which most faithfully represents the original text; it contains a much greater number of words than are found in any other MS. or in Pynson's and subsequent editions; in addition to this a synonym or explanatory phrase is frequently found in the Harl. MS., contributing to elucidate the signification of some archaism which in the other texts is comparatively obscure.

2. Fragment of a copy in Harl. MS. 2,274, from which a few various readings have been obtained; they are in each instance indicated by the number of the MS. It contains portions of the letters G. H. M. N. and R.; and more nearly resembles the text of Pynson's printed edition than any of the other MSS. The termination of the verbs is written -ynge, as in Grawntyng, &c.

3. MS. preserved in the Library of King's College, Cambridge (class mark, No. 8); a thin volume containing 75 leaves of parchment; dimensions 12 inches by 8 inches. The writing is in double columns, in a good legible hand of the latter part of the fifteenth century, and very uniform throughout the book. The initials at the beginning of each letter in the alphabetical arrangement are painted with bright opaque blue, and have rubricated marginal flourishes, as shown in the facsimile. On the reverse of the last leaf the donor is thus recorded, "Dedit Collegio Regali Sam. Thom<sup>as</sup> ibidem Socius 1684."<sup>a</sup> The name, probably, of a previous possessor is written on a fly-leaf at the beginning, "Rob't london," and repeated on the last leaf, in the same hand, "Rob't london nuper de Aldeby in Com. Norff. ar."<sup>b</sup> The names, "Thomas Wyndham," "Joh'es Buckenham," and "John Bayspoole," occur also in the volume.

<sup>a</sup> Samuel Thomas, possibly the donor of this book, was appointed prebendary of Wells, Aug. 3, 1681. His successor in the stall (Compton Bishop) was appointed in 1691. Le Neve, edit. Hardy.

<sup>b</sup> The family of this name lived, according to Blomefield (Hist. Norf. vol. viii. p. 4) at Aldby or Aldeburgh, and had a lease of the priory manor. He mentions three persons, in successive generations, living there about the sixteenth century and subsequently, each of whom bore the name of Robert London.

In the present edition all various readings and additions obtained by collation of this MS. are indicated by the letter (K).

4. MS. in the Chapter Library, Winchester Cathedral; on paper, consisting of 114 leaves; dimensions  $13\frac{1}{2}$  inches by 10 inches.<sup>a</sup> The writing is in double columns, in a bold clear hand without any rubrication. The text resembles that of Harl. MS. 221, but it is by no means identical; some words which occur in the other MSS. or in the edition printed by Pynson, but are not in the Harl. MS., being here found. The verbs from CLYVYN or ryvyn to COWRYN, inclusive, accidentally omitted in the Harl. MS., occur here, and they have been supplied in the present edition chiefly from this MS. The errors of the scribe are few and of slight importance; a few words are omitted, and some transposed. In regard to certain peculiarities in spelling, I noticed woke for oke, wold for old, &c.; awynsweryn, byyndyn, chawynce, dawynce, fesawynt, grawyntyn, parchemyyn, plyawynt, &c.; rygthe, myth, nygthe, wygthe; also hwy for why, hwat for what; an happel, hirkyn for irk, and the like. The p is often but not invariably used, and many words are written with th. This fine relic of the ancient conventual library contains the "Liber Catonis" with other tracts, and after the "Explicit" of several of these is written—"Q' M. W. Grene." It was in the possession of Thomas Sylkested, Prior of Winchester about 1498, a liberal benefactor to the fabric of the Cathedral, the friend of Bishop Fox, to whom he rendered assistance in founding Corpus Christi College, Oxford; he died in 1524. On a leaf of parchment at the beginning of the volume is written—"Liber T. Sylkested, prec. xij s. iiij d.," and lower on the page in a smaller hand—"Anno domini m.cccc. iiij<sup>xx</sup> xiiij" (1494). On the reverse of one of the fly leaves at the end is written—"Constat Thome Sylksted," to which is added in different ink "Supprioris," the book having possibly belonged to him previously to his election to that office. Also—"Iste liber est de domo Sancti Swythini Wynton. Qui enim alienaverit Anathema sit." On a second fly-leaf the record of its having belonged to the monastery of Winchester is repeated; also the date m.cccc. iiij<sup>xxv</sup>. (1485) the Anathema, and a few words scarcely legible, which may be read—"Ex providencia Willelmi Grene," whose name occurs repeatedly elsewhere as before noticed; he may have been either the scribe or the donor.

In the present edition all various readings and additions obtained by collation of this MS. are indicated by the letter (S). It is with grateful satisfaction that I would express my acknowledgment of the liberality of the Dean and Chapter in entrusting to me, through the friendly mediation of Mr. Vaux, a volume of such value, and from which I have derived much assistance in my undertaking.

5. MS. in the library of Sir Thomas Phillipps, Bart., collated, by his kind permission, at Middle Hill (No. 8306, Heber Library No. 1360). It is on paper, dimensions  $11\frac{2}{3}$  inches by  $8\frac{1}{4}$  inches. The writing is in double columns in a small neat hand of the close of the fifteenth century with rubricated initials; the English words are underlined with red. The Promptorium extends to p. 166. On the first column of p. 167 is written in red ink, "Explicit liber dictus Promtorius Paruulorum," &c. as in other MSS. and immediately after, "Brooke owyt yis Boke hoso wyssly loke." The name of this former owner, "Joh'es Broke," occurs repeatedly, also "Thomas Wade," and, in a handwriting of later date (? xvii. sæc.), "Henry Sherbrooke." On the second or right-hand column of p. 167 commences the Latin-English Dictionary entitled "Medulla Grammaticæ," and written apparently by the same scribe as the Promptorium. It is imperfect in several parts,<sup>a</sup> and ends with the word "Ticio, onis, a brond of fyre," p. 342.<sup>b</sup> In this MS. y is used instead of þ. A few peculiarities in spelling deserve notice, for instance, almyhty, bryth, flyht, feythtyn, lyth, syth, ryth, nyth, instead of almyghty, bryght, &c.; qwat, qwyl, qlyp, qlyth, &c. for what, whyle, whyppe, &c. The verbs sometimes terminate in -ug, thus, "Betydyng, happyng."

In the present edition all various readings and additions obtained by collation of this MS. are indicated by the letter (H).

6. MS. in the British Museum, Addit. MS. 22,556, formerly in the library of the late Mr. S. W. Singer, and obtained by purchase in 1858.<sup>c</sup>

It is on parchment, 106 leaves, dimensions  $10\frac{2}{3}$  inches by  $7\frac{1}{4}$  inches. The writing is of the close of the fifteenth century, in double columns, the initial letters marked with a yellow stain instead of rubrication, as is not uncommonly seen in English MSS. of the fifteenth century. This is not shown in the fac-simile. This MS. is unfortunately imperfect; it commences with the word "Bowntevousnesse." Of many leaves only fragments remain, and it ends abruptly at "Tryin a truthe be doom," the concluding line being the first of the second column on the reverse of the leaf, as if the scribe had discontinued his task; and on the blank space of the lower part of the page are several scribblings: "Sum Johannis Saulfi" (twice); a hare; a quaint pen sketch of a pedagogue, possibly John Saulfi, holding an open book in his left hand, and in his right a short staff or palmer for the correction of his scholars; also a squirrel, and other performances of boyish penmanship. This MS. is of considerable interest. It was unfortunately unknown to me until a great portion of the present edition had been printed off.

The various readings and additions obtained by a partial collation of this MS. are indicated by the letter (A). It will be observed that the collation has been carried out in the later part of the volume only.

It is possible that a MS. formerly in the library of "Abraam Seller . . . viri antiquitatum ecclesiasticarum peritissimi," may have been an imperfect copy of the Promptorium. It is described as a folio volume, "3,774, Dictionarium Anglo-Latinum, in pergamen. ante annos 200 scriptum, ἀκέφαλον καὶ μείουρον." Catal. MSS. Angliæ, tom. ii. p. 96; published in 1697.<sup>a</sup>

Having thus described the existing MSS. which I have succeeded in discovering, I have now to notice the editions issued by Pynson, Wynkyn de Worde, and Julian Notary, all of these being of the greatest rarity.

what source the MS. had come into his hands; on the first leaf are the class marks of some former possessor—L. 6. 26, and W. 7. The early portion is in a fragmentary state, until fo. 6, beginning with the word Candelere, after which the continuity is broken at intervals, until the letter T.

<sup>a</sup> Abraam or Abednego Seller was a writer of some note on matters ecclesiastical in his day. His chief works are "Remarques relating to the State of the Church of the first centuries," Lond. 1680; "History of Passive Obedience since the Reformation," &c Amst. 1689; "History of Self-Defence," &c. See Ant. Wood, Watt, and Lowndes. I have not succeeded in ascertaining what became of his library; some of his MSS. are in the library of the University of Cambridge.

The edition by Richard Pynson in 1499 is one of the most scarce productions of his press; probably, as Dibdin observes, he may have reprinted in subsequent years a volume which must have proved so extensively acceptable; no other impression of it, however, by that printer, who industriously prosecuted his art until 1529, is known to exist. The volume is a small folio of 115 leaves; there is no title page, the first page is blank, the prologue being on the reverse of the leaf. It commences thus:—

Cernentibus sollicite clericorum condiciones,” . . . and concludes, . . .

Sign. a. ii. “¶ Incipit liber quid dicitur Promptorium paruulorum siue clericorum.”

The signatures a and b have eight leaves each, the rest, to t inclusive, have only six. The book is printed in double columns; there are running titles or headings of the pages, “Nomina A—Verba A,” and so forth, throughout the alphabet, distinguishing nouns and other parts of speech from the verbs, respectively. On sign. t iii. there is the following colophon:—

In this colophon, here printed with the contracted words in extenso, two points of interest claim attention; the first is the change of title, the libellus, described in the prologue as “Promptorius puerorum” being here called “Medulla grammaticæ;” the second is the mention of the patrons through whose encouragement the costs of Pynson’s undertaking were defrayed. By similar notices in other books from his press we know that he received the like favors from Margaret, mother of Henry VII., from the Earl of Kent and other patrons of literature. Frederic Egmond may have been of an ancient race of the name in the Netherlands. Dibdin seems to have assumed that “post pascha” was part of the date, whereas from the precision with which this is stated such can hardly be the case. He speaks of Frederic and Peter as if both were of the family of Egmond. (Typ. Ant. vol. ii. Prelim. Obz. p. vii.) We find about the time in question a distinguished person of that family, possibly the patron of Pynson, Frederic, son of William IV. Count of Egmond. In 1472 he received from his uncle the Duke of Gueldres the lordship of Buren; he was named governor of Utrecht by the Archduke Maximilian in 1492; two years later Buren was raised to a County in reward of his services; he died in 1500.<sup>a</sup> I have, however, sought in vain to trace a connection between this personage and England; we learn from Pontanus that he was educated at the University of Paris, and it may therefore be presumed that he retained some taste for literature. There was a Peter, an illegitimate brother of his father, who might have been living at that time; what was his surname does not appear. Had these persons, however, been Pynson's patrons on this occasion, the nobility of the former would surely have been in some way mentioned, instead of the word "virtuosi" being applied to both. It may be more probable that these patrons were either merchants or booksellers; in the latter case the work must have been printed for them as a trade speculation. Panzer, in his Annales Typographici, has perhaps somewhat too hastily placed the names of Frederic Egmond and Peter Post pascha in one of his lists of printers (that arranged by their Christian names), probably on the authority of this colophon, as no other mention of either is known in connection with typography except that, as I have been informed by Mr. Winter Jones, a Frederic de Egmont appears in the colophon of a Sarum missal printed at Venice in 1494, "jussu et impensis præstantissimorum virorum Friderici de Egmont ac Gerrardi Barrevelt: impressum per Joannem de Hertzog de Landoia." (Panzer, vol. iii. p. 358.) Mr. Winter Jones considers that the designations virtuosus, præstantissimus, and the like, do not indicate persons of high rank.

On the reverse of the last leaf is Pynson's device, No. 4, Herbert Typ. Ant., No. 5, Dibdin. A more minute account of this rare volume may be found in the Typographical Antiquities.<sup>a</sup> It was described by Herbert from a copy in Dr. Hunter's library at Glasgow. Five copies only have been seen by me; one of these, in the Althorp Library and pronounced "sound and desirable" by Dibdin, was made perfect, as he informs us, by the acquisition of two copies at the sale of the library of Mr. Lloyd of Wygfair in 1817; in the Public Library at Cambridge there is a good copy, in which I found the MS. note, before mentioned, "Autor hujus operis fuit Galfridus Grammaticus dictus frater Ordinis S. Dominici;"<sup>b</sup> a third, in fine condition, is in the Bodleian; the fourth, in the Royal Library in the British Museum, was in the possession of James West, President of the Royal Society;<sup>c</sup> at the sale of his library in 1773 it was purchased for George III. for 2*l.* 6*s.*;<sup>d</sup> the fifth is in the Grenville library.<sup>e</sup>

The numerous various readings and additions both of English and Latin words obtained from Pynson's edition are indicated by the initial (P).

Several editions of the Promptorium issued from the press of Wynkyn de Worde, in small quarto form; copies in fine condition are scarcely less rare than those printed by Pynson. Notices are to be found in bibliographical works of editions in 1510, 1512, 1516, 1518, 1519(?), 1522, and 1528;<sup>f</sup> of these I have been able to examine copies in a few instances

<sup>c</sup> See West's Catalogue, p. 54. The leaves measure slightly over 10½ inches in height by 8½ in width; the dimensions of the copy in the King's Library, British Museum, are 10⅞ by 7½ in.; of that in the Grenville library, 10⅝ in height.

<sup>d</sup> At the beginning of this volume a leaf printed by Pynson is bound in, unnoticed by bibliographers; it is a formula of an indulgence granted by Julius II. and dated 1508, with a blank for the name of the person to whom it might be granted, and purports to be issued by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of St. David's, the Pope's Commissaries general, to authorise the appointment, by the person for whose benefit it was intended, of a confessor, who might grant absolution of sins, with exception of some which are specified, including exportation of arms to the infidels and importation of alum from them. It is printed Archæol. Journal, vol. xvii. p. 250.

only; in those which I have seen I perceived no essential variations in the text. A copy of that of 1516, formerly in Heber's library and obtained by Sir Frederic Madden in 1836, has been, among many kindnesses which I have received at his hands, entrusted for my use throughout the preparation of this volume.<sup>a</sup> Occasionally the Latin-English dictionary, Ortus Vocabulorum, printed by the same printer and in the like form, is found bound up with the Promptorium for the convenience of students. Dibdin remarks that Wynkyn de Worde's Promptuarium Parvulorum was an abridgment of the dictionary of which the editio princeps had issued from Pynson's press with the title "Promptorius puerorum"; the omissions are principally, however, of some portions of the Latin explanations, and of references to authorities, whilst occasionally English synonyms, &c. are added in the smaller volume. The variations in the title may be without any material significance. The following brief description of this rare book will here suffice.<sup>b</sup>

The volume consists of 69 leaves, sign. A. ij. to M. iij.; it is printed in double columns, with running titles distinguishing the Nomina from the Verba, as in Pynson's edition.

Title—"Promptuarium parvulorum clericorum: quod apud nos Medulla grammatice appellatur. Scolasticis quam maxime necessarium. Impresum Londoniis per wynandum de worde hac in vrbe in parochia sancte Brigide (in the fletestrete) ad signum solis commorantem." On the title is introduced the well-known wood-cut device used by Wynkyn de Worde, in 4. de 70 ff., réimpr. en 1522 et en 1528." I am not aware on what authority this mention of any edition without date is made. The Ortus Vocabulorum having been printed by W. de Worde in 1500, as hereafter noticed, it may be supposed that he likewise produced an edition of the Promptorium about the same period as a convenient accompaniment. None has been found earlier than the edition of 1510, which is described by Dibdin as the first from that press. He mentions a fine copy in the late Mr. Roger Wilbraham's library.

composed of the sun and stars, and the initials W C (William Caxton) with interlaced Arabic numerals 74; at the bottom are a greyhound, sagittarius, and the name "Wynkyn de Worde" on a scroll. On the reverse—"¶ Incipit prologus in libellum qui dicitur promptuarium.—Cernentibus sollicite clericorum," &c. as in Pynson's edition before described, and also, a few various readings excepted, in the MSS.; see p. 1, infra. On the second leaf, sign. A. ij., commence "Nomina A.—¶ Incipit liber qui dicitur Promptuarium paruulorum siue clericorum." On the last leaf, recto, we find, after the verbs commencing with Y, a note and two distiches relating to the conjugations of verbs, to which immediately succeed a notice "Ad lectorem.—¶ And yf ye can not fynde a laten worde," &c. as given p. 540, infra, and the colophon "¶ Ad laudem et honorem omnipotentis dei et intemerate genitricis eius finit excellentissimum opus scolasticis anglie quam maxime necessarium. quod merito medulla grammatice apud nos vel paruulorum promptuarium nuncupatur. Impressum Londoniis per wynandum de worde in vico anglie (the flete strete) appellato sub solis intersignio commorantem. Anno domini m.ccccc.xvi. die vero v. mensis Septembris."<sup>a</sup>

Besides the numerous editions by Wynkyn de Worde in small quarto the Promptorium was printed in 1508 by Julian Notary in the same conveniently portable form, suited for the requirements of students. A single copy is known; it is preserved in the library of the late Right Hon. Thomas Grenville, now in the British Museum.<sup>b</sup> I cannot refrain from grateful acknowledgment of his liberal courtesy in entrusting to me this and also other precious volumes, from which I have derived no slight advantage. This edition is mentioned by Ames, but Mr. Grenville observed, adverting to the volume in his own possession, "I do not get trace of any other copy of it." The volume consists of 73 leaves. The text appears to follow that given by Wynkyn de Worde; the pages are printed in double columns, sign.

<sup>a</sup> It may deserve mention that the verbs are mostly printed with the termination yn or en; in a few instances, however, with a final e, as "agyne, senco; seyne, dico; atachyne," &c. or ynge, as "pargettynge walles, gipso; poynytynge, or portrayen, pingo;" and not unfrequently the peculiar form of the A.-Saxon gerundial infinitive, followed in the MSS. of the Promptorium (see p. xlvi., infra) is laid aside; for instance we find in W. de Worde's edition "amende, bende bowes, consent," &c. The words written in the MSS. with ȝ, and so printed by Pynson, are printed with y.

a ii. to a iii. On the title f. 1, "Promptorium paruulorum clericorum," &c. as in W. de Worde's edition before described, a woodcut is introduced portraying the author seated at a desk. On the reverse is the prologue, "Cernentibus," &c. On f. 2 commence the "Nomina A.—Incipit liber qui dicitur Promptorium paruulorum sive clericorum." At the end is the colophon, "Ad tandem, &c. Impressum per egregium Julianum notarium Impressorem commorantem extra temple barre sub Intersignio Sanctorum trium regum, &c. Anno domini millesimo CCCCC. Octauo xii. die Augusti." On the reverse is a woodcut measuring  $5\frac{1}{2}$  inches by 3 inches, being the device of the printer, a tree to which is appended a helm and an escutcheon charged with Julian's mark and initials. Around the tree are animals, birds, a butterfly, &c.<sup>a</sup>

A few various readings obtained from the editions by Wynkyu de Worde and Julian Notary are indicated in the present work by the initials (W) and (J) respectively.

I have now described, with minuteness of detail which, I fear, some may regard as tedious, all the MSS. and printed texts of the Promptorium known to me; and these have been collated in the preparation of the present edition. On a former occasion I stated the grounds of preference which influenced me in selecting the Harleian MS. 221 as the groundwork and text of the present edition, and I pointed out that all additions are distinguished from the text by being placed within brackets with the authority for their introduction, each word or various reading being followed by an initial indicating the source whence it is derived.

The contractions have been printed in extenso, with a few exceptions where any doubt could arise; thus the letter h is found with the transverse stroke usually indicating an e, but accompanied also by that letter, as for instance, in the words “dethe, tethe.” Although probably redundant, or merely an accidental error, the contraction has been printed as in the MS. The chief difficulty has however arisen from the frequent use of  $\bar{m}$  and  $\bar{n}$ , the latter especially in the verbs, with a prolongation of the last stroke of the letter in each instance. It should be observed, that in early typography these letters are not uncommonly found with the like peculiarity; it is believed that, occasionally, in writing of the fifteenth century this elongated minim may denote a mute final e, and, accordingly, it has been thus indicated —m', n', or  $\bar{m}'$ ,  $\bar{n}'$ , leaving the decision in questionable cases to those who may take interest in analysing the unsettled orthography of the period. Whilst, however, there can be little doubt that these terminal contractions have the power of mme, or nne, respectively, the anomalies which occur have induced me to retain them, and especially on account of the peculiarity in the verbs, which here claims notice.

It is worthy of remark that, though the verbs in the infinitive mood at the time when this work was compiled were in general no longer written with the final “n” of the Anglo-Saxon infinitive, they are here found ending in “yn, yñ, yñ', yng, en, eñ, eñ', on, ðne, in.” Those in “yn, en, on, and in” may possibly represent the Anglo-Saxon infinitive in “an,” but those in “yñ, yñ', yn', yng, eñ, eñ', ðne,” should seem to represent the Anglo-Saxon gerundial infinitive in “anne” or “enne.” On this subject the following observations of Professor Bain may not be deemed out of place:—

“In Anglo-Saxon the infinitive was formed by a suffix, and had cases like a noun. Nom. and acc. ‘writ-an,’ to write; dat. ‘to writ-ann-e,’ for writing. This last case had the meaning of purpose, and corresponded to what is now called the gerund. The simple form ‘writ-an’ was the same as our infinitive. When the case-endings, ‘an,’ ‘anne,’ were lost, the sign ‘to’ remained, and, not only so, but was erroneously prefixed to the other cases of the infinitive, instead of being confined to the dative or gerund case. By this mistake we have the same form for both applications.

“Farther, the form ‘writ-an’ changed in another direction. The termination ‘an’ became first ‘en’ and then ‘ing,’ thus producing the form ‘writing’ as an infinitive form, which explains our having an infinitive and a gerund in 'ing.' This change seems to have been facilitated by the existence of a class of abstract nouns in 'ing' (Anglo-Saxon ung), which by their nature are nearly allied to the infinitive.

"To increase the confusion still farther, the imperfect participle originally ending in 'ende,' 'ande,'—'writende,'—became a form in 'ing.' Thus the same ending in English represents four different verbal endings in Anglo-Saxon: the infinitive, the infinitive of purpose (gerund), the verbal noun, and the participle."<sup>a</sup>

It will be seen that, although the letter þ should seem to have been fully recognised, and it takes in the alphabetical arrangement the penultimate place assigned to it in the Anglo-Saxon alphabet, yet not unfrequently, through inadvertence or transitional orthography, the scribe has written 'th,' whilst in other words the proper character is represented, as it was generally in the following century, by a y. Thus we find "Blo erye, p. 40; Erye, or erthe; Eryyn, or of the erthe," p. 141 infra, and the like.<sup>b</sup>

It has been suggested that a list of the principal MSS. and printed authorities, mediæval vocabularies, glossarial and grammatical compilations, with many rare works which throw light on the language of the period, would prove acceptable. The enumeration here appended includes chiefly MSS. and printed works of reference from which I have drawn materials for the notes. With these will be found, however, some not thus cited, but which are of essential interest to the student of the English literature and archaisms of the fifteenth and the sixteenth centuries.

NOTICES OF GLOSSARIES, VOCABULARIES, AND OTHER WORKS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND OF MEDIEVAL LATINITY, AND USED, FOR THE MOST PART, IN THIS EDITION OF THE PROMPTORIUM.

I. MEDULLA GRAMMATICÆ OR GRAMMATICES.—This is the earliest Latin-English Dictionary known to me, and it is supposed to have been compiled by the author of the Promptorium. On this account, and also in consideration of its value to the student of the language of the period, I have thought it desirable to give a somewhat detailed description of the MSS. that I have been able to discover, all of them being of the later half of the fifteenth century, and including those in which, as previously stated, very great modifications of the text will be found, although, as on careful examination I have been led to suppose, they are substantially identical with the Medulla and may properly be classed with it. See p. xxii.

1. I have not met with any copy of earlier date than a MS. in my own possession, obtained about 1841 from the late Mr. Rodd. It is a small folio, containing 116 leaves of parchment, written in double columns very legibly by two different hands; the initials are rubricated. There is a prologue commencing thus:—"Hec est regula generalis pro toto libro. Omnia nomina, verbalia, et participia habent significationem verborum a quibus descendunt secundum eorum formam et analogiam, &c.—Fructum grammatice pueris do sub breuitate. Incipit liber intitulatus Medulla grammatice." The dictionary then begins with—"Alma .i. virgo abscondita vel absconsio virginittatis," and concludes—"Zonigogo, as, to gyrd vp.—Explicit Medulla Grammatice." The date of this MS., which is in excellent preservation and in the original wooden boards covered with leather, may be about 1460,<sup>a</sup>

<sup>a</sup> On the first of three leaves of parchment bound in at the beginning is written, in a hand contemporary with the MS., "Brother Wylliam Barker I pray youe lett thys booke be bounde at the vtmoste by myddyll lent and my brother shalle pay for the hyndynge;"

2. MS. in the Library of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, shelf-mark D. 2; it was entrusted to me by their kind permission through the request of Sir Henry Ellis, to whom I acknowledge with pleasure my frequent obligations. It is written on paper in a small clear hand, in double columns, with initials in blue and red; the English words also are in red. It begins with the short prologue above noticed, but, part of the leaf being torn away, the first lines are mutilated; this prologue ends thus—"Et sic propter vocabulorum copiam liber iste Medulla gramatice intitulator." This MS. is in the original stamped binding with boards, probably of oak; it is doubtless the same which occurs in the list of MSS. at Canterbury Cathedral about 1697, as "Dictionarium dictum Medulla Grammaticæ."<sup>a</sup> This venerable relic of fifteenth-century learning has been regarded with special interest on account of the addition of numerous Anglo-Saxon words, as supposed, by Somner; the MS. of whose Anglo-Saxon Dictionary is in the Canterbury Library. From the manner, however, in which the Anglo-Saxon words are given, it may be inferred that they were, at least in part, taken from some Vocabulary in Somner's possession not his own compilation. The English portion is full, and contains curious archaisms, including a considerable proportion of words noticeable as retained in North-country dialects.<sup>b</sup>

3. Harl. MS. 1000. An imperfect copy, ending with the words "Stamen est filum tele or warpe." On paper; written in a neat hand; late fifteenth century; with rubrications.

4. Harl. MS. 1738. The Medalla in a very abridged form, in a clear on the reverse is rudely sketched with the pen Our Lord rising from the Sepulchre. On the third leaf, v<sup>o</sup>. are two short Latin poems in hexameters, the first beginning thus: "Sicce tam erebris frustra commentibus anglos;" the second: "Conveniunt gallos erebris conventibus angli." At the end: "Thys ys Rycheard . . . ys boke." It may deserve mention that after certain words of ill omen the sign of the cross is found, thus: Diabolus, the deucl. ✠ Demon, the deucl. ✠ Dis, the deucl. ✠ Comicius, the fallinge eucl. ✠ Epilencia, the fallinge eucl. ✠ Febricito, to haue the feuerus. ✠ Genetarius, that vseth hore hous. ✠ I have noticed occasionally a similar practice in other MSS. of the period.

legible hand, on parchment and paper mixed; imperfect. At the beginning is the prologue, "Hec est regula," as above; at the end, "Explicit Medulla Gramatice." Late fifteenth century.

5. Harl. MS. 2181. Another copy in abridged form, carelessly written on parchment; late fifteenth century.

6. Harl. MS. 2257. A neatly written MS. The text seems to resemble that of the Ortus Vocabulorum, but it contains much that is not found in that book, nor in the Medulla in its ordinary form; possibly an abridgement of this dictionary. This is perhaps the most valuable MS. of its kind in the British Museum, but it is unfortunately imperfect. It commences with the word "Boletus est genus fungi," and ends with "Zona."

7. Harl. MS. 2270. Attributed in Catal. Harl. MSS. vol. ii. p. 635, to Galfridus Grammaticus, and on the first leaf is written, but not by a contemporary hand,—"Medulla Grammaticæ Galfridi." On paper; beginning "Hec est regula generalis," &c. The first word in the dictionary is "Alma;" the last is "Zozinaus . . . Explicit Medulla Gramatice Noviter."

8. Harl. MS. 6514. Imperfect; the explanations in Latin are given more fully than in some other copies.

9. Add. MS. in Brit. Mus. 24,640. This copy, in small folio, written on parchment, is unfortunately imperfect at the beginning and the end.<sup>a</sup> It is otherwise in fine condition, written in a neat legible hand; probably not much later than the middle of the fifteenth century. There are plain rubricated initial letters; and some marginal additions occur which seem to be by a nearly contemporary hand. It begins with the word "Abhominarium," and the concluding word is "Hec mantica, a male." It was purchased from Mr. J. O. Halliwell in May, 1862, and, as stated in a note written by his hand, it had been presented to him by Mr. Hunt of Stratford-on-Avon.<sup>b</sup>

Bellum Salopie fuit in Mag. nocte marie.

The fatal battle of Shrewsbury was fought on July 23, 1403; the festival of St. Mary Magdalene here referred to being July 22.

<sup>b</sup> The entry by Mr. Halliwell is as follows: "This MS. was given to me by Mr. W. O. Hunt of Stratford on Avon, April 23 (Shakespeare's birthday) 1862. I accepted it on the condition that I was to be at liberty to sell it, adding the proceeds to the Shakespeare fund.—J. O. H."

10. MS. in the Library of St. John's College, Cambridge, thus described in the Catalogue by the Rev. Morgan Cowie published by the Cambridge Antiquarian Society, 1842, 4to. p. 30:—"C. 22. Medulla Grammatices, 4to. MS. vellum and paper, principally the latter; with date in the same writing as the MS. 1468. It has the name 'William Jenour,' but this seems to be the name of the owner. It is a Latin Dictionary; the explanation of the words in Latin." This is one of the MSS. presented to the college by Thomas Earl of Southampton; it is stated that they were purchased from Mr. William Crashawe, brother of the poet, a fellow of St. John's admitted 1593.

11. MS. in the Pepysian Library, Cambridge, erroneously described amongst Pepys' MSS., Catal. MSS. Angliæ, tom. ii. p. 209, as "Dictionarium Anglo-Lat. written about A.D. 1450, fol." It is, however, a Latin-English Dictionary, apparently a variety of the Medulla.

12. MS. in the Library at Lincoln Cathedral, written on parchment in double column with numerous marginal additions. It consists of 146 pages. At the end is written, "Explicit Medulla Grammatices." A Latin-English vocabulary of 79 pages and three other works are bound up in the volume, the last of these being a "Liber Hymnorum" attributed to Galfridus, the author of the Promptorium. On a fly-leaf at the beginning is written "Gabridus (sic for Galfridus) Grammaticus author Anglus vixit circa A.D. 1490." This MS. has been cited by Bishop Tanner, Bibl. Brit. Hib. p. 305, as an English-Latin Dictionary, namely the "Promptuarium," of which he mentions the MS. in Sir Symonds d'Ewes' library (now Harl. MS. 221), and the edition by Pynson 1499. By the courtesy of the Rev. G. F. Apthorp I have been enabled to ascertain the real description of this volume, which is in good preservation.<sup>a</sup> The shelf-mark was formerly H 35, altered in 1858, when the library was rearranged, to A 3, 15.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>b</sup> Sir Frederic Madden has pointed out Bishop Tanner's original notes regarding the Lincoln MSS., as given in his voluminous collections now in the British Museum, and occurring in Add. MS. 6261, ff. 143, 171. As before mentioned, I have little doubt that the slight error in the learned Bishop's account of the MS. above described may have arisen from the title of "Medulla" being occasionally given to the Promptorium in the printed editions.

13. MS. in the possession of Sir Thomas Phillipps, Bart. No. 8244, formerly in Heber's library, No. 1020; imperfect, on paper. It contains many English words; the last word is "Vespilio."

14. MS. in the same collection as the last. No. 8306. Bound up with a transcript of the Promptorium described p. xl. supra. The two dictionaries appear to have been written by the same hand. The Medulla begins on p. 167. It is imperfect in several parts, and ends with "Ticio, a brond of fyre," p. 342. On paper. From Heber's library, No. 1360.

15. MS. in the Library of King Edward's Grammar School at Shrewsbury. "Incipit liber intitulatus Medulla gramatiee, v' Fructum gramatiee qu' medullam de breinitate." The shelf mark is X. 29.

16. MS. in the library of the Earl of Leicester at Holkham, Norfolk. It is cited by Sir Frederic Madden in his glossary to Havelok, edited by him for the Roxburghe Club in 1828, as a Latin-English vocabulary of the middle of the fifteenth century, and substantially the same as the Ortus Vocabulorum.<sup>a</sup> Chiefly on paper, partly on vellum. Its resemblance to the Medulla appears by extracts, for which I am indebted to the Rev. R. Collyer, Hon. Canon of Norwich.

17. In the enumeration "Librorum MSS. Henrici Worseley de Hospitio Lincolniensi apud Londinium," c. 1697, occurs "No. 6914.66; Medulla Grammaticæ sive Dictionarium Latino-Anglicum." Catal. MSS. Angliæ, tom. ii. p. 213. I have not been able to trace where this copy may now be preserved.<sup>b</sup>

II. Ortus Vocabulorum.—The first Latin-English Dictionary printed in this country; in great measure, as it would appear, based upon the Medulla

<sup>a</sup> The name of "Sire John Mendames," parson of "Bromenstroe" (Brunsthorp) occurring in this MS., has been supposed to be that of the writer, but it is more probably the name of a former owner of the book. In the list of incumbents of Brunsthorp John Mendham occurs. He was collated in 1529, and resigned the preferment in 1532. Blomefield's Hist. of Norf. vol. vii. p. 7.

<sup>b</sup> There existed formerly a MS. in the Chapter Library at Exeter Cathedral, thus noticed in the brief catalogue given in Catal. MSS. Angliæ, tom. ii. p. 55. "2057-3, Dictionarium seu Glossarium Latinum, mutilum." This MS. which, from information formerly received, I had hoped might prove to be a copy of the Medulla, is not to be found, as I am assured by Mr. Charles Tucker, after careful search in the depositories of the Chapter. It is not mentioned in the short enumeration of MSS. at Exeter in 1752. See Dr. Oliver's Lives of the Bishops of Exeter, App. p. 376.

Grammaticæ last described, but with considerable modifications and additions from other sources. Although comparatively of more frequent occurrence than the Promptorium, it is a book of great rarity. The earliest edition hitherto noticed is that printed in 1500 by Wynkyn de Worde in small folio, ranging with the editio princeps of the Promptorium issued from the press of Pynson in the previous year. It is indeed probable that it may have been intended to supply an accompaniment to that Dictionary. This rare editio princeps of the Ortus has not been carefully described; the imperfect mention by Dibdin would lead us to suppose that, having never examined a copy, he had relied on the brief notice by Herbert chiefly derived from the Harleian Catalogue, in which two copies are enumerated, Nos. 5213, 5304; I have been unable to ascertain where these may now be found.<sup>a</sup> There is, however, a copy of this first edition among the books, chiefly MSS., bequeathed by Junius to the Bodleian; it is thus described in Tanner's Catalogue of that precious lexicographical collection.—“Hortus Vocabulorum, Impr. Lond. 1500, per Wynkyn de Worde, interspersis Cl. Junii notis.” Catal. MSS. Angliæ, t. i. p. 251. The following description has been taken from a fine copy of this edition in the British Museum, in the Grenville Library.

Fo. 1 recto.—“¶ Ortus. Vocabulorum”—the lower portion of the page being blank.

Fo. 1 verso.—“¶ Prologus in librum qui ortus vocabulorum dicitur feliciter incipit.”

<sup>a</sup> Herbert, Typ. Ant., vol. i. p. 136, Dibdin, vol. ii. p. 88. It is described by the last-named author as in quarto, like the subsequent editions by W. de Worde, instead of folio.

The dictionary commences on fo. 2, in two columns, sign. A ij. to QQ iij., preceded by the leaf forming the title. The whole work consists of 266 leaves, measuring  $10\frac{3}{8}$  by  $7\frac{1}{2}$  inches. There are running headings—"A ante B" and so forth: each of the first six pages has also at the top, in the middle of the page, the word "Vocabulum," and the six following have "Ortus" (twice printed "Oortus"); after these, this heading is discontinued.

On fo. 266 recto, the dictionary concludes in the second column with the word "Zucara re. quedam species. anglice sugere;" after which is the following colophon:—

"Adest iste studiosissime lector opusculi finis quod non minus preceptoribus vt vocabulorum significaciones memorie commendat quam scolasticis ceterisque studiosis eas ignorantibus conducet. omnium enim vocabulorum significaciones (sic) que in Catholicon Breuiloquo<sup>a</sup> Cornucopia<sup>b</sup> aut Medulla grammaticæ ponuntur continet. quum igitur summa diligentia sit collectum vigilantique studio correctum vt magis in lucem prodiret ipsum a viris studiosis comparandum esse constat. Per virum laudabilem ciuem prouidum magistrum Winandum de worde prope celeberrimum monasterium quod Westmynstre appellatur. Anno incarnationis dominice. m.cccc. impressum."

Under this colophon there is a small woodcut of the device of Wynkyn de Worde, being that given among the devices of that printer, with the initials of Caxton and the Arabic numerals 74, Dibd. Typ. Ant., vol. ii. p. 30. No. II.<sup>c</sup> This cut measures  $1\frac{1}{8}$  inch by  $1\frac{1}{4}$  inch.

Mr. Grenville's note in this choice volume is as follows: "This first edition is so rare that it was sold to me as a unique copy, but, according to Dibdin's Typog. Antiq. the Harleian Catalogue specifies two copies. I have never seen or heard where they are to be found."<sup>d</sup>

<sup>d</sup> There was an imperfect copy of this edition in Mr. Roger Wilbraham's library; the first and the last leaf, however, being lost. Dibdin, who seems, as previously observed,

The text in this editio princeps varies considerably from that of the later editions which I have seen. In some instances, errors of the press seem to have been corrected; in others, the earlier edition is more accurate than the later, and a large number of hexameter lines illustrating the meaning of Latin words, here introduced with the heading "Versus," are not found in subsequent editions; these reprints do not appear in other respects to have undergone any material abridgment.

The edition printed by Pynson in 1509, is not less rare than that of 1500 by W. de Worde. The following description has been taken from a copy in the King's Library in the British Museum. It was in Herbert's collection in 1773. It is a small 4to. measuring  $7\frac{3}{8}$  by 5; Sign. 5 iii. is wanting. Fo. 1. Title partly printed in red.

"Ortus vocabulorum Alphabetico ordine fere omnia que in Catholicon: Breniloquo: Cornucopia: Gemma vocabulorum atque Medulla grammaticæ ponuntur, cum vernacule lingue Anglicane expositione continens. Et si per obliuionem (quod et sepe vsu venire solêt) ob multitudinem vocabulorum aliqua in aliis operibus; ab auctoribus pretermissa fuerint: aut dictionum significantie cum opus fuerit, non statim introire occurrerint ad hoc opus confugiant: et ibidem per alphabeti ordinem (vt paulo ante diximus) quæcunque optauerint, facile inuenient. never to have seen the edition of 1500 (in perfect state), supposed that this book had been printed by W. de Worde about the close of the fifteenth century, and that it might be the editio princeps of the Ortus, ranging with Pynson's folio Promptorium. In its present state this copy consists of 264 leaves, measuring 10 inches by  $7\frac{1}{4}$  inches; it commences with Sign. A. ii.—"A est nomen prime littere," and ends, "Zintala,...i. parva musca, eulex, f. p.," on the leaf following Sign. QQ. iiiii. Dibdin recognised the type as the earliest used by W. de Worde and discontinued about 1510. This book was presumed to be unique.

This title is printed in black and red, the latter being here indicated by Italics, and in a singular fashion described by Herbert as “the form of a jelly glass;” the heading “Ortus vocabulorum” is a long narrow woodcut of the full width of the page, and printed in red, the letters being white.

Fo. 1 verso. The well known woodcut of the magister seated under a canopy at a desk, on which is a large book: three other books and a penner and inkhorn lie on the base of this lectrinum.<sup>a</sup>

¶ Finis

“Laus summo regi dicatur vocibus oris

On the last leaf, recto, is the following colophon :—

“¶ Adest studiosissimi lectores opusculi finis : quod non minus preceptoribus (vt vocabulorum significationes memorie commendent) quam scholasticis : ceterisque studiosis eas ignorantibus conducet : omnium enim vocabulorum significationes que in Catholicon : Breniloquo : Cornucopia : Gemma vocabulorum : aut Medulla grammatice ponuntur, continet. Quum igitur summa diligentia sit collectum, vigilantique studio correctum, vt magis in lucem prodiret : ipsum a viris studiosis, comparandum esse constat. Per virum autem laudabilem ac ciuem pronidum Henricum Jacobi prope nouam scholam ac celeberrimam diui Pauli Apostoli ecclesiam, commemorantem.

Of subsequent editions by Wynkyn de Worde in small 4to., ranging as before observed with those of the Promptorium issued from the same press, and doubtless intended to be bound up with them, I may describe that of 1514 as an example.

On the last leaf, verso, is the following colophon:—

¶ Finis.

“¶ Adest studiosissimi lectores opusculi finis:....” (as in edit. of 1500) “omnium enim vocabulorum significationes que in Catholicon, Breniloquo, Cornucopia, Gemma vocabulorum, aut Medulla grammaticæ ponuntur continet.... Impressum London. per wynandum de worde com-morantem in vico nuncupato (the fletestrete) sub intersignio Solis. Anno incarnationis Dominice. m.cccc.xiii. die vero. xv. Februarii.”

The dictionary is printed in double columns; sign. A. 11 to LL. iij.; the leaves measure nearly  $7\frac{1}{4}$  by  $5\frac{1}{8}$  inches.

<sup>a</sup> The rarity of these early books is so great, that a few examples of variations in the text may be acceptable. In edit. 1500 I find—“ Abamita est soror aui (angl' my fathers aunte;” in edit. 1509...“ an aunte).” Edit. 1500, “ Ciniſſo, qui flat in cinere, vel qui preparat puluerem muliebrem, (angl. aske fyste, a fyre blawer or a yrne hotter)” edit. 1500; edit. 1509, “ askye fyster, a fyre blawer, or a yren heter.” Edit. 1500, “ Colonia, a stypell, vel nomen proprium ciuitatis vel regionis;” edit. 1509,...“ id est proprium nomen...colen.” Edit. 1500, “ Dinodacio...a lawsynge;” edit. 1509...“ a lousynge.” Edit. 1500, “ Fena (sic)...quedam bestia valde timida scilicet cerua, (anglice, a shoo harte)” edit. 1509, “ Felena...a she harte,” &c.

<sup>b</sup> This reference to additions from the works of the eminent scholar, Ascensius, father-in-law of Robert Stephens, does not occur in the title in either of the previous editions, and it is not found in that of 1518.

Besides the editions issued from the press of Wynkyn de Worde, two printed in France, and not mentioned by Dibdin or other bibliographers, remain to be noticed. The first of these was printed for Jaques Cousin, of Rouen, in 1520. The only copy known to me is in the Grenville Library in the British Museum. In dimensions and general arrangement, the book closely resembles the small quartos by W. de Worde: on the first leaf is introduced a woodcut of the arms of the city of Rouen, the escutcheon is supported by two rams, and over it on a scroll is the motto "In te iesu spes mea." On the field of the escutcheon appear the printer's initials, and under it is a scroll inscribed "Jaques: cousin." The title is as follows, printed at the head of the page, over the woodcut:—

"¶ Ortus vocabulorum Alphabeticò ordine fere omnia que in Catholico. Breuiloquio. Cornucopia. Gemma vocabulorum atque Medulla grammatice ponuntur. cum vernacule lingue Anglicane expositione continens: nouiter Impressus Anno salutis vicesimo supra millesimum et quingentesimum. Die vero vicesima septima mensis Junii."

On the reverse of the leaf is found the "Prologus," as before. The dictionary is printed in double columns, Sign. A. ii. to LL. iii. On the reverse of the last leaf is the colophon:—

"Adest studiosissimi . . . . Quum igitur summa diligentia sit collectum vigilantique studio correctum: vt maius in lucem prodiret: ipsum a viris studiosis comparandum esse constat. Impressum. Per Magistrum Petrum Olinier optimis characteribus. Anno salutis christiane vigesimo supra millesimum et quingentesimum Die vero quinta mensis Octobris."<sup>a</sup>

Dimensions, 7 $\frac{3}{8}$  inches by 5 inches. Mr. Grenville observed that this edition is not mentioned by Panzer, Maittaire, or in any work which he had seen.

The second edition, to which allusion has been made as produced on the continent, was likewise printed at Rouen, at the joint costs of a bookseller of that city and of another, John Gachet, "mercatoris librarii," as he is elsewhere designated, and who appears to have carried on his trade at <sup>a</sup> A missal of Salisbury use is mentioned in Ames' Typ. Ant. by Herbert, printed at Rouen in 1521 by Peter Oliver for Jaques Cousin. I am unable to account for the discrepance in date which may be noticed in the colophon as compared with the title, unless we may suppose that the printing commenced on June 27, and that nearly four months were required for its completion.

Hereford possibly, and at York.<sup>a</sup> A single copy has been noticed, which came in 1862 from the Hengwrt library, Merionethshire, into the possession of Mr. Kerslake, of Bristol, to whom I am indebted for permission to examine this valuable book.<sup>b</sup> The title commences as before given, and it concludes thus : — “Impressum Rothomagi per Eustachium Hardy. Impensis honestorum virorum Johannis Caillard librarii Rothomagi moram trahentis, et Johannis Gachet Herfordensis commorantis Anno incarnationis dominice Millesimo quingentesimo decimoseptimo incipit feliciter.” A small woodcut of the Annunciation is introduced at the bottom of the page. In the colophon is likewise found the date 1517, “die vero penultima mensis Maii.” On the last page there is a large woodcut of St. George and the arms of England. This unique volume is in the original stamped binding, probably English ; on one of the sides are figures of St. John the Evangelist, St. Barbara, St. Catharine, and St. Nicholas. The following names of former possessors occur,—“Thomas Heapey.—Thomas Keteylby owith this booke.—Iste liber pertinet ad Thomam Ketylby.” After the colophon there are woodcuts of the Greek letters, strangely formed, with the heading, “Sequitur figura alphabeti greci.” The book is well printed and in fine condition ; sign. A iiii. to T T ii. ; dimensions 7 $\frac{3}{8}$  inches by 5 $\frac{3}{8}$ . The text appears to follow that of the editions by Wynkyn de Worde, and it is of the same small quarto form as that of so many grammatical works from his press.

Having described the various editions of the Ortus Vocabulorum, a compilation which may be placed amongst the most rare and instructive books of its class and period in any country, it may suffice to notice briefly the grammatical and lexicographical treatises from which materials for the work were obtained. I have already pointed out that considerable assistance may have been derived from the dictionary, precisely analogous in character, attributed by Bale and other writers to the author of the Promptorium, namely the "Medulla Grammaticæ," to which the compiler in the Prologue of the Ortus acknowledges his obligations. We here find likewise enumerated the "Catholicon," of which some notice has been previously given (see p. xxiii. ante): a compendium also of that voluminous work entitled "Breviloquus" or "Vocabularius Breviloquus," attributed to Guarinus, probably the learned grammarian of Verona, at the close of the fourteenth century;<sup>a</sup> the "Cornucopia" by Nicolas Perotti;<sup>b</sup> and the "Gemma Vocabulorum," a dictionary which appears, by the number of editions printed at Antwerp, the Hague, Strasburgh, and elsewhere, to have been highly esteemed.<sup>c</sup> On comparison of a copy of a Latin-German dictionary in my own possession, printed at Strasburgh. 1508, and entitled "Vocabularius Gemma gemmarum," I find its contents for the most part identical with those of the Ortus, with the exception that English words are found in the latter in place of German. In the title of the edition of the Ortus in 1514, described p. lix. supra, we find these authorities combined "cum perpuleris additionibus Asceñ" (? for Ascensii, or Ascensianis), to which no allusion is made in the earlier editions. Jodoens Ascensius, father-in-law of the eminent scholar and lexicographer Robert Stephens, was a writer of considerable note at the period of the revival of learning. It may not easily be ascertained from which of his treatises these perpuleræ additiones were selected to augment the Ortus. The "frugiferae annotationes" of Ascensius enriched, as we are informed, the highly-esteemed Lexicon by Calepin in 1525.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>c</sup> Du Cange, præf. § 51, notices the Gemma Vocabulorum published at Deventer in 1502, or, according to Maittaire, Ann. Typ., t. i. p. 728, in 1500. There may, however, have been more than one such work, somewhat similar in title and not readily to be distinguished. Among MSS. bequeathed by Junius to the Bodleian occurs—"Gemma Gemmarum, Dictionarium Latino-Germanicum." Catal. MSS. Angl., t. i. p. 252. We find the "Vocabularius optimus Gemma Vocabulorum dictus; editio aucta sub titulo Gemma Gemmarum;" Argent. 1505, and also an edition printed at the same place in 1518, "Dictionarium quod Gemma Gemmarum vocant," &c. but called "Vocabularius Gemma gemmarum" in the colophon. Panzer and Brunet cite several editions also of the "Vocabulorum Gemmula," the two earliest being those printed at Antwerp in 1472 and 1487.

I have sought in vain to ascertain who may have been the compiler of this Latin-English dictionary; to which I have been desirous to invite attention as a work of considerable interest, and from its rare occurrence comparatively unknown to the student of either mediæval language or antiquities. It will be seen, however, from the foregoing observations that in the preparation of the Ortus, the earliest work of its class printed in England, the most erudite authorities available at the period had been consulted.

The following enumeration of editions of the Ortus Vocabulorum may be acceptable in default of accurate notices of the work by bibliographical writers.

1500. W. de Worde; folio.—Harl. Catal. nos. 5213, 5304; Grenv. Libr. Brit. Mus.; copy with notes by Junius among his MSS. in the Bodleian; imperfect copy in Mr. Wilbraham's Library.

1508. W. de Worde; 4to.—Harl. Catal. nos. 15169, 15170.

1509 Pynson; 4to.—Herbert's copy, in the King's Library, British Museum.

1511. W. de Worde; 4to.—Thorpe's Catal. in 1843, described as the only copy known; imperfect copy in possession of Albert Way.

<sup>a</sup> An account of the literary labors of Ascensius is given by Maittaire, Vit. Stephanorum, pp. 17, 109. His treatises "De Epistolis" and "De Orthographia Latinorum dictionum" were included in a collection published in 1501, to which he prefixed a preface "ex officina nostra litteraria in Parrhis. Lutetia." Another of his works, the "Vocabulorum Interpretatio," may be found in the Opus Grammaticum of Sulpitius Verulanus, printed by Pynson, 1505, and stated to be "cum textu Ascensiano recognito et aucto." Dibdin, Typ. Ant. vol. i. p. 403.

1514. W. de Worde; 4to.—Grenv. Libr.; and Gen. Libr. Brit. Mus. Heber Catal. part vi. lot. 2583; copy, slightly imperfect, in possession of Albert Way.

1516. W. de Worde, 4to.—Heber Catal. part vi. lot 2584. Maittaire, t. II. p. 294.

1517. Eustace Hardy, Rouen, for Joh. Caillard and Joh. Gachet; 4to.—See p. lx. supra; formerly in the Hengwrt library.

1518. W. de Worde; 4to.—Mr. Wilbraham's library; copy from Heber's library in possession of Sir Frederic Madden.

1520. Peter Olivier, Rouen, for Jaques Cousin; 4to.—Grenv. Libr. Brit. Mus.

1528. W. de Worde; 4to.—Gen. Libr. Brit. Mus.

1532. W. de Worde, 4to.—Gen. Libr. Brit. Mus; copy in possession of Mr. Henry Huth.

(3.) "Catholicon in Lingua materna."—The valuable English-Latin Dictionary, frequently cited in the notes to this edition of the Promptorium as the "Catholicon Anglicum," is a MS. which was kindly confided to me in 1841 by Lord Monson, as before stated.<sup>a</sup> Its contents are wholly distinct from those of the Promptorium; the nouns, verbs, and other parts of speech are arranged consecutively in alphabetical order, instead of forming, as in the Promptorium, a Nominale and a Verbale. The MS. consists of 16 "quaterni," or 192 leaves; dimensions 8 $\frac{3}{4}$  inches by 6. At the end of the Dictionary, which forms 183 leaves, are the following note and colophon:

"Nota.—Quum ad utilitatem et comodum singulorum, in grammatica precipue proficere cupientium, hanc brevem et summariam tabulam extractam de tabula prescripta Catholicon breviter nuncupatur in linguam maternam, Deo disponente, disposui, sic jam proferre respicienti seu studenti, supplicans si qua in ea reprehensione digna invenerit, aut corrigat, aut oculis clausis pertranseat, aut saltem humane ignorancie imputet. ¶ Sed inquirendo quisque prudenter caveat, tum de variacione linguarum diversarum, tum de translacione diversorum verborum Latinorum in linguam maternam transformandorum.

¶ Et quicquid inferius offendero, mihi parcat socialis dilectio. Amen.

Corpus scribentis benedicat lingua legentis.

Explicit Catholicon in lingua materna. Anno domini 1483."

I have found no clue to the author; the dialectical peculiarities seem to indicate that it was compiled in the North-Eastern parts of England; amongst names of places occurring in it, besides London, Salisbury, Bath, Oxford and Cambridge, I notice Norwich, Lincoln, York, Richmond, Ripon, Durham, and Carlisle; no other places in the North-Western counties, however, are found. The chief authors and Latin works cited are Virgil, Ysidore, Papias, Brito, Hugutio, the Catholicon, the Doctrinale, the gloss on the Liber Equivocorum (by John de Garlandia); many hexameter verses also are given from some popular grammatical work, possibly by that writer. A fenny district may have been familiar to the author, since amongst other words we find sedge and sedge hill, rush and rush hill, namely, as I imagine, the stack or pile of sedge or rushes; also reed and reed bed, fen, marsh, "natte" and "natte" maker, "schergrysse, carex," "jonkett for fish, nassa," &c. On the reverse of the last leaf is the following indication of a former owner:—"Liber Thome Flowre Succ' ecclesie Cathedralis beate Marie Lincoln. Anno domini M.ccccc.xx." <sup>a</sup>

This venerable relic of mediæval learning is in very perfect condition. Its value as a memorial of the state of our language at the period can scarcely be too highly estimated, and it is probable the MS. may be the author's holograph.<sup>b</sup> At the end is found a Latin and English list of terms of consanguinity commencing "Hic pater, a fader," &c.

(4.) I am indebted to Sir Frederic Madden for pointing out to me another copy of the English-Latin Dictionary last described, written as he

<sup>b</sup> Some curious indications occur of popular notions, which may give a clue to the country where the author lived. We find the belief in the Ignis fatuus, which is still rife in some fenny districts, here shewn by the word "Hobb Trusse, hic prepes, hic negocius." In some parts of England the Will o' the wisp is known as "Hob and his Lantern," or "Hob-thrush;" Aug. Sax. thyrs. Brockett gives "Hob thrust," North country dialect. Again, we find "Sterne slyme, assub," the jelly (tremella) projected supposed about 1450. Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 15,562. It was purchased at the sale of Newman's collection by Messrs. Sotheby in 1845, and is unfortunately imperfect, beginning ". . . calumpniari," &c. an accusere, hic accusator," and ending, f. 142 vo. "Wrathe, Ira," &c. On paper. The various readings are numerous and of value: the text is, however, mostly the same as that of Lord Monson's MS.

(5.) Latin-English Vocabulary, attributed to William Ingram, a monk of Christ-Church, Canterbury. Harl. MS. 1587; which contains other treatises of the same class.

(6.) Latin-English Vocabulary, Brit. Mus. MS. Reg. 17 C. xvii. f. 21 r<sup>o</sup>., edited by Mr. T. Wright in his volume of Vocabularies published at the expense of Mr. Joseph Mayer, p. 185. Early xv. cent. In the same MS. may be found another similar list; f. 38.

(7.) Latin-English Vocabulary, xv. cent. Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 25,238; purchased from Lord Robert Montagu, in June, 1863. The words are classed by subjects, beginning—"Hic pater, hic genitor, a Fador," &c. On paper, 58 leaves.

(8.) Latin-English Vocabulary by Nicholas de Munshulle, a writer not noticed by Leland, Bale, or Pits. Bishop Tanner designates him "Anglus Grammaticus insignis. Scripsit de generibus nominum, sive nominale, cum interpretatione Anglica,—‘Hic Deus, Anglice Code.’"—MS. Bibl. Coll. Trin. Oxon. B. 1. 10. MS. Bibl. Bodl. super A. 1, art. 93. De conjugationibus, &c. verborum, sive verbale: Pr.—labo, bas, avi, atum in supinis, to glyde. MS. ibid." Tanner, Bibl. Brit. Hib. p. 537. Coxe, Catal. Codd. MSS. Coll. S. Trin., No. xiv. I am uncertain whether this according to popular belief from the stars, as noticed hereafter, p. 474. Reference to the noisy flights of wild fowl frequent in Lincolnshire or Holderness is probably found in "Gabriel's rache, hic camalion:" Rache signifies a hound; see p. 422, infra. Bishop Kennett states in his Glossarial Collections, Lansd. MS. 1033, that "in Staffordshire the coaliers going to their pits early in the morning hear the noise of a pack of hounds in the air, to which they give the name of Gabriel's Hounds, tho' the more sober and judicious take them duly to be wild geese making this noise in their flight." Holloway gives, in his Provincial Dictionary, "Gabbie ratchets, birds which make a great noise in the air in the spring evenings (North)."

nominale is identical with the "Glossarium Latino-Anglicum" amongst the Bodleian MSS. No. 2562, 67; Catal. MSS. Angliæ, t. 1, p. 135, where a list of the principal subjects under which the words in the MS. are classed may be found.

(9.) "Nominale sub compendio compilatum tam de fixis quam de mobilibus;" Latin-English Vocabulary, xv. cent., in the collection of Mr. Joseph Mayer; edited by Mr. T. Wright in his Volume of Vocabularies, before noticed, p. 206. This nominale is very full, and more instructive than any compilation of its class that I have seen.

(10.) Pictorial Latin-English Vocabulary, in Lord Londesborough's Library; it contains illustrative sketches which are copied in the edition of this curious nominale given by Mr. T. Wright in his Volume of Vocabularies, before noticed, p. 244. Date xv. cent.

(11.) Vocabulary of names of plants alphabetically arranged, Latin, French, and English, xv. cent. Brit. Mus. Sloane MS. No. 5.—Compare a similar list in three languages, but less full, Harl. MS. 978, f. 24 v<sup>o</sup>., which appears to have been written about 1265; it has been edited by Mr. T. Wright in his Volume of Vocabularies, before noticed, p. 139. Compilations of this class are numerous and deserving of attention; I may mention Latin-English lists of plants, Sloane MSS. 347, 3548, &c. In the curious "Practica" of a skilful physician of the time of Edward III., John Arderne of Newark, a list of plants is given in French and English. Sloane MSS. 56, 2002, Harl. MS. 549. In Arundel MS. 42 may be found an Alphabet of Plants that contains curious matter on the virtues of herbs, with incidental notices. The author mentions his garden "by Stebenhythe by syde London," and relates that he brought a bough of eypress with its apples from Bristol "into Estbriztlond," fresh in September, to show that it might be propagated by slips; f. 68 v<sup>o</sup>. A Dictionary of plants exists also in Reg. MS. 18 A. vi.<sup>a</sup> Of the earlier Herbaria and Glossaries see the "Leechdoms, &c., of Early England," edited by the Rev. O. Coekayne, for the Chronicles, &c., published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls.

* Of the popular treatise attributed to Æmilius Macer, a translation was made, according to Bishop Tanner and Warton, by John Lelamar or Lelarmoure, master of (12.) “Liber Equivocorum vocabulorum,” by John de Garlandia.—Amongst grammatical treatises by this author, of whom some account has been given pp. xxvi.—xxxii. supra, this and the “Synonyma” claim notice on account of the English words occurring in the commentary or “expositio,” attributed to the author of the Promptorium. There are numerous MSS. of both works, of which also several editions were printed by Wynkyn de Worde and Pynson; See Herbert, and Dibdin, Typ. Ant. vol. ii. pp. 96, 406. I have consulted chiefly the edition by W. de Worde, Lond. 1499. As a specimen of the work and of the accompanying expositio by Galfridus, the learned recluse of Lynn, I may cite the following curious passage:—

“Fungus boletus et fungus dicitur ales.

¶ Hic docet autor quod fungus habet duas significationes. Nam fungus id est boletus: angliee paddokstole. Vel est quedam avis angliee an ostrich: quia ut aliqui dicunt est illa qui comedit ferrum i. ferreos claves: angliee horsenayles. ¶ Fungus dicitur a fungor, fungeris, secundum vocem: sed a defungor, defungeris, secundum significationem, defungor id est mori, quia comedentes fungos, sicut plures faciunt in partibus transmarinis, sepius moriuntur. Unde Marcialis cocus,— Boleti leti causa fuere tui.”

Defunctos fungis hominis materne negabis,

(13.) “Synonyma,” by John de Garlandia.—This work, formerly, as was also that last mentioned, in high esteem for instruction of scholars, has been already noticed. See p. xvii, supra. I have made use chiefly of the edition by W. de Worde, 1500, “cum expositione magistri Galfridi Anglici,” namely, the author of the Promptorium, whose commentary

Hereford School, about 1373; Sloane MS. 5. A version printed by Robert Wyer, without date, describes this Herbal as “practys’d by Doctor Lynaere.” See Ames’s Typ. Ant. p. 153.

* It may deserve notice that the “Poetria nova,” ascribed by Pits to Galfridus Grammaticus, as stated p. xviii. supra, but probably written by Galfridus Vinesauf, as Bishop Tanner observes, seems to have been regarded at this time as a production of the former. Under the word “sanguis” is the explanation—“est idem quod progenies. Unde Galfridus in Poetria, autor istius libri,—Egregius sanguis te confert Bartholomei.” If this passage, however, may be taken as referring to the Friar of Lynn, it is obvious that we must ascribe it to some later commentator, by whom additions were made to his expositio.

on this treatise is mentioned by Bale and Pits. The "Synonyma," and likewise the "Equivoca," are written in hexameter verse, the former commencing—

"Ad mare ne videar latice deferre cammino."

The Expositio by Galfridus Grammaticus begins, as given by Bale—
"¶ Cum omnis libri divisio sit utilis," &c.

(14.) "Vocabula Magistri Stanbrigii."—John Stanbridge, a native of Northamptonshire educated at Winchester, fellow of New College 1481, took active part in establishing early grammar schools; he was author of treatises long in estimation. Of these his Latin-English Vocabulary in hexameter verse with interlinear English explanations most deserves notice: it was printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1500, 4to.; seven editions issued subsequently from his press, the latest in 1532. Dibdin, Typ. Ant. vol. ii. p. 91. Another Latin-English Vocabulary, "Vulgaria Stanbrigii," with phrases, &c. was printed by W. de Worde, without date. Of the author, see Bale, Pits, Tanner, and Ant. Wood. Robert Whytton of Lichfield, "Protorates Anglie," whose numerous grammatical works are described by Dibdin, ut sup. p. 173—203, was one of Stanbridge's scholars.

(15.) "Vulgaria," by William Horman.—This author, from whose quaint sentences and phrases in English and Latin many illustrations have been cited in the notes to the Promptorium, was a native of Salisbury, educated at Winchester, Fellow of New College, 1477, Head-master and Vice-provost of Eton, where he died in 1535.<sup>a</sup> The first edition of his "Vulgaria Puerorum" was printed by Pynson in 1519, in small 4to.;<sup>b</sup> and reprinted by Wynkyn de Worde in 1530.<sup>c</sup> I may cite a remarkable sentence as a specimen of this singular work. It occurs sign. O. ij. edit. by Pynson.—"The prynters haue founde out a crafte to make bokis by brasen letters sette in ordre by a frame. Calcographi artem excogitauerunt imprimendi libros qua literæ formis æreis excudunt."

(16.) Withal's Short Dictionary.—Herbert, who remarks that this is a vocabulary rather than a dictionary, notices an edition, without date, "Imprinted in the late house of William Caxton" by Wynkyn de Worde; 4to. Typ. Ant. t. i. p. 293. It is an English-Latin Vocabulary, "gathered especially out of Columel, Grapald, and Plinie," as stated in its title. This popular little work was reprinted by Berthelet in 1554 and 1559, and by H. Wykes in 1567; it was revised by Lewis Evans and printed by T. Purfoot in 1572; and, having been corrected by Fleming, it was again put forth by the printer last named in 1594 and 1599. Of the edition first noticed Dibdin remarks that he had never heard of a copy. Typ. Ant., vol. ii. p. 323.

(17.) Huloet's English-Latin Dictionary.—The first edition is of great rarity; it is entitled "Abecedarium Anglico-Latinum pro Tyruneulis, Ricardo Huloeto Exscriptore." Lond. Gul. Riddell, 1552, fol. At the end is a "peroration to the English reader," shewing that the author had been for ten years engaged on the work; he promised to improve it if brought to another impression. He dedicated it to the Bishop of Ely, Thomas Goodricke, Lord Chancellor, a scholar of some note, employed in the translation of the New Testament and the compilation of the Liturgy in the time of Edward VI. An edition greatly augmented by John Higgins was printed 1572 by Thomas Marsh, with addition of the French, and many phrases, chiefly from Thierry's French and Latin Dictionary, published in 1564. Anthony Wood speaks of this revised edition of Huloet's work as almost a new book. It is dedicated to Sir George Peckham.

(18.) English-Latin Dictionary by Peter Levins, or Levens.—This scarce volume is entitled "Manipulus Vocabulorum. A Dictionarie of English and Latin wordes set forth in suche order as none heretofore hath ben . . . necessary not onely for Schollers that want variety of Words, but also for such as use to write in English meetre." Lond. H. Bynne-man, 1570. 4to. In the dedication to Mr. Stanley, Treasurer of the Queen's mint, allusion is made to the fact, that "Maister Howlet" had set forth a work of the same kind, but on a larger scale. The author was a fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, 1557; he retired in 1560 into the country, and occupied himself in the instruction of youth, and the practice of medicine. See Wood's Athenæ, and Tanner. I have seen one copy only of this work, preserved amongst the books given by Selden to the Bodleian Library.

(19.) Treatise by Walter de Bibelesworth.—The early works compiled to give instructions in French may be consulted with advantage, as throwing light on archaisms occurring in the Promptorium. Of this class of grammatical writings, comparatively little known, may first be mentioned the "Doctrine," or "Treytyz ke moun sire Gauter de Bibelesworthe fist a ma dame Dyonisie de Monnchensy pur aprise de langage." Of this curious metrical treatise, in French verse with English glosses, I have consulted a copy in Arundel MS. 220, and the little roll, Sloane MS. 809.<sup>a</sup> It has been edited by Mr. Thomas Wright from the Arundel MS. with various readings from other copies, and may be found in his Volume of Vocabularies, printed in 1857 at the expense of Mr. Joseph Mayer.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> See also Sloane MS. 513, f. 139; Harl. MSS. 490, 740; a fragment in Cott. MS. Vesp. A. vi. f. 60; a MS. at All Souls' Coll. Oxford, No. 1429; Catal. MSS. Angliæ; and a copy in the Public Library at Cambridge, No. 1396, but attributed to 'mun seigneur Gauter de Bitheswey.' Catal. of MSS. Libr. Univ. Camb. vol. iii. p. 3. Mr. T. Wright has printed numerous English glosses from this MS. in Reliquie Ant. vol. ii. p. 78. A valuable copy formerly in the Heber Library is now in possession of Sir Thomas Phillips, Bart. Notices of the treatise by Bibelesworth may be found in M. Génin's Preface to the edition of Palsgrave's Eclaircissement de la langue Française, Documents inédits sur l'histoire de France, &c. Paris, 1852, p. 27.

<sup>b</sup> I may here refer to an elementary treatise which I have not had the opportunity of examining, preserved at Magdalen College, Oxford, No. 188, thus described by Mr. Coxe: "Institutiones lingue Gallicane cum onomastico exemplisque Latina lingua Anglicanaque editis. Incipit—Diccio gallica," &c. Catal. MSS. Bibl. S. M. Magd. p. 86. It is noticed at some length by M. Génin, Introd. to Palsgrave's "Eclaircissement de la langue Francoyse," reprinted in Coll. de Doc. Inéd. Paris, 1852, p. 29. A similar work, supposed by the Abbé de la Rue to have been written temp. Edw. I., may be seen in Harl. MS. 4971.

The "Treytyz" is supposed to have been written in the time of Edward I., or possibly as early as the reign of Henry III. The father of the lady for whom it was composed was William de Mounchensy, a leader of note at the battle of Lewes, and among the captives and disinherited at Kenilworth; Joan, his only sister, espoused William de Valence, half-brother of Henry III. He was killed by the Welsh in 1289; Dionysia, his heiress, married the second son of the Earl of Oxford. Of the author of this, the earliest elementary work of its class, little is known. Mr. Wright cites some Anglo-Norman verses in a MS. in the Bodleian, in which Walter occurs in a discussion with his friend Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, on the crusade.<sup>a</sup> Amongst many kindnesses which I recall with pleasure, rendered by the late Mr. Holmes of the British Museum, I may here mention the gift of a transcript of a Writ of Privy Seal addressed to the Chancellor, 22 Jan., 30 Edw. I.; being for a pardon under the great seal, in consideration of good services rendered in Scotland, to Walter "de Bibisworthe," for breach of the park of Robert de Scales at Revenhale, and of the king's prison at Colchester.

(20.) "Femina," MS. formerly preserved in the Library at Trinity College, Cambridge—Although of later date than the treatise last described, this remarkable MS. is perhaps of even greater value and interest. It was first noticed by Hickes, who printed a portion of the first chapter, entitled "de assimilitudine bestiarum," with some pertinent remarks on the philological interest of this curious composition. By the liberal permission of the Master and Seniors of Trinity College the MS. was entrusted to me in 1843, and I have thus been enabled to offer the following description. The work is composed of numerous chapters,—of the body and its members, of the first clothing in infancy, of rural matters, of the craft of baking and of brewing ("de arte pistoris" and "braciatrieis"), of fishing, of the names of herbs, birds, beasts, &c., of building houses, and various matters connected with social or daily life. These subjects are set forth in distiches, alternately French and English, with marginal notes to guide the learner in regard to pronunciation. The author's intention is thus declared at the commencement :—" Liber iste vocatur femina quia sicut femina docet infantem loqui matrem sic docet iste liber juvenes rhetoricæ loqui gallicum." The concluding chapter, "De moribus infantis," gives admonitions for discreet behaviour in the various relations of social life, citing the favorite moral treatise by Magnus Cato, the Proverbs of Solomon, and the like, and ending as follows :—

“¶ Ore priez dieu issint puissetez finer,
 Que a soun joye purrez vener.
 Now prayeth God so 3e may end,
 That to hys joye 3e may kome, so be hyt. Amen.”

Then follows a “kalender” or alphabetical table of words in three columns, “linia scripcionis,” the word written according to the orthography of the period; “Regula locucionis,” the proper pronunciation; “Regula construcionis,” the English rendering of the word. For instance, “Chien secundum pikardiam, Chaan secundum parisium,” as written under the first head, is to be pronounced “cheen vel chann, an hounde:” and “Chiet secundum pikardiam, Chiat secundum parisium,” has the pronunciation “cheet vel chaat, an kat.” This curious table ends with the aspiration “Qui scripsit carmen sit benedictus. Amen.—Explicit Femina nova.”<sup>a</sup>

I learn, with great regret, from the librarian, Mr. Aldis Wright, that this precious volume, which was restored by me in Feb. 1844, is no longer to be found amongst the MSS. at Trinity College. It is fortunate that some portions should have been preserved by Hickes, although insufficient to make amends to the philologist for so untoward a loss.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> The volume was thus entered in the catalogue,—“B. 14, 39; Liber de Ordine Creaturarum; B. 14, 40; the Life of St. Margaret in very old English verse; Liber rhetoricus dictus Femina, et Miscell. alia.” Its value was well known through notices and fac-similes given by Hickes, Ling. Septentr. Thes. vol. i. pp. 144, 154. The Life of St. Margaret is there printed entire, pp. 224, 231, and described as “Dialecti Normanno-Saxonice omnium longe nobilissimum specimen;” thirteen distiches are also given from “Femina.” Some notice of the MS. is given by Sir Henry Ellis, Orig. Letters, third series, vol. ii. p. 209.

<sup>b</sup> At the close of the “Femina” is a treatise of the same kind but of later date, giving phrases, idioms, and dialogues suited for the requirements of a traveller; one of these is between a person fresh from the wars of Henry V. and another who asks the (21.) The Book for Travellers.—The earliest printed Treatise for instruction in French is Caxton's "Boke for Travellers," thus cited in my notes infra, and so entitled in Dibdin's Bibl. Spenc. vol. iv. p. 319. See also his Typ. Ant. vol. i. pp. 315, 317. This rare production of Caxton's press is a folio, without date, printed at Westminster, as Ames supposed, before 1484. The author has not been ascertained. It is printed in two columns in form of a vocabulary French and English; being a compendium of household matters, animals, birds, fishes, fruits, viands, merchandise, &c. From the copy at Althorp, the only perfect one known to Dibdin, previously in possession of Mr. Lister Parker, I was permitted to extract many curious illustrations of words in the Promptorium. Mr. Blades mentions in his Life of Caxton, vol. ii. p. 133, a fine copy in the Cathedral Library at Ripon; another at Bamborough Castle; an imperfect copy (Spencer duplicate) in possession of the Duke of Devonshire; and a fragment, two leaves, formerly in Ames's possession, now in the Douce collection in the Bodleian.

(22.) "Introductory to write and to pronounce Frenche, by Alexander Barclay."—This scarce volume issued from the press of Robert Coplande: London, 1521, fol. The author states that he undertook the work "at the comaundement of the ryght hye, excellent, and myghty prynce, Thomas, Duke of Norfolke," namely, Thomas Howard, High Treasurer to Henry VII.; appointed Earl Marshal 2 Hen. VIII., chief commander at Flodden. Sir Henry Ellis has pointed out with much probability that Barclay<sup>a</sup> may have compiled his "Introductory" from materials of earlier news; the traveller relates the siege of Harfleur, the memorable battle of Agincourt, the deaths of the Duke of York and the Earl of Suffolk. The King, he says, is on his way home, the prisoners had reached Dover, the Londoners had gone forth to Blackheath well armed that these foreigners might see what stout men the King had left at home for the safeguard of the realm. Doubtless the arrival of Katherine of France made the study of French fashionable; the name of William Kyngesmylle, an Oxford pedagogue who kept an "ostelle" in that University, is mentioned; he may have been the author of this portion of the MS.

date. He was, however, a scholar of more than ordinary attainments, conversant with languages; his principal work, the "Ship of Fools," is stated to have been translated out of Latin, French, and Dutch, whilst he was chaplain in the college of St. Mary Ottery, Devon.

(23.) "A good boke to lerne to speke French."—A rare little manual intended probably for the use of travellers and merchants. Printed by Pynson, without date (Brit. Mus.); and Wynkyn de Worde. (ibid. Grenv. Libr.)

(24.) Introductory to learn French, by Giles Dewes.—This very scarce work was compiled by a teacher of note in the sixteenth century, whose name should perhaps be written du Wés, or du Guez—de Vadis. It is supposed that he was a native of France; he was clerk of the library at Westminster to Henry VII. and Henry VIII., and instructor in French to Prince Arthur and the Lady Mary. His work is entitled, "An Introductory for to lerne to rede, to pronounee and to speke French trewly," &c. compiled for the Lady Mary, daughter of Henry VIII. London, John Waley, 4to. It consists of grammatical rules, a large vocabulary, letters, dialogues, &c. which seem to have passed between the princess, her teacher, and her almoner, as exercises. It appears by internal evidence that the work was compiled about 1527, when the Lady Mary was eleven years of age.<sup>a</sup> A copy of this edition is in the Grenville Library, Brit. Mus. The work was likewise printed by Thomas Godfray, Lond. s. d. and by N. Bourman for John Reynes [1532 ?] (Grenv. Libr.) Of the edition by Godfray a reprint has been edited by M. Génin, and is appended to that of Palsgrave's "Esclarcissement," noticed hereafter. These reprints of two works of extreme rarity form a volume of the series published by the Minister of Public Instruction; Coll. de Docum. Inédits sur l'Hist. de France, II<sup>me</sup> série, 1852.

<sup>a</sup> See the account of Dewes in the Introduction by M. Génin, p. 14. Weever has preserved his epitaph formerly in St. Olave's Church. See also Warton's Hist. Eng. Poet. vol. ii. sect. xxxv., where it is stated that he died in 1535. Stowe states that he was preceptor, not only to the personages of the English court above mentioned, but also to the King of France, the King of Scots, and the Marquis of Exeter. Hist. London, p. 230.

(25.) “Leselarcissement de la langue Francoyse,” by John Palsgrave, 1530.—A minute description of this important book, which is dedicated to Henry VIII.<sup>a</sup> is given by Dibdin, and more recently by M. Génin in the Introduction to the reprint edited by him for the collection of “Documents Inédits sur l’histoire de France.”<sup>b</sup> The work, the earliest existing grammar of the French tongue, consists of rules for pronunciation, a very full vocabulary of substantives in English and French alphabetically arranged, similar tables of pronouns, adjectives, and other parts of speech, an ample list of verbs being specially valuable to the student of obsolete expressions, on account of the quaint sentences by which each verb is illustrated. The author, who styles himself in the Title “Angloys natyf de Londres, et gradué de Paris,” and who studied also both at Cambridge and Oxford, had been chosen to instruct the Lady Mary, sister of Henry VIII., previously to her marriage with Louis XII. In the Privy Purse Expenses of Henry VIII., 1513, Palsgrave is designated “scolemaster to my lady Princes,” and he accompanied her to France in the following year. His services are very favorably recognised by Henry in the privilege for seven years prefixed to the work, and dated Sept. 2, 22 Hen. VIII. (1530), shortly after its completion, as thus stated in the colophon.—“The imprint- yng fynysshed by Johan Hankyns the xviii. daye of July.” in the year beforementioned. It has, however, been supposed that the book may have been produced from the press of Pynson, by whom it is certain that copies were sold under the author’s direction.<sup>c</sup> On his return from France with the youthful Queen, Palsgrave was much in request as a teacher of the young nobility: he enjoyed considerable preferment in the church, and was collated by Crammer to the rectory of St Dunstan’s in the East,

<sup>c</sup> In a letter to Cromwell from Stephen Vaughan, who was very desirous to obtain a copy of the work, it is said that Palsgrave had instructed Pynson to sell it only to such persons as he might direct, “lest his profit by teching the Frenche tonge myght be mynished by the sale of the same.” Sir H. Ellis, Orig. Letters, third series, vol. ii. p. 214.

London.<sup>a</sup> The “Eselarcissement” is a volume of great rarity; the only copy known to Anthony Wood was that among Selden’s books in the Bodleian, but five copies are noticed by Dibdin; it may be found in the British Museum, and in the University Library at Cambridge.

(26.) “Catholicum Parvum.”—The first printed Vocabulary, Latin and French, appears to be the rare volume printed for Louis Cruse, al. Garbin, at Geneva, 1487, entitled “Catholicum parvum.” A Latin-French dictionary was printed by Martin Havard at Lyons, 1499. The “Catholicum abbreviatum,” or “Vocabularius brevidicus,” was published by Anthony Cayllant at Paris about the close of the fifteenth century, and reprinted there by John Lambert in 1506.<sup>b</sup>

(27.) French-Latin Dictionary by Robert Estienne (Stephanus). The earliest French-Latin Dictionary is that published by Estienne at Paris, 1539, reprinted with additions in 1549. In 1538 he issued his “Dictionarium Latino-Gallicum;” an edition “multo locupletius” appeared in 1546; the work was apparently founded on his “Thesaurus linguæ latinæ,” of which the first edition was published at Paris in 1531, and the second in 1536. In these last he introduced French interpretations of the Latin words. In 1557 this learned lexicographer brought out at Geneva a “Dictionnaire des mots François.” See Brunet under Estienne, Nicot, &c.

(28.) “Dictionnaire Francoislain, &c. corrigé et augmenté par Maistre Jehan Thierry. Paris, chez Jacques du Puys, 1564;” folio. This is the French-Latin Dictionary by Robert Estienne abovementioned, and reprinted from a copy left by him at his death, in which many additions had been made by Thierry and other learned scholars.<sup>a</sup>

(29.) Latin, English, and French Dictionary by John Veron.—This scarce little volume is entitled “Dictionariolum Puerorum, tribus linguis, Latina, Anglica, et Gallica conscriptum. In hoc nudæ tantum puræque sunt dictiones, &c. Latino gallicum nuper ediderat Rob. Stephanus Parisiis, cui Anglicam interpretationem Joannes Veron nunc primum adiecit. Londini, apud Reginaldum Wolfium. Anno MDLII.” 4to. On the reverse is an address in Latin verse by Veron (misprinted Heron) “ad puerum linguarum studiosum,” and in a subsequent address to British youth he says that he was induced by the sight of Stephens’s Dictionary to undertake the work. There are two signatures A. i, on the second of which the Dictionary begins, concluding on the reverse of the leaf following sign. Gggg. v. The Latin words are printed in Roman, the English in black letter, the French in Italic. This dictionary contains curious archaisms.<sup>b</sup> It is very rarely to be found, owing doubtless to the destruction of such elementary books in the hands of heedless learners, amongst whom the book must have been much in request, not only as an auxiliary to instruction in the French tongue, but as the most convenient Latin-English dictionary produced subsequently to the Promptorium.

(30.) I cannot close this section of notices of early lexicography without mention of the valuable work of Randle Cotgrave, frequently cited in the following pages. Subsequently to the appearance of Palsgrave’s French grammar and vocabularies in 1530, no French and English word-book of note is found, with the exception of Claudius Hollyband's French and English Dictionary published in 1593, 4to., a volume of some rarity,<sup>a</sup> preceded in 1573 by his "French Schoolmaister," to which a brief vocabulary was annexed, until the publication of Cotgrave's "Dictionnaire of the French and English Tongues," first printed by Adam Islip, London, 1611. It was dedicated to the author's "very good Lord and Maister, Sir William Cecil, knight, Lord Burghley," eldest son of the Earle of Exeter,<sup>b</sup> and commended "au favorable Lecteur Francois" by J. L'oiseau de Tourval, Parisien." The work must have proved highly acceptable, and may still be consulted with advantage by the students of obsolete language. In 1632 it received the desirable addition of an English-French Dictionary by Robert Sherwood.<sup>c</sup>

(31.) "A Collection of English Words not generally used;" by John Ray, F.R.S.—The first edition of this well-known and valuable glossary was published in 1674; the second, much augmented, in 1691; and it was republished in the fourth edition of the author's "Collection of English Proverbs," 1768.

<sup>a</sup> The elementary works by this teacher of languages were in much esteem. Lowndes does not mention the rare "Campo di Fior, or else the Flourie Field of foure languages, of M. Claudius Desainliens, alias Holiband;" Lond. Thos. Vautrouillier, 1583, 12mo. It contains dialogues in Italian, Latin, French, and English. In regard to early aids to the study of Italian I may cite the Italian-English Dictionary by William Thomas, 1548, as containing obsolete English words.

<sup>b</sup> Sir William was grandson of the Lord High Treasurer, created Baron Burghley by Elizabeth in 1571. He appears by the preface to have been well skilled in French, and may have received instruction from the author.

<sup>c</sup> I may here mention the useful "Alvearie, or Triple Dictionarie in Englishe, Latin, and French," by John Baret, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Cooper's Athene Cantabr. vol. i. p. 421. It was printed by Denham in 1573, and again in 1580, with the addition of Greek to the three languages before mentioned. Several early and rare polyglot vocabularies might be enumerated as containing archaisms not undeserving of the attention of the student of our language in the Tudor age. I recall a curious "Nomenclator" in six tongues, including Latin, French, Italian, and English, Nuremberg, 1548: Joh. Daubmann; of which a copy was shewn to me by Mr. David Laing in the Signet Library at Edinburgh; the Italian is designated as "Welsch."

(32.) Glossarial Collections by Bishop Kennett.—The Glossary appended by the learned Bishop of Peterborough to his “Parochial Antiquities,” of which the first edition appeared in 1695, is highly to be appreciated. I would invite attention to his valuable collection of obsolete and provincial expressions preserved in the British Museum, in Lausdowne MS. 1033, which I have cited frequently in the following pages. This large compilation is wholly distinct from the printed Glossary, and seems well deserving of publication; independently of the value of the etymological suggestions, there can be little doubt that numerous dialectic words are here to be found, which have subsequently been wholly disused and forgotten.<sup>a</sup>

(33.) Glossary of Archaic and Provincial Words, by the late Rev. Jonathan Boucher, Vicar of Epsom.—A portion of this work, containing the letter A, was printed after the death of the author in 1804 by Sir F. Morton Eden; Lond. 1807, 4to. It was entitled “A Supplement to Dr. Johnson’s Dictionary, or a Glossary of Obsolete and Provincial Words.” In 1832 another edition commenced under the editorial care of the late Mr. Hunter, author of the Hallamshire Glossary, and of Mr. Joseph Stevenson. Two parts were published in 4to. containing Boucher’s Introductory Essay, with the Glossary as far as the word “Blade.” Mr. Boucher’s MSS. remained in Mr. Hunter’s hands; at the dispersion of his library, after his death in 1861, these Glossarial collections were purchased by Mr. Russell Smith, and sold by him to Mr. Halliwell; they were again sold at Messrs. Sotheby’s in 1864, and came into the possession, as I believe, of Mr. C. E. Hodgkin, West Derby, Lancashire.

(34.) “Glossary of Words, Phrases, &c. in the works of English authors, particularly Shakespeare and his contemporaries,” by Archdeacon Nares.—This valuable work, which I have often cited as explaining archaisms of an earlier period than that set forth in the title, is replete with curious illustrations of early language and literature. It was first published in 1822, Lond. 4to.: a second edition, considerably augmented, was <sup>a</sup> The Bishop died in 1728; these collections were probably compiled towards the close of the previous century, and not long after the earliest printed notice of local words, namely that published by Ray as early as 1674, but brief and meagre as compared with the MS. produced in 1859 by Mr. J. O. Halliwell and Mr. Thomas Wright ; Lond. 2 vols. 8vo.

(35.) "General Dictionary of Provincialisms ; by William Holloway." London, 1840, 8vo.—In the Introduction certain local expressions, chiefly occurring in the Eastern and Northern parts of England, are enumerated, supposed to be of Danish origin.

(36.) "Dictionary of Archaic and Provincial Words, Obsolete Phrases, &c. from the fourteenth century ;" by Mr. James Orchard Halliwell, F.R.S. 2 vols. 8vo. 1847.

(37.) "Dictionary of Obsolete and Provincial English, containing words from the English Writers previous to the nineteenth century which are no longer in use or are not used in the same sense, and words which are now used only in the Provincial Dialects :—" compiled by Mr. Thomas Wright, M.A. London, 1857, 12mo.—In this useful work of reference numerous illustrations of East Anglian dialect will be found, communicated by the Rev. E. Gillett, Vicar of Runham, Norfolk.

(38.) "Vocabulary of East Anglia, an attempt to record the vulgar tongue of the twin sister counties, Norfolk and Suffolk, as it existed in the last twenty years of the eighteenth century," &c. By the late Rev. Robert Forby. London, 1830. Edited by the Rev. George Turner, 2 vols. 12mo. A supplementary volume was published in 1858, from collections made by the late Rev. W. T. Spurdens of North Walsham, 1840. Mr. Forby's autograph papers, containing the originals of his Vocabulary, are preserved in the library of Caius College, Cambridge, to which they were presented in 1846 by the Rev. George Miller. Catalogue of MSS. Gonville and Caius Coll. by the Rev. J. J. Smith, p. 304. About the time when Mr. Forby commenced his glossarial collection, a similar work was compiled by Mr. Anthony Norris, described as a "Glossary or Dictionary explaining the obsolete words used by old English writers, with references to examples where they occur ; to which is added a catalogue of local and vulgar words used in the county of Norfolk, about 1780." This MS. volume is supposed to have formed part of the collection made by Mr. Norris for the illustration of the county of Norfolk, which came into the possession of the Right Hon. J. H. Frere. It was subsequently in Sir John Fenn's Library, and passed into the hands of the Rev. Jonathan Boucher, deceased in 1804; the MS. was then added to the late Mr. Dawson Turner's Norfolk collections, and at their dispersion it was purchased by the Hon. F. Walpole of Rainthorpe Park, Norfolk. In regard to the numerous provincialisms which occur in Norfolk, relics of the peculiar dialect with which the author of the Promptorium declared that he was exclusively conversant, it is not without interest to observe that a writer on agricultural subjects, eighty years since, Mr. Marshall, has stated that, during a very short time whilst pursuing his observations, he registered in Norfolk nearly 1000 local expressions or deviations from established language. He has given those words only that relate to rural affairs.<sup>a</sup> The late Mr. Goddard Johnson of Norwich made large collections of Norfolk words; he informed me that he had gathered 3000 or upwards which did not come under Mr. Forby's notice.<sup>b</sup> His MSS. are, as I believe, in possession of Mr. R. Fitch, F.S.A., at Norwich.

(38.) "Suffolk Words and Phrases; an attempt to collect the Lingual Localisms of that County: by Edward Moor, F.S.A." Woodbridge, 1823, 12mo.

The foregoing notices may doubtless appear tediously diffuse; and I have thought it inexpedient to extend them by an enumeration of certain books, those especially that relate to provincial dialect, cited in the following pages. The bibliography of early elementary works on Language would form an instructive chapter in the History of English Literature: it has been my endeavor to offer some contribution towards a subject which the dissertations of Mr. Mayor, already cited, have in no slight measure tended to bring under consideration. I may refer to his erudite account of Elyot, Cooper, and Holyoke, by whom the revival of learning in the sixteenth century was essentially aided in this country.<sup>a</sup> To the "Copious Dictionary" of Francis Gouldman, however, published at a comparatively late time, in 1664, and often cited in my notes, I would advert not merely as combining the labors of his learned predecessors, of whom an ample notice is set forth in the Preface, but as containing archaisms of interest to the student of language, with certain expressions mostly of North-country vernacular. To Dr. Jamieson's Dictionary of the Scottish Language I have also often been indebted, and scarcely less frequently to the researches of Brockett, of Hunter, and of others to whose timely care we owe the preservation of many of the fast-fading traces of provincial dialects.<sup>b</sup>

THE CAMPUS FLORUM; see p. xxv. ante.

Whilst the foregoing pages were in the press, Sir Frederic Madden, to whose friendly assistance I have frequently been indebted, has called my attention to a writer who probably may have been the authority often cited by the compiler of the Promptorium as "Mirivalensis in Campo Florum," and whom, as before stated, I have long in vain sought to identify.

Leland has given many particulars relating to "Thomas Gualensis, a Leandro Alberto Bononiensi Thomas Anglicus de Malleis"<sup>c</sup> corrupte

<sup>b</sup> I may refer to the Bibliographical List of works illustrative of the Provincial Dialects of England, by John Russell Smith, Lond. 1839, in which various volumes occasionally cited in the notes and not enumerated above will be found. The numerous additions to this class of philological literature render an enlarged edition of Mr. Russell Smith's useful Hand-list very desirable.

<sup>c</sup> Probably for Walleis or Waleis, as he is sometimes called. Leland cites several of his treatises on the authority of Leander Albertus, de Viris Illustr., lib. iv. It may be well to notice that there was a writer of an earlier period, Johannes Gualensis, a Franciscan of Worcester, about 1260, of whose voluminous works see Bale, p. 317, Pits, p. 342; some confusion seems to have arisen in regard to his writings and those of Thomas Gualensis. There was moreover another Thomas, professor of theology at Oxford, in the time of Henry III., elected Bishop of St. David's in 1247.

dictus;" a Dominican whose commentaries on various books of the Old Testament he had seen in the library of Warden Abbey, Bedfordshire. Amongst numerous writings of this author, probably of Welsh origin, Leland thus mentions one existing at Oxford in the Public Library:—"Extat in bibliotheca publica Isiaci liber, cui titulus Campus Florum, a Guallensi scriptus, copiosus videlicet Juris Canonici index." Leland observes that previous writers had not ascribed a date to the works of Gualensis; according to his own conjecture that eminent scholar lived about the times of Edward II. Comm. de Script. Brit., vol. ii., p. 333.

Bale and Pits give some additional notices.<sup>a</sup> From the former we learn that Thomas Walleys (alias Gualensis) a theologian of Oxford, was a strenuous opponent of tenets advanced by Pope John XXIII., and that in consequence, about the year 1332, he suffered imprisonment. Bale gives a list of treatises attributed to Walleys, including one thus entitled:—"Campum Florum Juris Canonici, lib. i. Disciplina claustrali deditus." The enumeration of his writings is augmented by Pits, with references to MSS. in the collegiate libraries of both the universities. This list includes several MSS. in the library of St. Peter's College, Cambridge, and it may deserve notice that I there found, as previously stated (p. xxv. supra), a treatise entitled "Campus Florum," and also several works attributed to Johannes Wallensis. Of the author, however, of the "Campus Florum" there preserved, I have found no indication; it commences with the words "Fulcite me floribus," which differ, as will presently appear, from those given as the incipial words of the treatise by Thomas Walleis to which my attention has been called by Sir Frederic Madden.

It is stated by Pits that Thomas Walleis, or Gualensis, lived in 1333; according to some accounts, however, he was living as late as 1410.

The autograph Collections by Bishop Bale, alphabetically arranged, for the continuation of his work, are preserved, as I am informed by Sir Frederic Madden, in the Bodleian Library amongst Selden's MSS. (No. 64, B.; No. 3452, Codd. Jo. Seldeni, Catal. MSS. Angliæ). They were compiled after the first edition printed at Ipswich in 1548, and before that, largely augmented, printed at Basle in 1557. These Collections well deserve to be printed, as Sir Frederic observes; their value being greatly enhanced by the circumstance that, in all instances, Bale has stated the authorities, which are omitted in his printed work. The following notices of the Campus Florum occur at fol. 30, but not under the author's name :—"Campus Florum vocabularius quidam erat apud Miram vallem, locum devotis monachis valde amenum, factus circa annum Domini 1359.—Nicholaus Brigan in Collectionibus.

Campus Florum (Thomæ Gualensis interlined) li. i.; incipit, 'Disciplina claustrali deditus apud Miram vallem.' Claruit autor anno Domini 1359. —Ex Collegio Magdalene Oxon."

Under the article of Thomas Walleys, fol. 176, the work is thus noticed more briefly :—"Thomas Walleys Dominicanus, doctor Walliens," &c. and at the end of the list of his writings,—"Campus Florum, copiosus index juris Canonici, li. i.—Ex Lelando de viris illustribus."

Nicholas Brigan, or Brigham, called by Bale in his printed work "Brigamus," was his contemporary,—"Anglicarum antiquitatum amator maximus;" he compiled, about 1550, certain collections which seem to have been used by Bale, entitled "Venationes rerum memorabilium," also "Rerum quotidianorum, lib. xii." Bale, Script., p. 718.<sup>a</sup>

Sir Frederic Madden notices that the name "Thomæ Gualensis" had been added above the line in the passage above cited; he considers this interlineation to be subsequent to the original entry, but not later than 1552, the latest date that he found in the volume. It would seem that Bale had really seen a copy of the work at Magdalen College; he certainly assumes that Thomas Walleys was the author. No MS. corresponding with his description appears to be found at the present time, and I have sought for it in vain, either in the enumeration of MSS. in the library of Magdalen College, given about 1697 in Catal. MSS. Angl., tom. 1, part 2, p. 71, or in the recent and valuable Catalogue compiled by Mr. Coxe. I have been equally unsuccessful in my endeavors to trace the MS. described by Leland as existing in the Public Library at Oxford.

<sup>a</sup> Pits, p. 749, writes in commendation of the erudition of Brigham, of his repute as a lawyer, historian, poet, and antiquary. In 1555 Brigham caused the remains of Chaucer to be removed to the chapel of St. Blaise in Westminster Abbey, and deposited in the marble tomb which bears a Latin verse composed by him. See Wood's Athenæ.

<sup>4</sup> This word is still of local use to denote the commotion caused in some tidal rivers, at the flow of the tide. In the Ouse, near Downham bridge, above Lynn, the name is eager, as also in the Nene, between Wisbeach and Peterborough, and the Ouse near York, and other rivers. Camden calls the meeting of the Avon and Severn, higre. Compare Skinner, under the word eager. In Craven Dial. aker is a ripple on the water. Aker seems, however, to have had a more extended meaning, as applied to some turbulent currents, or commotions of the deep. The MS. Poem entitled Of Knyghthode and Batayle, Cott. MS. Titus A. xxiii. f. 49, commending the skill of mariners in judging of the signs of weather, makes the following allusion to the aker.

"Wel know they the remue yf it a-ryse,
 An aker is it clept, I vnderstonde,
 Whos myght there may no shippe or wynd wyt stonde.
 This remue in th'occean of propre kynde
 Wyt oute wynde hathe his commotioun;
 The maryneer therof may not be blynde,
 But when and where in euery regioun
 It regnethe, he moste haue inspectioun,
 For in viage it may bothe haste and tary,
 And vnauised thereof, al mys cary."

Aker seems to be derived from A.S. æ, water, and cer, a turu; sæ-cir signifies the ebb of the sea. CÆDM. See Nares, under Higre.

<sup>2</sup> The amice is the first of the sacerdotal vestments: it is a piece of fine linen, of an oblong square form, which was formerly worn on the head, until the priest arrived before the altar, and then thrown back upon the shoulders. It was ornamented with a rich parure, often set with jewels, which in ancient representations appears like a standing collar round the neck of the priest. Dugdale gives an inventory in his History of St. Paul's, taken 1295, which details the costly enrichments of the amice.

<sup>4</sup> It is very doubtful what tree is here intended. Forby observes that in Norfolk the asp tree, populus tremula, is called ebble, which seems to be merely a variation of abele, the name given by botanists to the populus alba. In a vocabulary in Harl. MS. 1002, ribarnum is rendered "a awberne." The Promptuary gives hereafter EBAN TRE, Ebanus. In early French writers the "bois d'ouor" is often mentioned as in esteem for making bows; but its nature has not been satisfactorily explained, and possibly it may have been identical with the awbel. In German the yew tree is called eben.

<sup>5</sup> This word occurs again hereafter, WARFYN, or wex wronge or avelonge as vesselle, oblongo. In Harl. MS. 1002, f. 119, oblongo is rendered to make auelonge; and in the editor's MS. of the Medulla, oblongus is rendered auelonge. A. S. Awoh, oblique. Moore gives the word avellong, used in Suffolk, when the irregular shape of a field interferes with the equal distribution of the work.

<sup>4</sup> The awfyn or alphyn was anciently the name of the bishop in the game of chess. Hyde derives it from the Arabic, al-ʿīl, an elephant. The piece was called by the French fol, at an early period, and subsequently alfin. The third chap. of the seconde treatise of Caxton's game of the Chesse, 1474, "tretethe of the Alphyns, her office ande maners. The Alphyns oughte to be made ande formede in manere of Juges syttinge in a chayer with a book open to fore their eyen. Theyr offyce is for to counceylye the Kyng." "Alfyn, a man of the chesse borde, alfin," PALSG. See Ducange, Douce's Remarks on the European names of Chessmen, Archæol. xi. p. 400, and Sir F. Madden's remarks on the chess-men found in Lewis, Archæol. xxiv. p. 225. Hornman, speaking of chess, says, "We shulde have 2 kyngis, and 2 quyens, 4 alfyns, 4 knyghtis, 4 rokis, and 16 paunis." f. 252. b.

I shall reken it syxe times by auglorisme, or you can caste it ones by counters." PALSG. It would hence appear that towards the commencement of the XVth century the use of the Arabic numerals had in some degree superseded the ancient mode of calculating by the abacus; and counters, which, at the period when the Promptorium was compiled, were generally used. Hereafter we find the word COUNTINGE BORDE as an evidence. They were not indeed wholly disused at a time long subsequent: an allusion to calculation by counters occurs in Shakespeare, and later authors prove that they had not been entirely discarded. Algorithm or algorism, a term universally used in the XIVth and XVth centuries to denote the science of calculation by 9 figures and zero, is of Arabic derivation.

Of the virtues attributed to this herb, see Roy. MS. 18 A. VI. "Genciana ys an herbe that me clepyth baldemoyne, or feldewort."

<sup>3</sup> Hereafter occurs in the Promptorium 3ERDE baleys, virga. Virga is rendered a 3erde or a rodde, MED. and ORT. VOC.; and such the baleys seems to have been, and not a besom, balai, in the present sense of the word. Matthew Paris relates that in 1252 a person came to perform penance at St. Alban's, "ferens in manu virgam quam vulgari-ter baleis appellamus," with which he was disciplined by each of the brethren. Wats in the Glossary observes, "Ita Norfolciensis mei vocant virgam majorem, et ex pluribus longioribus viminibus; qualibus utuntur pædagogii severiores in scholis." Baleys occurs in Piers Ploughman in the same sense. Forby does not notice it; but the verb to balase occurs amongst the provincialisms of Shropshire; see Hartshorne's Salopia Antiqua.

<sup>4</sup> In the Wicliffite version Baili seems to imply the charge or office, "3elde rekenyng of thi baili, for thou myght not now be baylyf." Luc. 16. "He is my ryue and bayly, Inquilinus prediorum urbicorum et rusticorum." HORM.

<sup>5</sup> "Crebro, a balke bitwyne two furrowes. Porca vorat furfur, aratrum vult vertere porcum." MED. HARL. MS. 2257. "He hath made a balke in the lande, scannum fecit, sive cradum solum et innotum reliquit." HORM. "Baulke of lande, separaison." PALSG. A.S. Bale, porca. The word is still in use in Norfolk and Suffolk.

<sup>6</sup> In Gawayn and the Green Knyzt occur the expressions "a bal; berg," and "bal;3e hawneheg," which are explained by Sir F. Madden to mean ample, swelling. Mr. Stevenson, however, in Boucher's Glossary, interprets the word as smooth or unwrinkled.

<sup>1</sup> The banker was a cloth, carpet, or covering of tapestry for a form or bench, from the French "banquier, tapis pour mettre sur un banc, stragulum abaci." NICOT. COTGR. "Amphotapa est tapetum circumfilosum, a wolle loke." ORT. "Tapes utrinque villosus." DUC.; denoting the coverings of arras and tapestry work, wrought, perhaps, on both sides, such as are enumerated in the Inventory of Sir John Fastolfe's effects, 1459. Archaeol. xxi. 257, 265. We there also find "Banker, hangyng tapestry worke," which may mean the tapestry commonly in use for hangings, or that the Banker was in this instance the covering of a high-backed seat, over which it was hung. In an earlier Inventory of the Priory, Durham, 1446, occur "iij Bankquerez palcat' de blodio intenso et remisso; costera pro ornatu murorum ejusdem camera," these last being of the same suit as the Bankers, that is, of cloth of say, paly dark blue and light. Inventories published by the Surtees Society, i. 92. In the Teutonic, banck-wreck is rendered by Kilian, "tapes, opus polymitum, vulgo bancalia, scamalia, subsellii stragulum." A Vocabulary of nearly the same date as the Promptorium gives "pepotasina backis, banquere." ROY. MS. 17. C. XVII. This word has been in Boucher's Glossary incorrectly explained to mean a table-cloth.

<sup>2</sup> Baptym is not an error of the scribes, but a singular corruption of orthography. In the other MSS. as well as the printed editions, the same spelling occurs. In the Wicliffite version it is thus written, as also baptym, and baptem, in the Legenda Aurea. The observation would be trivial, did it not afford an evidence of the predominant influence of the French language in England at the period; the word is evidently thence received, and not from the Latin.

<sup>4</sup> Spelman explains the barbacan to be "munimen à fronte castris, aliter antemurale dictum; etiam foramen in urbium castrorumque mœniis ad tragicienda missilia." Sax. burgekening. Vox Arabica." Pennant asserts that the Saxons called the barbacan to the north-west of Cripplegate, burgh-kenning; other writers have suggested a different etymology, A. S. burk-beacen, urbis specula. Bullet would derive it from the Celtic, bar, before, bach, an inclosure. Lye gives barbacan as a word adopted in the Anglo-Saxon language, and we must certainly not seek thence its derivation. The best specimens of the outworks to which this name was given were at York, and called the Bars, of which one still exists in good preservation.

<sup>2</sup> The ornaments of the girdle, which frequently were of the richest description, were termed barres, and in French clous; they were perforated to allow the tongue of the buckle to pass through them. Originally they were attached transversely to the wide tissue of which the girdle was formed, but subsequently were round or square, or fashioned like the heads of lions, and similar devices, the name of barre being still retained, though improperly. Thus a citizen of Bristol bequeathed in 1430, "zouam harnizatum cum barris argenti rotundis." In the description of the girdle of Richesse, in Chaucer's Romaunt of the Rose, we read,

"The barris were of gold full fine
Upon a tissue of sattin,
Full bevie, grete and nothing light,
In everiche was a besaunt wight."

In the original, "les clous furent d'or eparé." The word was similarly applied to the ornaments of other parts of costume, such as the garter, worn by the Knight of the Order, or spur-leathers, as in Gawayn and the Green Knyȝt, i. 287.

"A barme cloth as white as morrow milke Upon her lends, full of many a gore."

The Medulla explains limas to be "vestis que protenditur ab umbilico usque ad pedes, quâ utuntur servi coci et femine. Anglice, barm cloth." A.S. barm-rægl, or barm-clað, mappula, ELFRIC.

<sup>6</sup> A barowe or crowde was a small vehicle, whether precisely similar or not to the barrow of the present times, cannot be asserted. When Sir Amiloun was worn out with leprosy, and reduced to "twelf pans of catel," the faithful Amoraunt expended that little sum in the purchase of a barowe, therein to carry the knight about.

"Therwith thai went ful yare

And bought hem a gode crowde wain." Amis and Amiloun, 1867.

<sup>7</sup> The Baselard was a kind of long dagger, which was suspended to the girdle, and worn, not only by the armed knight, but by civilians, and even priests. Thus Piers Ploughman, in allusion to the neglect of clerical propriety, says,

"Sir John and Sir Jeffery hath a girdle of silver,

A baselard, or a ballocke knife, with bottons ouergilt."

Knighton tells us that the weapon with which Sir William Walworth put Jack Straw to death was a basillard. Sir William was a member of the Fishmongers' Company, who <sup>2</sup> "Baudrike, carquant, baldrike for a ladyes necke, carquan." FALSG. Thus is found in the Ort. Voc. "Anabola est ornamentum mulieris a collo dependens, a baudrik." The word had, however, a more general signification; it is derived, probably, from baudrier, a strap or girdle of leather, but was afterwards used to denote similar appliances of any material, and of costly decoration. In Gawayn and the Grene Knzt, bauderyk is the appellation of the guige, or transverse strap by which the shield was suspended round the neck. Hall relates that "Sir Thomas Brandon wore a great bauderieke of gold, greate and massy, trauserse his body;" and he further describes the Earl of Southampton, Great Admiral of England, as "wearing baudrick-wise a chayne at the whych did hang a whistle of gold, set with ryche stones," which was a badge of office. It would appear that the bauderyke was properly a belt worn transversely, as was the "baudre de serico, argento munitum pro cornu Regis." LIB. GARDEROB. EDW. I. 1233. It signified also the cingulum, or military belt, and in the 16th century the jewelled ornament worn round the neck both by ladies and noblemen. See Hall's Chronicle, p. 508, baldrellus and baldringus in Ducange, and Boucher's Glossary.

<sup>3</sup> "Baweyn, or brok, fiber, castor, taxus, melota." GARL. SYNONYM. These words are in the Medulla and Ortus explained as signifying the brocke. A. S. broc, a badger. The word bausene; occurs Cott. MS. Nero, A. x. f. 62: and baucines in William and the Werwolf. See Bawson in Boucher's Glossary.

The functions of the third extended to the expulsion of evil spirits by the imposition of hands upon persons possessed, recently baptized, and catechumens. The ceremony was always accompanied with aspersion, and the name benett was doubtless taken from the aqua benedicta, eau bénite, or, perhaps, from the vessel called in French bénitier, which contained the holy-water. In a will dated 1449 is a bequest of "a gret holy-water scoppe of silver, with a staff benature, the sayd benature and staff weying xx nobles in plate." The staff benature was the aspersorium, termed in the Promptorium STRENGYL, halywater styc. Fox, relating the death of Hooper, states that it was part of the ceremony of degrading Bishops to "take from them the lowest vesture which they had in taking bennet and collet" (i. e. acolyte). Eccles. Hist. iii. 152, A.D. 1555. T. Becon, in the Reliques of Rome, says, "Boniface V. decreed that such as were but benet and colet should not touch the reliques of saints, but they only which are subdeacons, deacons, and priests." Edit. 1563, f. 183.

We have retained piecemeal, but the rest are wholly obsolete. See in Nares, drop-meal, inch-meal, and limb-meal. P. Ploughman uses pounde-mele and percel-mele. In the Liber Festivalis we read that William Tracy, after the murder of St. Thomas of Canterbury, "fyllte syke and roted all his body, in somoche that himselfe with his owne hondes cast away his owne flesshe lompe-mele." Palsgrave gives "by ynche-meale, menuement, par poulcees, and flock-meale, par troupeaux."

<sup>2</sup> "Bearwarde, gardeur d'ours." PALSg. A curious representation of the bear-ward, and baiting the bear, occurs in the Louterel Psalter, illuminated in the early part of the reign of Edw. III. It has been engraved in Vetust. Monum. VI. pl. xxiv. In the Household Book of the Earl of Northumberland in 1511, under the head of Rewards, is one of "6s. 8d. to the Kyngs or Queenes Barward, if they have one," when they come to the Earl. Ant. Rep. iv. p. 253. The Earl had also in his own family an official of the same kind, whose reward was 20s. Shakespeare uses the word, and also bearrard or bear-ward, which are synonymous.

<sup>3</sup> Beryl is used by Chaucer and the authors of the XIVth and XVth centuries to denote the precious stone so called, and also a finer description of crystal glass, which resembled it in transparency or colour. This distinction is not preserved here; but it is made by Palsgrave: "Berall, fyne glass, beril. Beryll, a precious stone, beril." Elyot renders "Glessum, crystal or berylle." See Whitaker's Cathedral of St. Germain's, ii. 250.

MS.* 12 G. XI. f. 31. The marvellous tales respecting this bird, which has been supposed to be the chenalopeces, mentioned by Pliny as a native of Britain, are to be found in length in Gesner, Olaus Magnus, and many ancient writers. Giraldus gives in his Topographia Hiberniæ, c. xi. a detailed account "de bernacis ex abiete nascentibus," as a phenomenon of which he had been an eye-witness on the Irish shores, and states that these birds were, on account of their half-fishy extraction, eaten during Lent. This indulgence, of which the propriety was argued by Michael Meyer in his treatise de volucri arboræ, was sanctioned by the authority of the Sorbonne. It is scarcely needful to observe that the origin of these strange statements is to be found in the multivalve shell-fish, the lepas anatifera, which attaches itself to submerged wood, or the bottom of ships. <sup>1</sup> "Chamus est quoddam genus freni, vel capistrum, an halter or barnacle." ORT. VOC. Junius derives the word from the French berner, comprimere petulantiam; and Roquefort mentions a kind of torture practised by the Saracens, termed bernicles. The Wicliffite version renders 2 Kings, xix. 28, "y schal putte a sercle in þi nose þirlis, and a bernacle in þi lippis." Cott. MS. Claud. E. 11.

<sup>2</sup> Berne is the contraction of A. S. bere, hordeum, and ern, locus. Lathe, which does not occur in its proper place in the Promptorium, is possibly a word of Danish introduction into the eastern counties, Lade, horreum, DAN. Skinner observes that it was very commonly used in Lincolnshire. It occurs in Chaucer:

"Why ne hadst thou put the capell in the lathe." Reves Tale.

Horman observes that "nesynge is caused with byten (betonica) thrust in the nostril." The powdered root of hellebore was another homely sternutatory anciently much in request.

<sup>2</sup> "Merendula, a beuer after none. Merenda, comestio in meridie vel cibus qui declinante die sumitur." ORT. Harrison, in his description of England, prefixed to Holinshed's Chronicles, i. 170, remarks that "of old we had breakefastes in the forenoone, beuerages or nuntions after dinner, and thereto reare suppers, generallie when it was time to go to rest, a toie brought into England by hardie Canutus; but nowe those are very well past, and ech one, except some yong hungrie stomach that cannot fast till dinner time, contenteth himself with dinner and supper." The higher classes, he observes, dine at 11 and sup at 5, merchants seldom before 12 and 6. This was written about 1579. Sherwood renders, "Bever, or drinking, un récéner, collation, gouter. To bever, récéner;" and Cotgrave explains un récéner as "an afternoones nuncheon, or collation, an Aunders-meat." See hereafter NUNMERE, which seems to have been much the same as the intermediate refection here called BEUER. The word bever still signifies in Suffolk an afternoon snack. MOORE.

<sup>3</sup> A.S. beofer, castor. That the beaver was anciently an inhabitant of these islands, the laws of Howel Dha, and the curious description of its habits given by Giraldus, in his Itinerary of Wales, l. ii. c. 3, satisfactorily prove. The fur of this animal was in estimation from an early period. Piers Ploughman says,

"And yet vnder that cope, a cote hath he furred
 With foyns, or with fischewes, or with fyn beuere."

"Me fyndeth fures of beuers, of lombes, pylches of hares and of conyes. On treuue foarrures d'escureius," &c. CANTON, Boke for Travellers. The beuer hat is mentioned by Chaucer as a part of female attire, and by Hall as worn by the Stradiote light horsemen in 1513.

"Rede, or synge, or byd prayers
 To Crist for all thy Cristen ferys." Sloane MS. 1986, f. 22 b.

<sup>6</sup> What was the precise kind of cup called byker, or beaker, it is not easy to determine. This word occurs as early as 1348, in the accounts of the Treasurer of Edward, Prince of Wales: "ii magne pecie argenti, vocate Bikers, emellate in fundo, cum cooperculis cum batellis, et ex una parte deauratis." In this instance they were destined to be presented to ladies, (Beltz, Memor. of the Garter, p. 385.) Becher in German signifies a cup or goblet, as does beker in Dutch and Teutonic; possibly we derived the vessel to which the name was originally given from Flanders or Germany. Of cognate derivation is the Italian bicchiero. In the later Latinity bacchar, baccharium have the same meaning; see Ducange. The common root of these words was perhaps the Greek βίφος, vas habens ansas. MENAGE.

<sup>7</sup> "Beckeryng, scrimyshe, mêlée. Bicker, fyghtyng, escarmouche." PALSG. "Anon after the fylde began to beker." HORM. Skinner suggests the Welsh bicere, conflictus, as the etymon of this word, which, however, he inclines to think of Anglo-Saxon origin.

Elyot explains lawer to be "an herbe growyng in the water, lyke to alisaunder, but hauyng lesse leaues. Some do call it bylders."

<sup>2</sup> The Catholicon explains matricula to signify carta promissionis, and cites the life of St. Silvester, which says that he inscribed the names of widows and orphans "in matricula." Spelman gives A.S. bille, schedula; the word BYLET was, however, probably of French introduction, as also was scrowe or scroll, escrou.

<sup>5</sup> Forby gives bing in the dialect of East Anglia, Danish, bing, cumulus. A.S. bin, prasepe. The word bianna occurs in a deed of the year 1263, in Chron. W. Thorn, 1912, where it signifies a receptacle for grain. Cumera is explained by Uguitio to be "vas frumentarium de festucis," and no doubt the bin was anciently formed of wicker-work, as in German benne crates, Belg. benn, corbis. In the Indenture of delivery of Berwick Castle, in 1539, occurs "in the pantre, a large bynge of okyn tymbar with 3 partitions." Archæol. xi. 440.

In the Wicliffite version biriell occurs often in this sense. "And the kyng seide, what is this biriell which I se? And the citeiseyns of that cite answeriden to him, it is the sepulchre of the man of God that cam fro Juda." IVth Book of Kings, xxiii. 17 Harl. MS. 2249. In Mark v. 5, the demoniac is said to have "hadde an hous in biriellis." So likewise in Leg. Aur. "It happed after, that vpon the buryels grewe a rygth fayre flouredelyse." f. cxi. The Latin-English Vocabulary, Harl. MS. 1002, f. 145, gives "Mausoleum, a byryelle, anabatrum, a chyrchestyle."

Ortus renders "travulus, a ratelare." It appears in Ducange that balbus and blesus are synonymous with travulus; the first of these is rendered in Cooper's Thesaurus, one "that cannot well pronounce words, a maffer in the mouth."

MS. 73, f. 213, are directions for making blanc plumb, album plumbum, with "strong reed wine drestis, and brode platys of newe leed, in a great erthen pot or baryl, and closed for six wokes or more in hoot horsdunge." This MS. is of the close of the XVth century; an earlier receipt occurs in Sloan. MS. 2584, f. 6.

The operation of cupping, which is one of ancient use, was doubtless well known to the Friar of Lynn,

"When one hath done, another begyn,

"And at his mouth a blubber stode of fome."

"Blobber upon water (or bubble) bouteillis." PALSG. The verb to blubre occurs in an analogous sense, in Syr Gawayn and the Grene Knyzt, lin. 2174. "The borne blubred ther inne as hit boyled hade." Blubber still signifies in Norfolk a bubble, from blob, as Forby says. See Bleb in Skinner, and Jamieson.

stool in Norfolk to be a four-legged stool set on a frame like a table, and serving as the poor man's sideboard, stool, or table. In the History of Hawsted, by Sir John Cullum, p. 25, the bequest occurs in 1553 of "a buffed stool," which is explained to be an oval stool without a back, and generally having a hole in the seat, for the convenience of lifting it. The Inventory of the effects of Katharine Lady Hedworth, 1558, comprises the following articles: "In my Ladyes Chamber, 2 euphords, 6s. 8d. 2 eupbord stoules, 3s. 4d. 3 buffet formes, 3s. one litle buffet stole, 6d." <sup>6</sup> The Catholicon explains flegmen to be "tumor sanguinis. Item flegmina sunt quando in manibus et pedibus callosi sulci sunt." It would appear to be the same as a bunnian, the derivation of which has been traced from the French, "bigne, bosse, enflure, tumeur." ROQUEF. Cotgrave renders it a bump or knob, and he gives also "Bigne, club-footed." Sir Thos. Browne, Forby, and Moore give the word bunny, a small swelling caused by a fall or blow; in Essex "a boine on the head." In Cullum's Hawsted, among the words of local use, is given bunny, a swelling from a blow.

Grose says bracket is in the North a drink compounded of honey and spices. See bragwort, in Jamieson and Nares. Harrison, who lived in Essex about 1575, relates in his description of England, prefixed to Holinshed's Chronicles, ii. c. 6, how his wife was accustomed to make brackwort, reserving a portion of the wort unmix'd with hops, which she shut up close, allowing no air to come to it till it became yellow, calling it brackwort, or charwort, to which finally she added arras, and bay-berries powdered.

<sup>5</sup> It is not a little singular to find so many notices as occur of Brasil-wood, considerably anterior to the discovery of Brasil, by the Portuguese Captain, Peter Alvarez Capralis, which occurred 3d May, 1500. He named it the land of the Holy Cross, "since of store of that wood, called Brasil." Purchas's Pilgrimes, vol. i. It is probable that some wood which supplied a red dye had been brought from the East Indies, and received the name of Brasil, long previous to the discovery of America. See Huettiana, p. 268. In the Canterbury Tales, the host, commending the Nonne's preeste for his health and vigour, says,

"Him nedeth not his colour for to dien,
With Brasil, ne with grain of Portingale."

<sup>1</sup> Brawne, which Tooke conjectured to be boaren, flesh being understood, was applied anciently in a more general sense than at present. The etymology of the word may be traced with much probability to the Latin, aprunum, callum. Piers Ploughman speaks of "brawn and blod of the goos, bacon and colhopes;" and Chaucer, in the Knight's Tale, applies the word, as it has been here, to the muscular parts of the human frame.

The gloss on Gautier de Bibesworth gives the word in this sense, <sup>1</sup> "A bretasyng, propugnaculum." CATH. ANGL. The Catholicon says, "dicuntur propugnacula pincne murorum sive summe partes, quia ex his propugnatur." In the Treatise "de Utensilibus," written by Alex. Neccham, about the year 1225. in the chapter relating to a castle, the French gloss renders propugnacula, brestaches, and pincne, karnens. Cott. MS. Titus, D. xx. f. 196. "Bretasse, breteche, bretesque, forteresse, tour de bois mobile, parapet, creneau, palissade." ROQUEF. This word was applied rather indefinitely to denote various appliances of ancient fortification. See bretachia, in Ducange. It more properly signified the battlements; thus it is said of the valiant Normans,

"As breteiches monterent, et au mur guernelé." Roman de Rou.

In Lydgate's Troy we read that,

"Every tower bretexed was so cleue."

In a contract made at Durham in 1401, is the clause, "Et supra istas fenestras faciet in utroque muro ailours, et bretteissementa batellata."

"Who saveth a thefe when the rope is knet,

With some false turne the bribour will him quite." LYDGATE.

In Piers Ploughman bribors are classed with "pilors and pikeharneis." In Rot. Parl. 22 Edw. IV. n. 30, are mentioned persons who "have stolen and bribed signetts," that is, young swans. "A bribur, circumforaneus, lastro, sicfanta." CATH. ANGL. "To bribe, pull, pyll, briber, Romant, dérober. He bribeth, and he polleth, and he gothe to worke." PALSG.

The terms brekegirdle and bygirdle are occasionally confounded together, and it may be questioned which of the two was here intended: the latter is the Anglo-Saxon bigyrdel, zona, saccus, fiscus, which properly signifies a purse attached to the girdle. In this sense it occurs in P. Ploughman, "the bagges and the bigirdles." Vision, lin. 5072. "A bygyrdylle. marcupium, renale." CATH. ANGL. "*Renale, a bygyrdyll, est zona circa renes. On the Northern coast of Norfolk, opposite Burnham Westgate, is an island of singular shape, resembling the letter S: it is about a mile in length, following the direction of its tortuous form, and very narrow throughout. It still bears the name of Bridgirdle, evidently from its supposed similarity to the ancient article of dress called the BRYGYRDYLE. See No. LXIX. of the Ordnance Survey.

In the dialects of Norfolk and Suffolk, brim is retained only in the following sense: "a brymnyng as a bore of a sowe doth, en rouyr." FALSG. "To bryme, subare." CATH. ANGL. The word bryse is, however, probably taken more directly from the French. Palsgrave gives "to brise or bray herbes or suche like in a mortar, briser." In the curious treatise of the virtues of herbes, Roy. MS. 18 A. VI. f. 72 b. is mentioned "bryse-wort, or bon-wort, or daysye, consolida minor, good to breke bocches."

The jewel which it was usual about the commencement of the XVIth Century to wear in the cap was called a broche. Palsgrave gives "Broche for ones cappe, broche, ymage, ataiche, afficquet. Make this broche fast in your cappe. Broche with a scripture, deuise." The beautiful designs of Holbein executed for Henry VIII. and preserved in Sloan. MS. 5308, afford the best examples of ornaments of this description. See also the Privy Purse Expenses of the Princess Mary, edited by Sir F. Madden.

<sup>4</sup> Broaches are explained by Forby to be "rods of willow, or other tough and pliant wood split, sharpened at each end, and bent in the middle; used by thatchers to pierce and fix their work. Fr. broche."

<sup>5</sup> "A soudear for lacke of a brotche or a spyt, rosteth his meate upon his wepon made lyke a broche." NORM. Thomas, in his Principal Rules of Italian Grammar, 1548, renders "stocco, an armyng swoorde made like a broche." In the Earl of Northumberland's Household Book, 1511, it appears that the broches were turned by a "child of the keching." ANT. REP. IV. 233. Palsgrave alludes to the same primitive usage, "when you haue broched the meate (embroché) lette the boye tourne, and come you to church." See also Leland's Coll. VI. 4.

of brewis in the North of England. BROCKETT. Huloet, in the reign of Edward VI. speaks of "browesse, made with bread and fat meat."

"A proverbe sayde in ful old langage,
 That tendre browyce made with a mary-boon,
 For fieble stomakes is holsum in potage."

Lydgate, Order of Fooles, Harl. MS. 2251, f. 303.

The Latin-English Vocabulary, Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. gives "browys, adepatum, brewett, garrus," distinguishing these two words, as the Promptorium does. Brewes is derived from the plural of A.S. briw, jascalum; but brewett is a word adopted from the French, brouet, potage or broth. Palsgrave, however, gives "browesse, potage of fysshe or flesshe, brouet."

<sup>1</sup> In the Forme of Cury, and other books of ancient cookery, will be found a variety of recipes for making brewets, such as brewet of Almony, or Germany, of ayrenne, or eggs, eels, and other fish in bruet. In a MS. of the XVth century, in the possession of Sir Thomas Phillipps, No. 8336, occur "Bruet seece, bruet salmene, and bruet sara-zineys blanc." The word seems to have been applied generally to any description of potage; but Roquefort defines the original meaning of brouet as "chaudeau, et ce que les nouveaux mariés donnoient à leurs compagnons pour boire, le jour de leurs nocces."

<sup>3</sup> "Bugle beast, bergle." PALSG. "Bugle, buffle, bœuf sauvage." ROQUEF. "Buffle, buffes or bugles, wild beasts like oxen, uri. Buffle leather, alata bubalina." BARET. "Preciousse cuppis be made of bugull hornys, urorum cornibus, non bubalorum." HORM. The bugle was introduced into England in 1252, as a present to Richard, Earl of Cornwall, brother of Henry III. "Missi sunt Comiti Richardo de partibus transmarinis Bubali, pars vero sexus masculini, pars feminini, ut in his partibus occidentibus, ipsa animalia non prius hic visa multiplicarentur. Est autem Bubalus genus jumenti bovi consimile, ad oneru portanda vel trahenda aptissimum, cocodrillo inimicissimum, undis amicum, magnis cornibus communitum." Matt. Paris.

<sup>4</sup> "Bulted, sassé, bouldyng clothe or bulter, blateau. To boulte meale, butter." PALSG. He gives the word also in a metaphorical sense, "to boulte out a mater, trye out the trouthe in a doubtfull thyng, saücher." See bulter-cloth, in Kennett's Glossary.

<sup>5</sup> "To bomme as a fly dothe, or busse, bruire. This waspe bommeth about myne eare, I am afrayed leste she styng me." PALSG.

<sup>6</sup> "To bounche or pushhe one; he buncheth me and beateth me, il me pousse. Thou bunchest me so that I can nat syt in rest by the." PALSG. "He came home with a face all to bounced, contusá." HORM.

<sup>7</sup> The Harl. MS. appears here to be faulty, and the correct reading probably is, BUNNE, kyx. See hereafter KYX, or bunnes or drye weed. A.S. bune, fistula. In Joh. Arderne's Chirurgica, Sloane MS. 56, p. 3, in a list of French and English names of plants, occurs "chaugnot, i. bunes;" the reading should probably be chenevette, which signifies the stalk of hemp. Forby and Moore give bunds or bund-weed, as the name by which in the Eastern counties weeds infesting grass-land are known. Jamieson explains bune to be the inner part of the stalk of flax, or the core.

<sup>4</sup> Burr signifies in Norfolk, according to Forby, a mistiness around the moon; and in North Britain a halo is termed brugh, brogh, or brough; Jamieson suggests from its encircling the moon like the circular fortifications which are also called brugh. Ang. S. beorg, manimentum. The expression, "a burre about the moone" occurs in "Whimzies, or a new cast of Characters," p. 173. The same derivation may possibly apply to the terms, burr of a lance, which is a projecting circular ring that protected the hand; as also the burr of a stag's horn, or projecting rim by which it is surrounded close to the head.

"Pur aketoun ly bayle blanche char e pure, Par cadaz e cotoun de saunk fu le encusture." MS. Heber, No. 8336.

In the petition against excess of apparel, 1463, it is thus mentioned: "No yoman, &c. to were in the aray for his body eny bolsters, nor stuffe of woole, coton, or cadas, nor other stuffer in his doubtlet, save lynyng accordyng to the same." ROT. PARL. "Cadas or crule, saijette." PALSg. "Cadarce pour faire capiton, the tow, or coarsest part of silke, whereof sleaue is made." COTGR. Nares explains caddis to be a sort of worsted lace.

<sup>3</sup> Caddow is still the name given to the jackdaw in Norfolk, as Coles and Forby have recorded. Palsgrave gives "Caddawe a byrde, chucas," and Withal renders "Caddow or dawe, nodulus." "Monedula, a chonghe or cadess." ELTOT. Keo is from A.S. ceo, cornix. See hereafter COO BYRDE, or schowhe.

<sup>4</sup> The quantity of fish contained in a cade is determined by the Accounts of the Cellarist of Berking Abbey, MON. ANG. I. 83: "a barrel of herryng shold contene 1000, and a cade of herryng six hundred, six score to the hundreth." Palsgrave renders cade escade; but the word does not occur in the Dictionaries. In 1511 it appears 'y the Northumberland Household Book, that the cade of red herring was rated at 6s. 4d., the cade of "sproytts, 2s." The spirling mentioned here was the smelt, called in French esperlan. See hereafter SPIRLYNge, epimera.

Among the disbursements for the erection of Little Saxham hall in 1505, is one to the chief mason, for the foundation within the inner part of the moat, "to be wrought with calyons and breke, with foreyns and other necessities concerning the same." Rokewode's Hundred of Thingoe, 141. "Calyon, stone, calion." PALSgrave. In the dialect of Northern England a hard stone is termed a callierd.

The Catholicon gives the following explanation of hamus: "Dicitur et hamus asser cum clavis quo subtegatur terra in vineis sub arboribus defendendis, vel in domo circa scrinia et thesauros, ut si aliquando fur ingrediatur, ejus pedibus infigatur." In the contemporary poem describing the Siege of Rouen by Henry V. the city is said to have been defended by a deep and wide dike, full of pitfalls, "of a spere of heyth."

"Also fulle of caltrappys hyt was sette

As meschys beth made wythinne a nette." Archæol. xxi. p. 51.

"They hydde pretely vnder the grounde caltrappys of yron to steke in horse or mennys fete, murices ferreos leviter considerant," NORM. Chaussetrappe is explained by Cotgrave to be an "iron engine of warre made with four sharp points, whereof one, howsoever it is cast, ever stands upward." Among the "munitions and habyllments of warre" belonging to Berwick Castle, 1539, occur "15 peece of lettes calteroopes." Archæol. xi. 439. Caltraps are mentioned by Quintus Curtius in the Life of Alexander as having been spread over the ground by the Persians to annoy the Macedonian cavalry. This circumstance is thus described, Kyng Alisaunder, line 6070:

"And calketrappen maden ynowe,
In weyes undur wode and bowe,
Alisaundris men to aqwelle,
And synfulliche heom to spille."

Vegetius calls them tribuli. A representation of a caltrap, from the Tower collection, will be found in Skelton's Illustrations of the Armoury at Goodrich Court, ii. pl. 132.

Hence also the sea-gull appears to have received a name, which is given by Elyot, "Cundosoccus, a sea-gull, or a camose." See Camy, and Camow-nosed, in Jamieson's Dictionary.

<sup>1</sup> Forby and Moore have given ample illustrations of the nature of the game at ball called to this day in Norfolk and Suffolk camping: the former agrees with Ray, in deriving the word from the A. Sax. campian, praliari. The camping-land appropriated to this game occurs, in several instances, in authorities of the XVth century; in Cullum's Hawsted, mention is found, in 1466, of the camping-pightle.

Hall's Chron. 6 Hen. VIII. Roquefort gives "Chantel, un morceau de pain," from cantellas. See Ducange, and Mon. Angl. i. 411. cappe or a cope; caracalla, a selauyn or a cape." DICT. WILBR. "A cope." ORT. Pilleum, according to the Catholicon, signifies a garment made of skins, but, in its more usual sense, a covering for the head. In early times the cappa was an ordinary upper garment worn by ecclesiastics indiscriminately, and Egbert, Abp. of York, ordained in the VIIIth century that none of the clergy should appear in the church "sine colobio vel cappâ." Of the various modifications of this vestment, and the names by which they were distinguished, a detailed account will be found in Duange. At a later period the cope was a vestment reserved for occasions of ceremony: when worn by prelates and dignitaries, the richest tissues were chosen, and covered with a gorgeous display of jewels, orfrays, and embroidery; but its use was not confined to them, for, with the exception of the priest officiating at the altar, who was vested in the sacred garments appropriated to the service of the mass, the cope appears to have been worn by all the assisting clergy, and even the choristers. In A. Sax. the name cappa, or cappa, was adopted from the Latin, probably as early as the mission of St. Augustine, A.D. 601; and a cappa obserica, one of the gifts of Gregory the Great, was preserved at Canterbury until the Reformation. See hereafter COOPE, capa.

<sup>1</sup> The use of a small cap by the clergy as a covering of the tonsure is one of considerable antiquity; it was usually termed the coif, cogpha, and this term occurs hereafter in the Promptorium. This was identical, as Joh. de Athona asserts, with the tena or infula; but these appear more properly to have been lappets appended to the coif, and which occasionally were fastened under the chin. At various periods, when the clergy, disregarding strict propriety in demeanour and dress, became assimilated in externals to the laity, the coif was specially decreed by the Church. Thus, in the Council of London in 1267, the Legate Othobonus ordained that the clergy should never appear in public with the coif, except in travelling, because thereby the corona, or circlet of hair left by the tonsure, was concealed, and therein "principue depositio terrenorum, et regalis sacerdotii dignitas designantur." See Lynwode, Provinciale, p. 88. Hure, howe, or howte, are synonymous, and are derived from A. Sax. hufa, cidaris. See hereafter HOWE or hure, heed hyllynge, and HWYR, cappe.

"Why ne hadst thou put the capell in the lathe." Reve's Tale.

Gawayn and the Green Knyzt, line 2175.

<sup>4</sup> In the middle ages a metrical system of ethics, entitled "Disticha de moribus ad filium," attributed to Dionysius Cato, or Magnus Cato, had attained the highest degree of estimation. It was illustrated by the comments of the most learned men of several centuries, and served as a manual for the instruction of youth. It is not certain who was the author; a translation from the Latin was made about 1480, by Benedict Burgh, Archdeacon of Colchester, for the use of his pupil Lord Bourchier; and in 1483 Caxton published his translation from a French version, entitled "The Booke called Cathon." Chancer frequently quotes Cato: see Miller's Tale, 3227, Marchaunt's Tale, 9261. Caxton says, in the Boke for Travellers, "George the booke seller hath doctrinals, catons, oures of our Lady, Donettis, partis, accidents." See Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry, ii. 166, Dibdin's Typogr. Antiq. i. 195.

<sup>5</sup> Caucyon may here signify a pledge, as in Palsgrave, "causion, pledge, caution." See hereafter WEDDE, or thyng leyyd yn plegge. The Catholicon, however, explains cautio to be a simple promise, without oath, pledge, or surety, but idonea cautio implied those additional securities. It is further interpreted to be a writing, as Papias says, "Cautio est breve recordationis chirographum. Unde in Evang. Luc.: Accipe cautionem tuam." In the Wicliffite Version this passage is rendered "and he seide to him, take thy caucion and wryte fifty." Luke xvi. 6.

Caudell for the seke, chaudel. Growell and wortes." Skinner and Junius interpret it to be merely a spicy drink; but in the ancient terms of cookery cawdel signifies generally anything stewed down to a purée; see in the Forme of Cury, pp. 24, 27, "Chyken in cawdel, cawdell ferry;" and in Cott. MS. Julius, D. viii. f. 100, "Caudelle of samone, caudelle of muskles." See further, calenum, in Charpentier.

<sup>2</sup> Cawcewey is derived directly from the French chaussée, a word taken, as Menage and other writers have observed, from the Latin calciata, so called, as some conjecture, from its being continually trodden, via calcata, but probably rather from the mode of forming such a road, with stones imbedded in mortar, via calcata, from calx, lime. See Spelman, Ducange, and Kennet. under the word calera. There was a causeway at Lynn leading to Gaywood, on which was situated the Hospital of St. Mary Magdalen, and among the benefactors to the Hospital of St. John Baptist occurs Ufketel filius sanctimonialis de Sceringes, who grants "totam terram in Linne super calcetum." Mon. Ang. vi. 648, new edit. Palsgrave gives "Causey in a hye way, chaussée."

<sup>3</sup> Coigrave renders "cautelle, a wile, cautell, sleight, guilefull devise, subtilty." Fabyan relates that, in 1448, the town of Pont-de-l'arche was taken by the "cautele" of the Frenchmen, who introduced two men disguised as carpenters; and Hall, speaking of the same occurrence, calls it "a praty cautele and slighte imposture." In Elyot's Librarie occurs "Officiar, cawtelles, crafty wayes to deceyue."

<sup>2</sup> The Catholicon explains celo to signify sculpere, pingere, and celamen or celatura, sculptured or painted decoration. Lydgate, in the Troye Boke, uses the word celature to describe vaulted work of an elaborate character. It appears doubtful whether the verb to cele, and the word ceiling, which is still in familiar use, are derivable from celo, or may not be traced more directly to calum and the French ciel signifying not only vaulting or ceiling, but also the canopy or baldaquin over an altar; the hangings of estate over a throne, which are sometimes termed dais, from the throne being placed in the part of the apartment to which that name properly belonged; and, lastly, the canopy of a bed, "celler for a bedde, ciel de lit." FALSG. Gervase of Dover uses the term in his graphic description of the conflagration of Canterbury Cathedral in 1174, occasioned by sparks having been carried by the wind, and lodged between the roof and the interior vaulting of the church: "calum inferius egregie depictum, superius vero tabulae plumbræ ignem interius accensum celaverunt." Twysden, Hist. Angl. Script. 1289. Thomas Stubbs, among the benefactions of Aldred, Archbishop of York 1061—1070, records that "totam ecclesiam à presbyterio usque ad turrim ab antecessore suo constructam, superius opere pictorio quod celam vocant, auro multiformiter intermixto mirabili arte construxit." Ibid. 1704. The word had a still further signification, denoting not merely the decoration of the vaulting or roof of a chamber, but also the wainscot-work upon the walls. Thus Horman says, "These wallys shal be celyd with cyprusse. The rofe shal be celed voutwyse and with cheker work." See hereafter SYLURE of valle, and SELYN wythe sylure.

"Cene of clerkes, convocation." FALSG. In the Legenda Aurea mention is made of the "Ceene of Calcydone." f. xxvi.

<sup>2</sup> Tessera is rendered in the Ortus "a dyce," and terera has the same meaning; the Catholicon, however, gives another explanation, "Tessere dicuntur lapides quadrati ad modum tabularum, unde parimenta sternuntur." There can be little doubt that the token of an inn here referred to is the ancient sign of the chequers, scaccarium, the chess-board or playing-tables. It has been questioned whether this symbol denoted in England, as it did where it occurs at Pompeii, a house of entertainment where play was practised, or rather had its origin in the painted lattices at the doors and windows, which, as has been affirmed, were part of the external indications of an hostelry as late as 1790. The ordinary use of such lattices is mentioned by Harrison in his description of England. "Of old time our countrie houses in steed of glasse did vse much lattise, and that made either of wicker or fine rifts of oke in checker-wise." B. ii. c. 12, in Holinshed. Among the deeds and benefactions of Thomas Chillenden, Prior of the church of Canterbury from 1390 to 1411, it is recorded in the obituary, "in civitate Cantuariæ unum Hospitium famosum, vocatum le Cheker, nobiliter edificavit: in eadem civitate Hospitium de la Corona." ANG. SACRA, i. 143. The "red lattice" is a term often used to signify an ale-house; Shakespeare alludes to it, Hen. IV. pt. ii.; it occurs in Marston, Chapman, and other early dramatists, and Massinger speaks of the "red grates next the door" of a tavern. Of this and other inn-signs see Brand's Popular Antiq. ii. 247, Gent. Mag. xl. 403, lxiii. 531, lxiv. 797.

<sup>3</sup> The term lattice was applied to denote the volute of a capital; but here it seems possible that the term relates to a spiral or newel-staircase. There was, however, a

Mais le lyure (he bok) nous orent clerger.*” Arund. MS. 220.

It occurs not unfrequently in Chaucer and Gower. In 1441 a complaint was made by the King's tenants of the forest of Knaresborough, that the Archbishop of York prevented their coming to Ripon, “so that none might utter their eaffer, wherewith to pay his (the King's) farne att tearmes accustomed,” Plumpton Corresp. p. liv. “Chaffre, ware.” PALS<sup>g</sup>.

<sup>3</sup> The distinction is here clearly made between the two significations of the verb to challenge. Thus also Cotgrave explains “Chalanger, to claime, challenge, make title unto; also to accuse of, charge with an offence.” Robert of Gloucester, Brunne, and Chaucer use the word in the former sense. “To chalange, accusare, calumpniari. A chalange, calumpnia.” CATH. ANGL. “Calanger, accuser, disputer, demander, être en contenance.” ROQUEF. “The tribune dredde lest the iewis wolde take him bi the waie and sle him, and afterward he myght be chalengid as he hadde take money.” Wicliffite version, Dedis, c. 23.

<sup>1</sup> "Chape of a knyfe, concllus." CATH. ANGL. "Chape of a shethe, bouterolle de gayne. To chape a sword or dagger." PALSG. The chape of a sword was a badge assumed by the De la Warr family, in memorial of the part taken by Sir Roger de la Warr, at Poitiers, 1356, in the capture of John King of France, when he took possession of the royal sword.

<sup>4</sup> The term chare seems to have been the earliest appellation in England of vehicles used to convey persons of distinction. It has been derived from the Anglo-Saxon cyran, vertere; but probably we derived both the vehicle and its appellation from France, where, as early as 1294, the use of the char had become so prevalent that it was forbidden to the wives of citizens by an ordinance of Philippe le Bel. A description of the rich chare prepared for the Princess of Hungary will be found in the Squyr of low degree, Ellis's Specimens, vol. i., and is beautifully illustrated by an illumination in the Louterell Psalter, executed in the reign of Edward II. See Mr. Rokewode's valuable paper in the Vetusta Mon. vol. vi. plate xx. A variety of representations are also given by Mr. Markland, with his remarks on the early use of carriages in England, Archæol. xx. 443. The appellation chare continued in use in the XVIth century. Horman says, "The quylene came in a chare, pilento. He came in a chare or a wagen." It occurs in Hall and Fabyan; and in Strype's Memoirs, Edward VI. 1557, is mentioned a "chair drawn by six chariot horses."

<sup>3</sup> Of the office of the chandler in the household of a great lord, see the curious poem appended to the Boke of Curtasye, written about the time of Henry VI. Sloane MS. 1986, f. 46, b.

"Now speke I wyllle a lytulle whyle
 Of the chandeler wyth-outhe gyle,
 That torches and tortes and preketes con make,
 Perchours, smale condel, I vndertake."

Chandler signified not only the maker of candles, but the candlestick, from the French chandelier. Thus in the Legenda Aurea mention occurs of a "chaundeler or candyl-

<sup>5</sup> It has been stated that the usage of chanting in the English churches was introduced by Osmund, Bishop of Sarum, 1090; but we learn from Bede that Benedict, Abbot of Weremouth, brought Abbot John, the arch-chanter, from Rome to this country about A.D. 678, at which period Archbishop Theodoric, a Greek by birth, made a visitation of the whole island, and caused instruction to be given in the art "sonos cantandi in ecclesiâ," until then known only in Kent. Bede states even that at an earlier period in the same century Paulinus left at York James the Deacon, who was "cantandi in ecclesiâ peritissimus," and who "magister ecclesiastice cantionis juxta morem Romanorum, seu Cantuariorum multis cepit existere." Bede, lib. ii. 40. See also lib. iv. 3, and v. 20, and the appendix, edit. by Smith, p. 719. The most important treatises on the subject of Church Music are those of St. Nicetus in the VIth century, and Aurelian in the IXth, subsequent to the great change introduced by St. Gregory. A curious notice of the ancient system of notation has been given among the "Instructions du Comité Historique. Collection de documents inédits." 1839. Chanting or "deschaunt" was among the practices violently opposed by Wickliffe, as was all Church-melody by the innovators of a later period.

Egones, sacerdotes rusticorum.*" The compiler of the Promptorium was a Friar-Priester, and the insertion of this word may possibly be attributed to the contentious feeling which subsisted between the monastic orders and the secular clergy. The illiterate condition, however, of the rural or "uplandish" clergy brought them generally into contempt, and occasioned their receiving the nick-name "Sir John," and other appellations of invidious obloquy.

<sup>3</sup> Shingles of wood, a covering both light and durable, were probably still, at the time the Promptorium was compiled, in very general use for roofing houses, although the regulations for the dimension of the various kinds of tiles are a proof of their being likewise employed to a considerable extent. See Stat. 17 Edw. IV. c. 4, A.D. 1477. The term seems derived from the French eschandole, or Latin scindula, and is occasionally written shindles. See Holland's Pliny, B. xvi. c. 10. Piers Ploughman terms Noah's ark a "shyngelde shup," an expression that seems to bear some analogy to the Ang. Sax. scide-weall, murus de scindulis congestus. ELFRIC. See SCHYNGYL.

<sup>5</sup> The Latin-English Vocabulary, Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. gives "arena, grawell, sabulum, sande, glaria, chesylle," f. 37, and again, f. 56, "nomina lapidum, glaria, chesylle." The etymology of the name Chesil Bank, in Dorsetshire, a singular bank of pebbles, which extends nearly seven miles S.E. from Abbotsbury, and abuts at Chesilton on the isle of Portland, is here clearly ascertained. See, prefixed to Holinshed's Chron. the description of the Chesill, by Harrison, Descr. of Brit. p. 58. Harrison speaks also of the Chesill at Seaton, in Devonshire, where he says "the mouth of the Axe is closed by a mightie bar of pibble stones," p. 59, and copies the account given by Leland, Itin. iii. f. 42: "The men of Seton began of late day to stake and make a mayne waulle withyn the Haven—and ther to have trenchid thorough the chisille, and to have let out the Ax, and receyvid in the mayn se. But this purpose cam not to effect. Me thought that nature most wrought to trench the chisil hard to Seton Town, and ther to let in the se." In this instance the term chisel seems to accord with the explanation given in the Medulla, "Glarea, argilla, vel primum lapides quos aqua fluvialitis trahit." Harl. MS. 2257. It implies, however, in a more general sense the pebbles on the shore; thus in the Coventry Mysteries, p. 56, is the following paraphrase of Genes. xxii. 17:

"As sond in the see dothe ebbe and flowe, Hath cheselys many unnumerable."

In the Wicliffite version this passage is rendered "gravel which is in þe brink of þe see." Ang. Sax. ceosel, glarea, sabulum. Teut. kesel. In Norfolk, chizzly signifies dry and harsh under the teeth, which Forby derives from Teut. kiesele, gluma. The Latin-English Vocabulary, Harl. MS. 1002, f. 147, gives among "pertinencia pistrine, Cuntabrum, Anglice chyclelle."

<sup>1</sup> The drain of a lavatory seems to be here alluded to, such as that with which the lavacrum or piscina on the south side of the altar was invariably supplied, which allowed the water that had served for washing the sacred vessels, and for the ablutions during the service of the altar, to sink into the earth; or generally in reference to such provisions for cleanliness as are to be observed in most monastic establishments, as especially the lavatories in the cloisters at Chester and Worcester Cathedrals. Mergulus, however, usually signifies the sink of a lamp wherein the wick was placed.

"For of the Goddes the vsage is,
That who so him forswearth amis,
Shall that yeere drinke no clarre." Chaucer, Rom. of Rose.

In the original Romance, pigment, claré, and vin paré are named together, and in the Merchant's Tale Januarie is said to indulge in consoling spiced drinks, "Ipocras, clareie and vernage." Barth. Anglieus gives a description of the mode of compounding claret, lib. 19, de propriet. rerum, c. 56; and recipes "ad faciendum claretum" occur in Sloan. MSS. 1986, f. 14, b. and 3458, f. 105. time any kind of foreign red wine is called claret.

clarion is wounde in and out with an hope." This instrument received its name from its shrill sounds: it was called in low Latin clario, and Knyghton mentions "clarrions et tuba," as sounding the onset at Cressy, and speaks of them also in his account of the siege of Paris, by Edward III. A.D. 1360.

kratsen, was formerly written cracche: see hereafter CRACCHYN. Chaucer speaks of "cratchlinge of chekes," and Piers Ploughman says,

"Al the clergie under Crist
Ne myghte me cracche fro helle,
But oonliche love and leautee." Vision, 6866.

"closier, petit clos fermé de haies," ROQUEF. Horman says, "These byrdis muste be kepte in with a rayle, or a closer latis wyse, clathro." See CLOSERE of bokys or oþer lyke.

staf." See hereafter CROCE of a byschope. The term CLEY-STAFFE seems to be taken from the similarity of the head of the pastoral staff, in its simplest form, resembling the ancient lituus, to the claw of an animal, which here, as by Gower, is written cle. "Cley of a beste, ungula," CATH. ANG. In Norfolk the pronunciation cleyes is still retained.

Clough, a deep fissure or ravine, is a name still retained at Lynn, at a spot described by Forby. Ang. Sax. clough, fissura ad montis clivum. See also cleuch and clengh in Jamieson and Brockett’s Northern words.

“Par cliket et cerure, (lacche and lok)
Ert la mesoun le plus sure.” ARUND. MS. 220, f. 302, b.

Chaucer, however, uses the word in the sense that is here given to it, “clavicula, a lytel keye.” ORTUS. Thus in the Merchant’s Tale,

“—— he wold suffre no wight here the key,
Sauf he himself, for of the smal wiket
He bare alway of silver a cliket.”

And whilom dimme and whilom clere.”

<sup>2</sup> A note, copied by Hearne from a copy of the Promptorium, states that the compiler of the work was "frater Ricardus Fraunces, inter quatuor parietes pro Christo inclusus." See Hearne's Glossary to Langtoft's Chron. under the word Nesshe. If, however, it had been true that he had belonged to the order of Anchorites, who were called inclusi, or reclusi, it seems probable that some indication of the fact would have here occurred. The dwelling of the Anchorite, domus inclusi, or clausorium, appears to have often immediately adjoined the church, and is doubtless in many instances still to be distinguished. The ritual for his benediction will be found in Martene, Antiq. Rit. lib. iii. c. 3. Palsgrave gives the verb "to close up in a wall, or bytwene walles, emmurer. Canst thou fynde in thy herte to be an Anker, to be closed up in a wall?" See hereafter RECLUSE.

<sup>3</sup> Compare CLAUSEURE, or elos. Jamieson gives closeris, enclosures, and closerris, which he conjectures may signify clasps. In Norfolk Forby observes that the cover of a book is called clodger, which he supposes to be derived from the French, clousier, as the term codger is corrupted from cousier, a cobbler.

<sup>2</sup> This singular term was given most erroneously in the printed editions of the Promptorium; Pyson printed it Ckyrmete, Julian Notary Chymete, and W. de Worde Chymette. It appears to relate to the kind of rustic boot called here a cocur, and cokyr; but the whimsical application of such a term to clay is wholly unaccountable.

<sup>5</sup> The primary meaning of the word cofyn seems to have been, as in Latin and French, a basket, and is thus used in the Wicliffite version, which renders Matt. xiv. 20, "Thei taken the relifis of broken gobetis, twelve cofyns full." Elyot renders "Tibin, a baskette or coffyn made of wyckers or bull rushes, or barke of a tree; such oone was Moyses put in to by the daughter of Pharaon." The term also implied a raised crust, as for a pie or a custard, and occurs in this sense in Shakespeare. See also the Forme of Cury, pp. 72, 83, 89. Palsgrave gives "Coffyn, grant boiste."

<sup>3</sup> "A coknay, ambros, mammotrophus, delicios. Versus, Delicius qui deliciis a matre nutritur." CATH. ANG. The term coknay appears in the Promptorium to imply simply a child spoiled by too much indulgence; thus likewise in the Medulla, "Mammotrophus, qui dâa sugit. Mammotrophus mammam longo qui tempore servat, Kokenay dicitur. noster sic sermo notatur." There can be little doubt that the word is to be traced to the imaginary region "ihote Cokaygne," described in the curious poem given by Hickes, Gramm. A. Sax. p. 231, and apparently translated from the French. Compare "le Fabliau de Coquigné." Fabl. Barbazan et Méon. iv. 175. Palsgrave gives the verb "To bring up lyke a cocknaye, miquotter;" and Elyot renders "delicias facere, to play the cockney." "Dodeliner, to bring vp wantonly, as a cockney." Hollyband's Treasurie. See also Baret's Alvearie. Chaucer uses the word as a term of contempt, and it occasionally signifies a little cook, coquinator. See further in Douce's Illustrations, King Lear; and Brand's Popular Antiquities, notes on Shrove Tuesday.

<sup>1</sup> The usage of distributing year by year a robe, or some external token of adherence to the service or interests of the personage by whom such general retainer was granted, appears to have commenced during the XIIIth century. The gift, whether a robe, a hood, or other outward sign, was termed a livery, liberata, and the practice was carried to so pernicious an extent, that various statutes passed in the reigns of Edward III. Richard II. and Henry IV. by which the use of liveries was restricted or regulated. Mr. Beltz, in his curious article on the Collars of the King's Livery, Retrospect. Review, N. S. ii. 500, states that the first instance on record of conferring such marks of distinction in England is in 1390, when Richard II. distributed his cognisance of the white hart, but the assertion copied from Anstis, that it was pendant from a collar of broom-cods, does not appear to rest on any authority. This collar was, however, presented in 1393 to Richard II. and his three uncles by Charles VI. King of France, whose cognisance it was. Such a "colare del lievre du Roi de France" is mentioned in the Inventories of the Exchequer Treasury, vol. iii. 357. See Mr. J. G. Nichols's interesting observations on the Effigies of Richard II. and his Queen, Archæol. xxix. 46. The earliest notice of collars of livery, that has been observed, occurs in Rot. Parl. iii. 313, where it appears that when John of Gaunt returned in 1389 from the wars in Spain and Gascony, Richard took his uncle's "livere de coler" from his neck, and wore it himself; that it was also worn by some of the King's retinue; and that Richard declared in Parliament that he wore it in token of affection, as likewise he wore the liveries of his other uncles. It is not improbable that this livery of the Duke of Lancaster's was the collar of letters of SS, subsequently adopted by Henry IV. as his livery, the origin of which is still involved in obscurity. This device had been in use many years before his accession, and as early as 1378 Sir John de Foxle, whose will is preserved in Bishop Wykeham's Register at Winchester, bequeathed "Monile auri, cum S literâ sculptâ et amelitâ in eodem." The livery of Henry V. during the life-time of his father, was a swan, adopted doubtless in token of his descent from the Bohun family; the Stat. 2 Hen. IV. c. 21, contains a clause "que Monseigneur le Prince pourra donner sa honorable livree del Cigne as seigneurs et a ses meignals gentilsz;" and such were probably the "Colers d'argent de la lievre du Roy," which are enumerated in the Inventories of the effects of Henry V. taken at his decease, 1423. Rot. Parl. iv. 214. Henry VI. used a collar formed of broom-cods and the letter S alternately, and Edward IV. adopted as his livery a collar of suns and roses, to which a white lion was appended. There is no evidence that collars of livery were ever distributed by subjects, excepting the Princes of the blood.

The functions of the acolyte, consisting chiefly in attendance on the services of the altar, will be found detailed by Martene, or Ducange. By the writers of the XVth century the orders of "benet and colet" are mentioned not infrequently together. See above BENETT, ordyr, Eroreista. To conne is used in this sense by Chaucer, and in the Wicliffite version, 1 Cor. ii. 2, is rendered thus, "I deeme not me to kunne ony thing." Caxton remarks in the Boke for Travellers, "It is a good thyng to conne a good craft, scavoir." So likewise in the Legenda Aurea, f. 92, b. "O who sholde conne shewe hereupon the secretes of thynne herte!" Palgrave gives "to konne, learne or knowe, scavoir. I can konne more by herte in a day, than he can in a weke;" and "to conne thanke, or can one good thanke, scavoir bon gré." "Thou shalt kun me thanke." <sup>3</sup> This word is used by Lydgate in the Concords of Company, Minor Poems, p. 174.

"With them that ferett robbe conyngerys."

Among the Privy Purse expenses of Henry VII. is a payment in 1493, "for making of the Conyngertie pale." Horman observes that "warens and conygers and parkis palydde occupie moche grounde nat inhabitaunt, leporaria sive lagotrophia." Elyot gives "Vivarium, a conunyngar, a parke;" and Thomas, in his Italian Grammar, 1548, uses the word to denote a pleasaunce, or inclosed garden, "Horti di Venere, the womans secrete connyngers." "Cony garthe, garrenue. Cony hole or clapar, tais-niere, terrier, clappier." FALSG. In the Paston Letters, iv. 426, the term "konyne crosse" occurs in the same sense. In almost every county in England, near to ancient dwelling-places, the name Coneygare, Conigree, or Coneygarth occurs, and various conjectures have been made respecting its derivation, which, however, is sufficiently obvious. See Mr. Hartshorne's observations on names of places, Salopia Antiqua, p. 258.

<sup>4</sup> Coinoun, or konioun, occurs in Kyng Alisaunder, and is explained by Weber as signifying coward, or scoundrel, from the French coion, which has that meaning.

<sup>5</sup> The first record of a mint at Lynn, where the Promptorium was compiled, occurs in 9th John, 1208, but there was possibly one in earlier times, and the name occurs on the coins of Edgar. Parkins supposes that it fell into disuse about 1344, 18 Edw. III.; and he states that the Bishop of Norwich had also a mint there, but the fact is questionable. See Blomefield's Hist. Norf. iv. p. 582, and Ruding's Annals of the Coinage ii. 198.

<sup>1</sup> The Latin-English Vocabulary, Harl. MS. 1587, gives "summitas, coppe," namely, of a steeple. In the Wicliffe version, Luke iv. 29 is thus rendered, "And they ledde him to the coppe of the hil, on which her cytee was bildid, to cast him down." The crest on a bird's head likewise was thus termed, "Cop, cirrus, crista, est avium ut galli vel aluade." CATH. ANG. The gloss on Gautier de Bihelesworth explains "geline kuppe, copped hen;" and Elyot gives "Stygnthalide, a coppe of fethers, whiche standeth on the head of a byrde." In Norfolk, the term copple-crown still has this meaning. Horman says, "Somtyme men were coppid cappis like a sugar-lofe," and uses the term "a cop-heedyd felowe, cilo," which is explained by Elyot as having a great round forehead; and again, "Homer, declaryng a very folysshe and an baskard felowe under the person of Thersyte, sayth that he was copheeded lyke a gygge, vertex acuminato." Cotgrave renders "pignon, a finiall, cop, or small pinnacle on the ridge of a house." The epithet is applied to the pointed shoe, or poleyn, in fashion in the XVth century. "Millens, a copped shoo." ORTUS. Ang. Sax. cop, apez.

<sup>3</sup> The Catholicon explains capitellum as signifying merely the capital of a column, but in the Medulla it is rendered "summa pars capitis;" and in this sense, coporne signifying the apex or pinnacle, the work with which a tower, or any ornamental construction, is crowned, may perhaps be regarded as a diminutive of coppe. The term occurs in a curious description of a castle, written about the time of Richard II.

A round tower appears to have had the appellation of a fyell, a phioll, or fylvole, not as Ruddiman conjectures, from nola, a vial, but from phala. "Fula, a tour of tre." MED. GRAMM. In the description of Belshazzar's feast, in another poem of the same time, cited by Sir F. Madden in his notes on Sir Gawayn, it is said of the covered cups which were fashioned like embattled castles,

"The coperounes of the canacles. that on the cuppe reres, <sup>1</sup> See hereafter CRASKE, or fryke of fatte, a word which seems to be derivable as a corruption from crassus, or the French crus. Crank, which occurs here in the printed editions of the Promptorium, usually signifies sickly or feeble, but in Kent and Sussex it has the sense of merry or brisk; the reading is, however, questionable, as the word crank does not occur in these editions subsequently, but craske, as in the MSS.

The kind of leather to which this name was applied was originally prepared at Corduba, and thence, according to Junius and Menage, received the appellation.

The Medulla gives "Niretram, tokene of overcomynge." Harl. MS. 2257. The Catholicon gives the following explanation, "dicitur Nicetria filateria, quæ gestat athleta, facta de summitatibus armorum, quæ a victis acciperant." See Du-range.

 fying, as Jamieson observes, a hole or hiding place, Ang. Sax. cruft, crypta, or perhaps approaching most nearly to Isl. korbae, tuguriolum. The floating basket used on the Suffolk coast to keep lobsters, is called, as Forby states, a corf or coy; and it seems possible that this appellation may have been given to the shepherd's hut, from its being formed with wattles, like a rudely-fashioned basket. Caxton, in the Boke for Travellers, calls a basket a "corffe, or mande."

<sup>2</sup> A distinction seems to be made in the Promptorium between the CORMUSE and the BAGGE-PYPE, pandua, a word which has occurred previously. Chaucer speaks of the great multitude that he saw in the House of Fame,

"That made loud Minstralcies
 In cornmuse and shalmies." Book iii.

In the Romance of the Rose he describes the discordant sounds produced by Wicked Tongue "with hornepipes of cornewaille," evidently identical with the cornmuse.
 Palsgrave renders "Bagge-pype, cornemuse," in low Latin, "cornemusa, vox ab Itulis et Hispanis usurpata, ater symphoniacus." DCC. Hawkins has given in the Hist. of Music, vol. ii. 453, a representation of the cornamusa or bagpipe, copied from the Musurgia of Luscinius, published at Strasburg, 1536. Dr. Burney observes that "the cornmuse was the name of a horn or Cornish pipe, blown like our bagpipe."
 Vol. ii. 270. This instrument appears to have been in favour as an accompaniment of the dance. Roquefort gives it another appellation, estive; and in the list of Minstrels who played before Edward I. in 1306, when Prince Edward was knighted, are found Hamond Lestivour, and Geffrai le Estivour. See the volume presented to the Roxburghe Club by Mr. Botfield, on Manners and Household Expenses in England, p. 142.

is fully explained by Durandus. See Lyndwood's Observations on the Constitutions of Abp. Walter Reynold, 1322, p. 235. The Constit. of the Bishops of Worcester in 1229 and 1240, required that in every Church should be provided "duo paria corporaliū," and the Synod of Exeter in 1287, ordained that in every Church should be "duo corporalia cum repositoriis." Wilkins, Conc. i. 623, 666, ii. 139. The repositorium, or case wherein the corporas was inclosed, when not in use, was richly embroidered, or adorned with precious stones; it was termed likewise theca, capsa, or bursa corporaliū. See the inventories of the gorgeous vestments and ornaments at St. Paul's, 1295, Mon. Angl. iii. 321. "Corporale, alba palla in altari, Anglice, a corporalle." ORTUS. "A corporax, corporale." In Octovian a dealer in horses is termed a "corsere." See Weber's Metr. Rom. iii. 191. Horman says, "Corsers of horses (mangones) by false menyys make them loke fresshe." "He can horse you as well as all the corsers in the towne, courtiers de chevaux." PALSG.

hangings with which the side-walls of a hall were garnished, previously to the more general use of wainscot, appear to have been termed costers. The name was applied likewise to hangings, either in a church at the sides of the choir, or in a hall near the high table, as a kind of screen, or even to the curtains of a bed. In the Register of the ornaments of the Royal Chapel at Windsor, taken 1385, 8 Ric. II. under the head of "Panni," several are enumerated. "Duo costers panni magni de Velveto, pro principalibus diebus, rubei et viridis coloris, cum magnis imaginibus stantibus in tabernaculo." Mon. Ang. T. iii. part 2, p. 81. Ralph Neville, Earl of Westmerland, bequeathed in 1424 to his wife a third part of his estate, "cum uno lecto de Arras operato cum auro, cum costeris eidem pertinentibus et concordantibus;" and to his son Richard another bed of Arras, "cum costeris paled de colore rubeo viridi et albo, qui solbant pendere in magnâ camerâ in fra castrum de Sherifhoton." Madox, Formul. p. 132.

"And by a riuer forth I gan costeie."

Palsgrave gives the verb "to coste a cuntry or place, ryde, go, or sayle about it, costier or costoyer. To hym that coulde coste the cuntry, there is a nerer way by syxe myle."

tibus, Earl of Albemarle, who died 1260, still exists, and an engraving of it is given in the Vetusta Monum. VI. plate 18. Among the earlier representations may be mentioned the effigies at Salisbury of William Longespee, who died 1266, and of a knight of the De l'Isle family at Rampton, Cambridgeshire. See Stothard's Monumental Effigies. Sir Thomas de la More relates that the Earl of Gloucester was slain at Bannockburn, 1314, in consequence of his neglecting to put on his insignia, termed in the Latin translation "togam propria armaturâ." Chaucer relates that the heralds after the conflict distinguished Arcita and Palamon by their "cote armure," as they lay in the "tas" severely wounded. Knight's Tale, 1018. An early instance of the use of the term coat-armour occurs in the Close Roll, 2 Edw. III. 1328, where the King commands the keeper of his wardrobe to render up "armors armaturas, tam cotearmurs quam alias," which had belonged to Bartholomew de Badlesmere, deceased, for the use of Giles his son, to whom the King had given them. Rymer, iv. 371. During the reign of Edward III. the surcote gave place to the jupon, and this was succeeded, about the time that the Promptorium was compiled, by the tabard, the latest fashion of a garment armorially decorated, and the prototype of that which is still worn by the heralds and pursuivants.

<sup>1</sup> The inferior tenants, or occupiers of cottages, are termed in the Domesday Book cotarii or cocets, in Ang. Sax. cotsæta, cotsæ habitatōr, in French cotarel, or costerel. Ducange and Spelman make no distinction between cotarelli and cotarii, but Bp. Kennett thinks there was an essential difference, and that the coterelle held in absolute villenage. See his Glossary, Paroch. Ant.

that "cowde is an old English word, signifying a gobbet, moreell, or peece of any thing cut out," but he appears to have taken it from the Promptorium, and Skinner gives it on his authority. Possibly cowde may have some analogy with eud, which in the Promptorium is written eodl. See above CHEW the eodl. Ang. Sax. eud, romana.

<sup>2</sup> Among the virtues of "hurhowne," as stated in a translation of Macer's Treatise on Plants, MS. XVth Cent. belonging to Hugh W. Diamond, Esq. is the following: "his erbe y-dronke in olde wyne helpiþ þe kynges hoste, and þe comone coghe eke." In another place a decoction of roots of "skyrewhite" is recommended to heal "þe chynke and þe olde coghe." Skinner says the whooping-cough was termed in Lincolnshire kin-cough, and derives the word from the Belg. kienkhost, and the verb kinchen, difficulter spirare. See hereafter HOOSE, or cowghe, and HOSTYN.

<sup>3</sup> "Coupe or coule for capons, or other poultrie ware, vaige aux chappons." PAISG. The name was probably assigned in consequence of a supposed similarity to a monk's cowl, whence likewise the name has been given to the covering of a chimney. Ang. Sax. cuhle, cuculla. Elyot gives "scirpca, a dounge potte, or colne made with roddes."

<sup>4</sup> The cope was originally worn with a hood, which at a subsequent time was represented only by embroidery on the back. Hence, probably, this garment was sometimes termed a cowle. Chaucer repeatedly terms the monastic habit a cope. See the description of Huberd the Frere, who was not like a "cloisterere,"

"With thredbare cope as is a poure scolere.
 Of double worsted was his semicope,
 That round was as a belle, out of the presse."

See Kennett's Glossary, under the word cowle; he supposes it to be derived from cacula, a vessel shaped like a boat.

eulstaffe," ORTUS. "Courge, a stang, pale-staffe, or cole-staffe, carried on the shoulder, and notched for the hanging of a pale, at both ends." COTGR. In Caxton's Mirror of the World, c. 10, A.D. 1481, it is related that in Ynde "the clustres of grapes ben so grete and so fulle of muste, that two men ben gretly charged to bere one of them only vpon a colestaff." In Hoole's translation of the Orbis sensualium by Comenius, 1658, is given a representation of the cole-staff (cruciat) used for bearing a burden between two persons, p. 135; and again at p. 113, where it appears as used by brewers to carry to the cellar the newly-made beer in "soes," or tubs with two handles (labra), called also cowls. In Brand's Popular Antiquities, ii. 107, will be found an account of the local custom of riding the cowl-staff, or stang.

<sup>1</sup> At the period when the Promptorium was compiled, calculations were usually made by means of the abacus, or counting-board, and counters, which were chiefly the pieces of base metal to which the name of Nuremburgh tokens has commonly been given. The "augrim stones" mentioned by Chaucer in the Miller's Tale, where he describes the clerk of Oxford's study, probably served the same purpose. Palsgrave gives "counters to cast a count with, act, acton." The science of calculation termed algorism had, however, been partially introduced. See above AWGRYM. The term counter signified also the table on which such accounts were cast, and even the counting-house, in which last sense it occurs in Chaucer, where it is related that the Merchant's wife went to call her husband,

"And knocketh at his countour boldly." Shipman's Tale.

A curious representation of the counter-table occurs in drawings of the time of Edward II. in Sloane MS. 3983. In a letter from Margaret Paston to her husband, about 1459, regarding some alterations in his house, is the following passage: "I have take the measure in the draute cham'yr, as ye wold yof cofers and yof cowntewery shuld be sette for the whyle, and y<sup>r</sup> is no space besyde the bedd, thow the bedd wer remeyd to the dore, for to sette bothe yof bord and yof kofers ther, and to have space to go and sytte besyde." Paston Letters, iii. 324. At a later time there appears to have been a piece of ordinary furniture in the hall of a mansion termed a counter, probably from its resemblance to the table properly so called. In the Inventories printed by the Surtees Society, mention frequently occurs of the counter and the counter-cloths; as likewise of "doble counters, counters of the myddell bynde, Flanders counters with their carpets." Wills and Invent. i. 133, 154, 158.

"A shereve had he ben, and a countour," Cant. Tales, Prol.

A countour appears to have been one retained to defend a cause or plead for another, in old French, contor. See the Stat. 3 Edw. I. c. 21, against deceit or collusion by pleaders, "serjeant, countour, ou autre," who being convicted, should suffer imprisonment, and never again be heard "en la Court le Reg, a conter pour nuluy." It may, however, be questionable whether Chaucer used the term in this sense, and it seems possible that escheator may be meant; the office like that of sheriff was held for a limited time, and was served only by the gentry of name and station in their county.

<sup>2</sup> Creel is given by Moore as a word not frequently used in Suffolk; Forby does not mention it, but it occurs in the Craven dialect, and signifies an ozier basket, or crate. See Jamieson's Dictionary. Roquefort explains creil as signifying a hurdle, craticula. LEPE occurs hereafter.

<sup>4</sup> Precyousstone, MS. "Crapaude, a precious stone, crapauline." PALSG. Cotgrave explains crapauline as signifying the stone chelonitis, or the toad-stone. The precious stone found, as it was asserted, in the head of a toad, was supposed to possess many virtues, and especially as a preservative against poison. On some of these stones, according to Albertus Magnus, the figure of the animal was imprinted; these were of a green colour, and termed crapaulina, being possibly the kind here called smaragdus, a name which properly denotes the emerald. These stones were known also by the appellations borax, broutin, chelonitis, nise, batrachites, or crumina. In the Metrical Romance entitled Emare is described a rich vesture, thickly set with gems, rubies, topaze, "crapowtes and nakette;" the word is also written "crapawtes." A curious representation of the cresset of the time of Henry III. occurs in one of the subjects from the Painted Chamber, engraved in the Monum. The finishing which surmounts a screen, roof, or other ornamental part of a structure, was called a crest, such as is seen at Exeter Cathedral on the high-ridged roof. The Stat. 17 Edw. IV. c. 4, comprises an enactment respecting the manufacture and dimensions "de tocle, ap-pellez pleintile, autrement nosmez thaktile, roffile, ou crestile," the prescribed length of the last being 13 in. the thickness five-eighths, with convenient deepness accordyng. Crest-tiles, pierced with an ornamental open pattern, were to be seen on the roof of the ancient hall of the Templars, at Temple Balsall, Warwickshire. In Hall's Chron. are described "crestes karned wyth vinettes and trailes of sauage worke," which ornamented the Banqueting-house prepared at Greenwich in 1527. <sup>5</sup> The pastoral staff with a curved head, to which the appellation CLEYSTAFFE has been given previously in the Promptorium, was called croce, crosse, croche, or crutch, words derived from the French croce or croche. "Croce, utans ce nom vient de croc, pource qu'une croce est crochue." NICOT. In Piers Ploughman's Vision, line 5089, it is said that Do-best "bereth a bisshopes crosse," with one extremity hooked: and at the consecration of a church, according to the Legenda Aurea, "the bysshop gooth all aboute thre tymes, and at every tyme that he cometh to that dore, he knocketh with his crosse," in the Latin original "luculo pastorali." Chaucer uses the word croce. "Crosse for a lysshoppe, crosse." PALSG. "Pedum, croche." VOCAB. ROY. MS. 17 C. XVII. "Cambuca, a crutehe." ORTUS. "A cruche, cambuca, pedum." CATH. ANGL. A cestly "cruche" occurs in the Inventory taken at Fountains Abbey, and published by Burton. In Ang. Sax. croce signifies both a cross and a crook, and from similarity of sound between cross and croce, words perfectly distinct in their derivation, some confusion of terms has arisen, especially as regards the usual acceptance of the word crozier, which has been supposed to be incorrect. Crosier, however, properly signifies the pastoral staff, or croce, the incurved head of which was termed in French crosseron, part of the insignia of Bishops: thus in Brooke's Book of Precedents it appears, that at the marriage of Philip and Mary in 1554, the Bishops present had their "crosiers carried before them." Leland, Coll. iv. 398. Fox says that Bonner, who was then Bishop of London, at the degradation of Dr. Taylor in 1555, would not strike him with his "crozier-staff" upon the breast, lest he should strike again. Minshew says that "croce is a shepherd's crooke in our old English; hence the staffe of a Bishop is called the crozier or crozier."

<sup>1</sup> "A croser, cruciferarius, crucifer." CATH. ANG. In the relation of the martyrdom of St. Thomas of Canterbury it is said that "one Syr Edward Gryme, that was his croyser, put forthe his arme with the crosse to bere of the stroke, and the stroke smote the crosse on sonder." Legenda Aur. At the first progress of Henry VII. after his coronation, during the solemnities at York, the Archbishop's "suffragan was croyser, and bar the Archbishops crosse." Lel. Coll. iii. 192. It appears, however, by the Promptorium, that the appellation CROCERE denoted also the bearer of a pastoral staff, or crozier. In this sense Higgins, in the version of Junius' Nomenclator, 1585, renders "lituus, a crozier's staffe, or a Bishop's staffe."

<sup>3</sup> Forby gives crop, as the name applied to the craw of a bird, Teut. krop, stomachus; according to Jamieson it signifies the same in N. Britain, and also the human stomach. Ang. Sax. cropp, gutturis vesicula.

"Nowe stante the crophe vnder the rote,

The world is chaunged ouerall." Conf. Am. Prologue.

<sup>2</sup> Of the barrow, called in the Romance of Sir Amiloun a "croude wain," and still called in the Eastern Counties a crud-barrow, some notice has been taken under the word BAROWE. The use of the verb occurs in the following passage, after the description of the leprous knight being placed in the barrow,

"Then Amoraunt crud Sir Amiloun

Turch mani a cuntre vp and down," Amis and Amiloun.

Moore gives the verb to crowd as signifying in Suffolk to push or shove.

<sup>3</sup> This term, as well as several others of synonymous meaning, appear to be onomatopoeias, and to be traced to their similarity of sound to the noise which they express. The Medulla explains coax to be "vox ranarum, croudyng of padokys." Palsgrave gives "to crowle, crouiller. My bely crowleth, I wene there be some padokes in it." Horman says, "his bely maketh a great crowlyng, patitur bothorygmon." In N. Britain to croud, according to Ruddiman, signifies the noise of frogs. See Jamieson.

The Constitutions of Walter de Cantilupe in 1240 require that in every church there should be "una phiala, una cinaria, altera aquaria;" and at the Synod of Exeter in 1277 it was ordained that there should be "tres phiala." Wilkins, Concil. i. 666, ii. 129. Among the costly bequests of the Black Prince in 1376 to our Lady's altar at Canterbury, are mentioned "deux cructs taillez come deux ancelz, par servir à mesme Pantier perpetuellement." Horman, under the head of things sacred, says, Have pure wyne and water in the cructtes, amalis."

<sup>1</sup> In Norfolk, according to Forby, crish or crush signifies cartilage, or soft bones, and in Suffolk crussel or skrussel has a similar meaning. Ang. Sax. gristl-ban.

<sup>3</sup> The smallest Anglo-Saxon coin was the styca, of which two were equal to a farthing. Ruding observes that the stycas appear identical with the "minuta," Domesd. i. f. 268, and the passage rendered in the Saxon Gospels, "twegen stycas," is in the Wicliffite version, "twieie mynutis, that is a farthing." Mark, xii. 42. See MYNUTE hereafter. In Duncombe's Hist. of Reculver is given a mortmain grant, dated 13 Henry VI. 1435, in which half a farthing is named as a portion of rent paid to the Hospital of Herbaldowne, namely, "xxv schelynges, and the halfin dell of an fferdyng of rente, and rente zeldyng of a quat' of berr," and an heune and a half, a certell (sar-cella) and þe iij parte of a certell," &c. Bibl. Top. i. 151. At the time however that the Promptorium was compiled it does not appear that there was actually a coin of this value; the mite, as well as its equivalent, called here a cu, were merely terms retained in calculation, and the latter was commonly used at Oxford at a much later period. It is thus explained by Minshew, who completed his first edition in that University. "*A cue, i. halfe a farthing, so called because they set down in the Battling or Butterie bookes in Oxford and Cambridge the letter q. for halfe a farthing, and in Oxford when they make that cue or q. a farthing, they say, Cap my q. and make it a farthing, thus q<sup>a</sup>. But in Cambridge they use this letter, a little s. for a farthing, and when they demand a farthing bread or beare, they say a seize of bread or beare. Latin, calculus, a cue of bread.*" The abbreviation q. did not, it plainly appears, always stand as at present for quadrans, a farthing, but denoted a value of only half that amount; and it seems possible that cue or q. may have been an abbreviation of "calculus, quarta pars oboli," ORTUS. The term cue occurs in Beaumont and Fletcher. See Nares's Glossary.

<sup>1</sup> "Terbichetum, a cokstole." ORRUS. "Cokestole, cuckestole, selle a ricaldes." PALSQ. The earliest mention of this mode of punishing female offenders occurs in the laws of Chester in the time of Edward the Confessor, as stated in Doan. i. f. 262, b. The fine for using false measures was fixed at 4 shillings; "similiter molam cerevisie faciens, aut in cathedra ponebatur stercoris, aut iij sol. dabat prepositis." It was called in Ang. Sax. "sealling-stol, sella urinatoria in qua rixose mulieres secentes aquis demergebantur." SOMNER. The pillory for male offenders, and cucking-stole for females, were essentially appendant to the view of frank-pledge, or Leet: inquest was ordered to be made respecting the sufficient provision of both, by the Stat. assigned to 51 Hen. III. c. 6; and among the "Capitulu Escheatrie," one of the duties of the Escheator is declared to be inquiry "de pilloriis et trumbellis sine licentia Regis levatis." Stat. of Realm. i. 201, 240. It was termed, perhaps from its resemblance to a warlike engine so called, trebuchet, or trebuchetum. See hereafter TREBGET for werre. By Bracton it is spoken of as tymborella, and in the Statutes tumbrellus, appellations likewise derived from its construction. An instance of the jealousy with which any unauthorized assumption of this manorial right of punishment was repressed, occurs in the Chron. of Jocelin de Brakelond, p. 38, where it is related that about 1190 certain encroachments were made on the privileges of the Abbot of St Edmund's Bury, in the manor of Illegh; "levaverant homines de Illega quoddam trebuchet ad faciendam iusticiam pro falsis mensuris panis vel bladi mensurandi, unde conquestus est abbas." This punishment was chiefly inflicted in early times on brewers, who are spoken of always as females, for any transgression of the assize of ale, "Braciatrix (paciater) trebuchetum vel castigatorium;" in Scotland it was used in like manner. Stat. of Realm. i. 241, and Skene's Reg. Majest. It became subsequently the punishment of scolds, and women of immoral or disorderly life; thus in the town of Montgomery such offenders were adjudged to suffer the penalty "de la Goging-stoole," as appears by a MS. cited in Blount's Tenures; in the Leet Book of Coventry mention occurs in 1423, of the "cokestowle made apon Chelsmore grene to punysche skolders and chidders, as y<sup>e</sup> law wyll;" and items of account are found so late as 1623, which show that the punishment still continued to be used in that city. Of the "cok-stool" at Norwich, which was to be provided by the guild of St. George, see Blomf. Hist. ii. 739; an account of expenses connected with another at Kingston-on-Thames is given in Lysons's Env. i. 233; and in Lord Braybrooke's Hist. of Audley End, p. 261, are mentioned payments so late as the year 1613, at Saffron Walden, where the scene of such punishments at the end of the High Street is spoken of in 1484 as the "cokstul hend." In 1555 Mary Queen of Scots enacted that itinerant singing women should be put on the cuckstoles of every burgh or town; and the first Homily against contention, part 3, published in 1562, sets forth that "in all well ordered cities common brawlers and scolders be punished with a notable kind of paine, as to be set on the cucking-stole, pillory, or such like." An original cucking-stool, of ancient and rude construction, was preserved in the crypt under the chancel of St. Mary's, Warwick, where may still be seen the three-wheeled carriage upon which was suspended by a long balanced pole a chair which could readily be lowered into the water, when the cumbrous vehicle had been rolled into a convenient situation. This chair is still in existence at Warwick. Another cucking-stool, differently contrived, may be seen at Ipswich in the Custom House; it appears to have been used by means of a sort of a crane, whereby the victim was slung into the river, and is represented in the Hist. of Ipswich, published 1834, and Gent. Mag. Jan. 1831. More detailed information on this curious subject will be found in the

"Al to peeces thai hewed thair sheldes,
 The culpons flegh out in the feldeſ." Ywayne and Gawin, 641.

Hoveden, speaking of the livery allowed to the King of Scotland at the court of King Richard in 1194, says he had "40 grossos longos colpones de dominicâ candelâ Regis." Chaucer says of the long hair of the Pardoner, which hung "by vneces" on his shoulders, "Full thinne it laie, by culpons one and one." Cant. Tales, Prologue.

"Culpon that troute" is given as the proper term of the art, in the "Boke of Kerving," 1508. "Culpit, a large lump of anything." FORBY.

<sup>2</sup> The Persicaria hydropiper, Linn. was called culrage, from the French "curage, culrage, the hearbe water-pepper. arse-smart, kill-ridge or culrage." COTGR. Its aphrodisiac properties are thus alluded to by Piers of Fullham,

"An erbe is cause of all this rage
 In our tongue called culrage." Hartshorne, Metr. Tales, 133.

conuenant, it will accord perfectly with the French word. In the Romance of Sir Amadas, "conande" occurs in the sense of a covenant:

"The conande was gud and fynne." Weber, Metr. Rom. line 700.

In Mr. Robson's edition the word is printed "couand," possibly a contraction of "coudenand," which is found in the context. See stanzas 63, 64, the Anturs of Arther, st. 16, and Awoyng of King Arther, s. 38, where occurs the same word "couand."

<sup>1</sup> Compline, called in Latin Completorium, completa, or complenda, "quod cetera diurna officia complet et claudit," duc. is the service with which in monastic establishments the day closed, after which, by the rule of St. Benedict, all converse was forbidden. It was called in Ang. Sax. niht-sang, vespertina cantio, completorium, and Abbot Ælfric speaks of it in his pastoral Epistle translated from Latin into the language of England, by order, as he states, of Abp. Wulstan. The seven canonical hours, that the four synods had appointed for daily services of praise to God, are in this epistle stated to be matins with the after song appertaining thereto, prime, tierce, sext, none, vespers, and compline (niht-sang). Ancient Laws and Institutes, ii. 377. See also the Regularis concordia Angl. nationis monachorum. Amalarius says, "completorium ideo dicitur quia in eo completur quotidianus usus cibi vel potus, seu locutio communis." De Eccl. Offic. lib. iv. c. 8. The hour of compline is stated by Fuller, in his Church History, B. vi. 278, to have been at 7 o'clock, but in Davies' Rites of the Church of Durham, it is fixed at an earlier hour.

<sup>3</sup> In the Commentary on the Equiv. Vocab. Interpret. of Joh. de Garlandia abacus is explained to be the marble table whereon, in the feasts of the ancients, the cups were placed; "apud modernos fit de aliis lapideibus, sive de lignis artificiose conjunctis, et vocatur a cupborde." The cupboard was, in the more common sense of the word, an open buffet, whereon a rich display of plate was made, such as Hall and other chroniclers describe frequently. It was also sometimes closed with doors, as usual at the present time; such as in the will of Elizabeth Drury, in 1475, is called a "cupbord with two almeries." Rokewode's Hund. of Thingoe, 284. The livery cupboard, often mentioned in accounts and ordinances of household, was open, and furnished with

In the contract for building Hengrave Hall, in 1538, is the following clause; "the hall to have ii. coberds, one benethe at the sper (screen) with a tremor, and another at the hygher tables ende without doors." Palsgrave gives "cupborde of plate, or to sette plate upon, buffet: cupborde to putte meate in, dressouer. Methinke my cupborde is ungarnysshed, nowe I wante my salte celler." Cotgrave renders "Buffet, a court-cupboard, or high standing cupboard; also a cupboard of plate. Dressoir, a court cupboord (without box or drawer)."

<sup>1</sup> The origin of the curfew in England is generally ascribed to the Conqueror, by whom it was imposed in token of servitude, but the assertion seems to rest on no sufficient authority, and no mention of the usage occurs in the Stat. de nocturnis custodiis, Ancient Laws and Instit. i. 491. Dr. Henry observes that the custom prevailed, at the time of the Conquest, in France, and probably in all the countries of Europe, and was intended merely as a precaution against fires, at a time when cities were constructed chiefly of wood. It has been stated also that the custom was abolished by Henry II. The Statutes of the City of London, 13 Edw. I. enjoin that no one shall be found in the streets "après couverfeu personé à Saint Martin le grant." Stat. of Realm, i. 102. Couvre feu, or carfeu in France was rung at 7 in the evening, but in some places at a later hour in summer, and there was also a bell at daybreak. See Pasquier, iv. 18, and Menage. In England the hour of ringing the curfew was eight, Wats, however, gives nine as the hour in summer; that hour is so named in "the Merry Devil of Edmonton," and it was the customary time in Scotland, as appears by Act Parl. 13 James I. 1419, but subsequently was altered to ten. The usage of the curfew is still retained in the Universities, and many towns and villages in England, as is likewise the custom of ringing a bell at day-break, or four o'clock. At Lynn, where the Promptorium was compiled, the largest bell of the principal churches is still tolled at six, both morning and evening, and serves as a signal to labourers and artisans. The salutatio angelica, commonly called the angelus, was recited daily morning and evening, "ad pulsationem ignitegii," an institution ascribed to St. Bonaventure, but more probably, as Ducange observes, to Pope John XXII. at the Council of Sens, 1320. In the Statutes of Lichfield Cathedral, it is ordered as follows: "Est autem ignitegium quolibet nocte per annum pulsandum hora septima post meridiem, exceptis illis festis quibus matutina dicuntur post completorium." In the Institutions of Guarin, Abbot of St. Alban's, who died 1195, the curfew is called pyritigium. Matt. Paris. The Medulla renders "ignitegium, a coure feu," in the Ortus "a fyrepanne," alluding perhaps to such an implement for extinguishing the fire, as is represented in Antiqu. Repert. i. 89, and which was afterwards in the possession of Horace Walpole at Strawberry Hill. "Courefewe, a ryngyng of belles towarde cuenyng, courefew." PALSgrave. In the Romance of the Seunyn Sages the word is repeatedly written "corfour bell." Vith Tale. "Curfur, ignitegium." CATH. ANGL. See curfew in Jamieson. Spelman gives the Ang. Sax. curfu-bell, but it is not found in Lye. See further on this subject Brand's Popular Antiqu. ii. 136, and Barrington on the Anc. Stat. 133.

Richard, Harl. MS. 1319. Archæologia, vol. xx. Chaucer uses also the diminutive dagon; thus in the Sompnoures Tale the importunate Friar, who went from house to house to collect anything he could lay hands upon, craves "a dagon of your blanket, leve dame." Ang. Sax. "dag, anything that is loose, dagling, dangling." SOMN.

"And symple rayment doth serue us full well,
With dagswaynes and roudges we be content."

Harrison relates in the description of England, written in Essex during the reign of Elizabeth, that the old men in his village used to say, "our fathers (yea and we our selues also) haue lien full oft vpon straw pallets, on rough mats couered onelie with a sheet, under couerlets made of dagswain, or hopharlots (I vse their owne termes) and a good round log vnder their heads instead of a bolster." Ducange supposes it may have been the same as the French "trictac, ludus scrupulorum." Horman says that "men play with 3 dice, and children with 4 dalies, astragalus vel talis. A very interesting portraiture of the former will be found in a MS. of XIth cent. Calig. A. XIV. In early times the dalmatic was ornamented with longitudinal bands, called clavi, which were either of gold, as in the illumination just mentioned, or purple; "Dalmata, vestis sacerdotalis candida cum clavis purpureis." Gloss. To these bands were attached at intervals the plagulae, as exhibited in the illumination of the Bible of Charles the Bald at Paris, executed in the IXth century, engraved in Montfaucon Mon. Franc. tom. i, and the splendid work published by the Comte Bastard. See also the curious German Missal, Xth cent. Harl. MS. 2908, and the illumination in Cott. MS. Claud. A. III. supposed to represent St. Dunstan. In the Ang. Sax. Inventory of sacred ornaments given by Bp. Leofric to the church of Exeter about A.D. 1050, occur "2 dalmatica, 3 pistel roccas." Mon. Angl. i. 222. These last were probably tunicles, vestments appropriated to the order of subdeacon, as was the dalmatic to that of deacon; in effigies and representations that exist in England of ecclesiastics in pontificalibus, both vestments are almost invariably exhibited. The Legate Ottoboni ordained, A.D. 1268, that if any Prelate neglected to punish the immoral conduct of his clergy, "Episcopus a dalmatica, tunica, et sandaliorum usu sit suspensus donec duxerit quæ statuta sunt exequenda." Wilkins, Conc. xi. 5.

<sup>2</sup> A very usual sense of the verb to dare, in the old writers, is to gaze about, or stare; Palsgrave gives "to dare, pry, or loke about me, je advise alentour. What darest thou on this faeyon, me thynketh thou woldest catche larkes?"

"With woodcockys lerne for to dare." Lydgate, Minor Poems, 174.

The same signification has been assigned, by Tyrwhitt and the commentators on Chaucer, to an expression occurring in the Shipman's Tale, the true import of which appears above to be made clear. Dan John rallies the old merchant's wife on the sluggishness of her spouse:

"an olde appalled wight,
As ben thise wedded men, that lie and dare,
As in a fourme sitteth a very hare."

Chaucer appears evidently here to use dare in the sense given to the word in the Promptorium of lying concealed, as an animal in its den, which is termed hereafter DWERE, or dower. "Dilatesco, to beginne to dare. Latco, to lurk." MED. Cotgrave gives "blotir, to squat, ly close to the ground, like a daring lark, or affrighted fowle."

"Thin eyen dasen, sothly as me thinketh." Manciple's Prol.

<sup>3</sup> Palsgrave gives the verbs "to dawbe with clay onely; to daube with lime, plaster, or lome, that is tempered with heare or straw. Dauber, placqueur." Forby states that a dauber in Norfolk is a builder of walls with clay or mud, mixed with stubble or short straw well beaten and incorporated, and so becoming pretty durable; it is now difficult to find a good dauber. This mode of constructing fences for farm-yards and cottage walls is much used in Suffolk, as appears by Sir John Cullum's account of the process, Hist. of Hawsted, 195, and Moore's explanation of the term "daabing." The proverb given by Ray, "there's craft in dawbing," would make it appear that this mode of construction was once more generally known; in the Western counties it is still in continual use, being known by the appellations cob, or rad and dab, a curious article on which, and on the use of concrete in building generally, will be found in Quart. Rev. vol. lviii. 524.

"Thus laboureth he, till that the day gan dawce." Marchant's Tale.

Palsgrave gives "to dawce as the day dothe, adjourner, l'aube se erieve. To dawce from <sup>1</sup> DAWNCYN', MS. "To dawnte, blanditractare," CATH. ANGL. In N. Britain to dawt has the same signification. See Jamieson. In the vision of Piers Ploughman to daunt appears to mean to tame by kind treatment; the allusion is to the dove which was trained by Mahomet to come to his car for her food.

"Thorough his sotle wittes
He daunted a dowve." Vision, line 1042.

In Norfolk to daunt is used in the sense of knocking down, Fr. dompter, as by Palsgrave, "To dawnte, mate, overcome, je matte. Lydgate. This terme is yet searsly admitted in our comen spetche."

<sup>2</sup> See BARATOWRE. In "the Charge of the Quest of Warmot in euery Warde," given by Arnold, in the Customs of London, p. 90, inquiry is ordered to be made "yf ther be ony comon ryator, barratur, &c. dwelling wythin the warde." The term is taken from the French barateur, in low Latin baraterius, which have the same meaning.

See also line 457. In the same sense it is used in the Wicliffite version, and by Gower. To defy has also the signification of dissolve; thus Master Langfrank of Meleyne in one of his prescriptions, directs certain substances to be compounded, and "make pelotes, and defy one of heme in water of rewe." MS. in the possession of Sir Thomas Philipps. See FYIN, or defyin mete and drynk.

<sup>2</sup> Jamieson observes that deaf signifies properly stupid, and the term is transferred in a more limited sense to the ear. It is also applied to that which has lost its germinating power; thus in the North, as in Devonshire, a rotten nut is called deaf, and barren corn is called deaf corn, an expression literally Ang.-Sax. An unproductive soil is likewise termed deaf. The plant lamium, or archangel, known by the common names dead or blind nettle, in the Promptorium, has the epithet DEFFE, evidently because it does not possess the stinging property of the true nettle.

<sup>3</sup> "Androchia, a deye," Vocab. Harl. MS. 1002. "A deye, Androchius, androchea, genutarius, genethuria. A deye, ondrockiarium, bestiarium, genethum." CATH. ANG. The deya is mentioned in Domesday, among assistants in husbandry, and the 2d Stat. 25 Edw. III., A.D. 1351, occasioned by the exorbitant demand for wages made by servants after the pestilence, enacts that "chescun charatter, carver, chaceour des curues, bercher, porcher, deye et tous autres sercantz" should be content with such rate of wages as had been previously usual, and serve not by the day, but the year, or other usual term. The term is again found in Stat. 37 Edw. III., A.D. 1363, c. 14, "de rieta et vestitu," which defines the homely provision and attire suitable to the estate of "chariters, &c. bovers, vachers, berchers, porchers, deys, et tous autres gardeinz des bestes, batours des blez, et toutes maneres des gentz d'estate de garson, entendantz à husbandrie," not having goods or chattels of 40s. value. The word is rendered here in the translations "deyars," and "dairymen," and by Kelham is explained to signify drivers of geese. The Stat. 12 Rich. II. c. 4, A.D. 1388, fixes the wages of all servants for husbandry, and rates the porcher, femme laborer, and deye at xjs. each by the year. The word is here translated "deye" and "deyrie woman." In the Stat. 23 Hen. VI. c. 13, by which the wages of such servants were assessed at double the previous rate, the term deye is no longer used. It appears by Fleta, l. ii. c. 87, de caseatrice, that the ondrochia was a female servant who had the charge of all that pertained to the "daëria," and of making cheese and butter. A more detailed account of her duties is given by Alex. Neecham, Abbot of Cirencester, A.D. 1213, in his Summa de nominibus utensilium. "*Assidit androgia (vni boese) que gallinis ova supponit pullificancia, et ascribitur acra substeruat; que agnello morbidos, non dico amicos, in sua teneritate lute forcat alieno. Titus, D. xx. f. 15 b. The French interlinear gloss which gives here baesse, signifying a female servant of an inferior class, is not contemporary with the MS. This account satisfactorily illustrates Chaucer's description of the poor widow who lived on the produce of her little farm, her three sows and kine, and one sheep; her fare was milk and brown bread in plenty,

"Seinde bacon, and sometime an ey or twey,

For she was as it were a maner dey." Nonnes Priest's Tale.

The deye was sometimes a male servant; thus in the commentary on Neeham it is stated that "androgia dicitur ab andros, vir, et genet, mulier, quia id officium exercetur a viro et muliere," and Bp. Kennett cites the "comptus Henrici Dege et uxoris de exitibus et proventibus de dayri," A.D. 1407. See the word kevere in his Glossary. Palsgrave gives "dey wyfe, méterie," i. e. métayèe, and Shakespeare speaks of the "day woman," Love's Labour Lost, i. sc. 2. See Douce's Illustrations. Jamieson has discussed the obscure etymology of the word dey. In Gloucestershire and the neighbouring counties day-house signifies dairy-house, and many instances are met with among names of places. See Hartshorne's Salopia Antiqua.

Gawayn and Grene Knyȝt, 2909.

Palsgrave gives "delyuer of ones lymmes, as they that prove mastryes, souple; de-lyver, redy, quicke to do anything, agile, delivre; delyuernesſe of body, soupleſſe." Thomas, in his Italian Grammar, renders "suello, quicke, deliuer." BEYN, or plynante, has already occurred, and bain is still used in Norfolk in the same sense; the word has also, as shown by Jamieson, the sense of alert, lively, active, or of prepared, made ready, as has been observed above in the note on BAYNYD, as benys or pesyn.

<sup>2</sup> The verb to delve, Ang. Sax. delfan, appears to have become obsolete in Norfolk, and is now rarely used in Suffolk, but the substantive delf, a deep ditch or drain, is still retained. The verb occurs frequently in early writers. In the Legenda Aur. occurs this expression, "I have dolphen in the depe erthe;" and it is related that when St. Donate conjured his wife, after her death, to reveal where she had concealed some treasure, "she answered out of the sepulchre, and sayd, at the entre of the hous, where I dalue it." In the Wicliffite version, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 10, the expression occurs, "stonys hewid out of þe delues (þer quarreris)." Cott. MS. Claud. E. II. "Aurifella, a gold delfe." Vocab. Harl. MS. 1002. Delph and delf occur not infrequently as names of places in the fenny districts of the Eastern counties.

In the will of Lady Fitzhugh, A.D. 1427, is the bequest, "I wyl yat myn howsehold s'uantz haue departed emäg theym a C. mare." Wills and Inv. Surtees Soc. i. 75. So it is said of Christ in the Legenda Aur. "he shall departe the heete of the fyre fro the resplendour and bryghtnesse." Palsgrave gives the verb, "to departe, deuyde thynges asonder that were myxed or medled together; departe this skayne of threde, dismacer. <sup>1</sup> The verb to dere, or hurt, is commonly used by Chaucer, and most writers, until the XVth century.

Fabyan observes, under the year 1194, "so fast besyed this good Kyng Rycharde to vex and dere the infydelys of Sury." Palsgrave gives "to dere, or hurte, or noye, nuire; I wyll never dere you by my good wyll. To dere, grieve, blecer; a lytell thyng wyll dere hym." Sir Thomas Browne mentions dere among words peculiar to Norfolk, in which county it still has the sense of sad or dire. See Jamieson. Ang. Sax. derian, nocere, derung, lasio. NOYYNGE occurs hereafter.

<sup>2</sup> The term dese, Fr. deis or daix, Lat. dasium, is used to denote the raised platform which was always found at the upper end of an hall, the table, or, as here in the Promptorium, the seat of distinction placed thereon, and finally the hanging drapery, called also seler, cloth of estate, and in French ciel, suspended over it. With regard to its etymology, various conjectures have been offered by Ducange, Menage, and others. See also Jamieson's Dictionary. Matt. Paris, in his account of the election of John de Hertford, Abbot of St. Alban's, A.D. 1235, and the customary usages on the occasion, says, "solus in refectorio prandebit (electus) supremus, habens vastellum, Priore prandente ad magnam mensam quam Dais vulgariter appellamus." Ducange suggests that vastellum may here mean a canopy or hanging dais, from Ang. Sax. vatel, tegmen, umbraculum. Chaucer, in his Prologue, describes the haberdasher and his companions, members of a fraternity, and having the appearance of fair burgesses, such as sit "at a yeld hal, on the hie deys." Gower speaks of a king at his coronation feast, "sittend upon his hie deis." In the Boke of Curtasye, Sloane MS. 1986, f. 17, written about the time of Henry VI. a person coming into the hall of a lord, at the time of first meat, is advised not to forget

Sittand at de deshe þou haylse in fere."

In the ceremonial of the inthronization of Abp. Nevill, A.D. 1464, after the Lord and the strangers had entered, the marshal and other officers were to go towards the "hygh table, and make obeisance, first in the midst of the hall, and agayne before the hygh dease." Leland, Coll. vi. 8.

<sup>1</sup> This verb is directly taken from the old French descrier, and is by some writers used to denote the enuntiation, or distinction generally of the combatants by their coat armour, either previously to entering the lists, or at other times, duties which devolved upon the heralds.

"Heraudes goode discoverours

Har strokes gon descrye." Lybeaus disconus, line 926.

In the Vision of Piers Ploughman occurs an allusion to the usage that heralds of arms "discryued lordes." Palsgrave gives "to descryue or descrybe or declare ye facyons or maners of a thyng, blasonner"; Ptoleme hath discryued ye worlde."

In the Avowynge of King Arther, edited by Mr. Robson, to "dedur" has the sense of shaking, as one who is soundly beaten; and in the Towneley Mysteries, Noah's wife, hearing his relation of the approaching deluge, says,

"I dase and I dedir

<sup>3</sup> This verb is given in a somewhat different sense, namely, of suffering acutely, "to dindylle, condolere." CATH. ANGL. Brockett gives to dinnel, or dindle, to be affected with a pricking pain, such as arises from a blow, or is felt by exposure to the fire after frost. In the Craven dialect to dinnle has a similar signification. Langham, in the Garden of Health, 1579, recommends the juice of feverfew as a remedy for the "eares ache, and dindling." Dutch, tintelen, to tingle.

<sup>4</sup> The office for the dead received the name of DYRYGE, or dirge, from the Antiphon with which the first nocturne in the mattens commenced, taken from Psalm v. 8, "Dirige, Domine Deus meus, in conspectu tuo viam meam." In 1421, Joanna, relict of Sir Thos. de Hemgrave, directed daily mass to be said for his and her own souls, and the anniversaries to be kept with a solemn mass, "cum placebo et dirige." Among the "coosts laid out at the monthes mynde" of Sir Thos. Kytson at Hengrave, 1540, occur payments "to M<sup>r</sup> p'sson for dirige and masse, ijs.; to iiij prists for dirige and masse, xij*d.*; to the clark for dirige and masse, xij*d.*." <sup>1</sup> In the Wicliffe version, disperplid, disperpriled, displarplid, and disparpoylid, occur in the sense of dispersed. In the curious version of Vegocius, attributed to Trevisa, Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. the danger is set forth of surprise by an ambush, while the host is unprepared, some employed in eating, "and somme disperbled and departede in oper besynes." B. III. c. 8. In a sermon by R. Winbeldon, as given by Fox, A.D. 1389, it is said that "by Titus and Vespasianus Jerusalem was destroyed, and the people of the Jewes were disparkled into all the world." Palsgrave gives "to disparpyll, Lydgate, same as disparke, escarter, disparser. They be disparkled now many a mile asonder." See hereafter SPARPLYſ.

<sup>2</sup> This verb is used by Chaucer, and occurs in the Wicliffe version. "And they seynge him walkynge on the see weren disturblid." Matt. xiv. 26. So also in the version of Vegocius, Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. it is said that a young soldier should be taught "that he destrowble nat the ordre of ordeuance." The Mayor of Norwich, on being sworn, made proclamation "that iche man kepe the pees, and that no man disturble, ne breke the forseid pees, ne go armed." A.D. 1424, Blomf. Hist. ii. 109.

indicate that it was originally written dywere, or diwere, which may be derived from the old French, "divers, inconstant, bizarre, incommode." ROQUEF. It occurs, however, written as above, in a poem by Humphrey Brereton, who lived in the reign of Hen. VII. which has been printed under the title of "the most pleasant song of Lady Bessy, eldest daughter of King Edw. IV."

"That time you promised my father dear,
 To him to be both true and just,
 And now you stand in a disweare,
 Oh Jesu Christ, who may men trust!"

<sup>2</sup> It appears that the compiler of the Promptorium assigned to baltheus, which properly signifies the cingulum militare, the unusual meaning of a garment of defence. Thus COTE ARMURE previously is rendered baltheus. The Catholicon explains "diplois, duplex vestis, et est vestis militaris," but it does not appear to have been originally, as it subsequently became on the disuse of the gambeson, a garment of defence. The doubletus mentioned in the Constitutions of Fred. II. King of Sicily, in the XIVth century, was a garment of ordinary use by nobles and knights, as were also, it is probable, the rich garments provided for John II. of France, in 1352, when Stephen de Fontaine, his goldsmith, accounts for the delivery of "un fin drap d'or de damas, et un fin camocas d'outremor, pour faire deux doublés." At this period wadded defences were made in Paris by the armuriers, and the tailors were divided into two crafts, pourpointiers and doubletiers; it was only in 1358 that the Regent Charles, on account of the use of the doublet becoming general, permitted the tailors to exercise also the craft of doubletiers. See the Reglemens sur les Métiers, edited by Depping, p. 414. Shortly after, however, the doublet appears as a military defence; "25 doublettes, 24 jakkes," and other armours, are enumerated among the munitions of Hadleigh Castle granted in 1405 by Henry IV. to his son Humphrey. Rymer, viii. 334. The importance at this time attached to the manufacture of this kind of armour appears by the privileges conceded in 1407 to the "armurariis linearum armorum civitatis Londonie." Pat. 9 Hen. IV. confirmed 18 Hen. VI. and 5 Edw. IV. It is related that the Duke of Suffolk, when murdered at sea in 1450, was attired in a "gown of russet, and doblotte of velvet mayled;" Paston Letters, i. 40; and in the curious inventories of the effects of Sir John Fastolf, at Caistor, in Norfolk, 1459, occur "j dobllettis of red felwet uppon felwet; j dowbelet of rede felwet, lynynd with lymen clothe." 253. See further Sir Samuel Meyrick's valuable observations on military garments worn in England, Archæol. xix. 228. At a later time the doublet seems again to have become a vestment of ordinary use, the military garment which resembled it being termed a coat of fence. "I wyll were a cote of defence for my surete, loricâ lintheâ." HORM. Caxton says "Donaas the doblert maker hath performed my doublet and my jaquet, non pourpainte, et non paltoque." Book for Travellers.

<sup>1</sup> DORCERE, MS.; but this reading is evidently erroneous, and the word is derived from the French dossier, or Latin dossierium. See DOSSE, and DORCERE, which occurs afterwards in its proper place. In a Latin-English Vocabulary, Harl. MS. 1002, f. 144, occur "auleum, scannarium, a dosure;" and another makes the following distinction: "anabatrum, hedosour, dorsorium, syd-dosour." Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. The term occurs in the Awntyrs of Arthure, 431, where a costly pavilion is described;

"Pighte was it powdely, withe purpure and paille,
 And dossours, and qweschyns, and bankowres fulle bryghte."

Sir F. Madden explains it as signifying here a cushion for the back, but in its usual sense it seems to denote the hangings or "hallyngs," of tapestry, which, before the use of wainscot, were generally used to cover and adorn the lower part of the wall of a chamber. Chaucer uses the word "dosser" in a different sense, speaking of fallow twigs, which men turn to various uses,

"Or maken of these paniers,
 Or else hutches and dossers." H. of Fame, iii. 850.

Panners are still called, in many parts, dosses, dorsels, or dorsers. See Ray and Moore. Hollyband renders "lotte, a basket, a dosser."

<sup>2</sup> Doddled is used in the North in this sense; see Brockett, and Craven Dialect. Jamieson gives doddy and dottit with a similar signification. In Norfolk doddy still means low in stature. Phillips has "dodded, lopped as a tree;" and in Suffolk scathed or withered trees are called dooted, in the North doddered, words which appear to be derivable from the same source. Skinner suggests "Belg. dodde, caulis, justis, paxillus."

<sup>3</sup> This word does not occur in the other MSS.; the reading is probably corrupt, and, from the place in which it occurs, DOGON' may be suggested as a correction. This term of contempt seems to be derived from the French "Dogaïn, brutal, hargueux." ROQUEF. See Dugon in Jamieson's Dictionary.

Paston Letters, iii. 32. Forby gives this word as still used in Norfolk, the mark being often a low post, called a dool-post; it occurs also in Tusser. Bp. Kennett states that landmarks, or boundary-stones, are in some parts of Kent called "dowle-stones," and explains dole or doul as signifying "a bulk, or green narrow slip of ground left unplowed in arable land." See his Glossarial Collections, Lansd. MS. 1033. Queen Elizabeth, in her Injunctions, 1559, directs that at the customary perambulations on the Rogation days, the admonition shall be given, "Cursed be he which translateth the boundes and dolles of his neighbor." <sup>3</sup> The grammar most universally used in the middle ages was that composed by Ælius Donatus in the IVth century, and the term Donet became generally expressive of a system of grammar. See Warton's Eng. Poet. i. 281, Clarke's Bibl. Diet. iii. 144. It was printed among Gramm. Vet. Putsch. p. 1735. The rich hall prepared for the education of the son of the Emperor was decorated with symbols of grammar, musick, astronomy, geometry, arithmetic, rhetoric, and physic.

"Therinne was paint of Donet thre pars,
 And eke alle the seven ars." Seuyñ Sages, 151.

Archæol. xxi. 268. A previous entry mentions a "donge of purple sylke."

<sup>4</sup> "Analeum, dorsarium, cortina, anabatrū, anastrū, dosure or curtayne; colat-rale, syd-dosour." Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. "A dorsure, dorsorium." CATH. ANG. Among the cloths of arras and tapestry work belonging to Sir John Fastolfe, at Caistor, enumerated in the curious inventories taken about the year 1459, occur several "hallyngs" of tapestry and worsted, a term probably synonymous with dorsure. Archæol. xxi. 259. See above, DOCERE.

<sup>1</sup> This name for a faucet appears to be a corruption of ductalus, which in the Latin-English Vocab. Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. is rendered "dosselle," as the word is more commonly written, from the French doisil, doucil, or according to Cotgrave, "doisil, a faucet." Among the pertinencia promptuario, in another Vocabulary, Harl. MS. 1002, is given "clipsidra, a doselpyn." In the Seuyng Sages, it is related how Yporas pierced a tun in a thousand places:

"And tho he hadde mad holes so fele,
 In ech he pelt a dosele." line 1150.

"Vostre paste dount pestrez, (kned bi douw)

De yn rastuer (a douw ribbe) le auge (a trow) moundez,

Sount diuerses en lour mester." Arund. MS. 220, f. 299, b.

Hence it appears to have served for scraping and cleansing the kneading trough. Another implement, termed likewise a rybbe, was used in the preparation of flax. See hereafter RYBBE, and RYBBYN flax.

<sup>2</sup> In the Forme of Cury, p. 20, will be found recipes for egurdouce, a compound of the flesh of rabbits or kids with currants, onions, wine, and spices; and for egurdouce of fysshe, pp. 63, 113. Directions are also given for concocting "an egge dows," which seems more to resemble the mixture alluded to in the Promptorium, being composed of almonds, milk, vinegar, and raisins. Mulsus signifies a kind of mead, and dowce egyr was probably much the same as oximel.

"Why shuld I sowen draf out of my fist, Whan I may sowen whete, if that me list." Persones Prol.

In the Reve's Tale the scholar John complains of being left to lie in his bed "like a draf sak." So likewise in Piers Ploughman's Vision, where allusion is made to casting pearls to swine, it is said that

"Draf were hem levere,

Than al the precious perree," line 5617.

Paris has given a charter of Guarin, Abbot of St. Alban's, dated 1194, in which the word drascum occurs, which appears to signify the grains that remain after brewing, called in French drasche, or drague. Compare CORALLE, or drasse of corne, and DROSSE.

<sup>1</sup> Numerous virtues are ascribed by Macer and other writers to the herb dragaunce or nedder's tongue, called also dragon wort, addyrwort, or serpentine, arum or aron. See Roy. MS. 18 A. VI. f. 73. Macer says that "water of dragaunce ys gode to wasshe venome soris," and it appears to have been yearly distilled in the household of the Earl of Northumberland, 1511. See Antiqu. Rep. iv. 234. "Dragence, or nedder gryffe, dragancia, basilica, herba serpentina." CATH. ANG.

"Ful redy hadde he his apothecaries,

To send him dragges, and his lettuaries." Cant. Tales, Prol.

<sup>3</sup> In the XIIIth century the grains chiefly cultivated in England, as appears by the accounts of the bailiff of the royal manor of Marlborough, Rot. Pip. 1 Edw. I., were wheat, "berceorn, dragg," or a mixture of vetches and oats, beans and pease. The regulations for the brewers of Paris, in 1254, prescribe that they shall brew only "de grains, c'est à savoir, d'orge, de mestuel, et de dragée;" Règlemens sur les Arts, ed. by Depping. Tusser speaks of dredge as commonly grown in the Eastern counties.

"Sow barley and dredge with a plentiful hand."

"Thy dredge and thy barley goe thresh out to malt."

Bp. Kennett, in his glossarial collections, Lansl. MS. 1033, mentions "dredge mault, malt made of oats mixed with barley malt, of which they make an excellent fresh quick sort of drink," used in Staffordshire. "Dragée aux chevaux, provender of divers sorts of pulse mixed together." COTGR. See MESTLYONE, or monge corne.

<sup>4</sup> "Drake, or darnylle, zizannia." CATH. ANG. The gloss on Gautier de Biblesworth makes a distinction between these two weeds:

"Le queray (darnel) i crest, et le betel (drauke)."

Gerard assigns the name to a species of Bromus sterilis, which he calls small wild oats, in Brabant called drauich, and Skinner suggests that the name may be derived "a Bely, draugh, siccus, quia et actu et potentia siccum est." Drawke or drake is well known in Norfolk and Suffolk, and Forby says it is the common darnel grass, lolium perenne.

Horman says "the drastys (flores) of the wyne be medieynable." Ang. Sax. dresten, fores.

<sup>1</sup> The drift of the forest, agitatio animalium in forestâ, is a legal term which implied a view taken of the cattle feeding in the chase, forest, or waste, at certain seasons when they were driven into an enclosure, in order to ascertain whose they were, and whether legally commonable. The Stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 13, among various clauses, devised for the improvement of the breed of horses, directs the drift to be made at Michaelmas, and other convenient times, and under-sized horses to be destroyed. The word is used by Horman metaphorically, in its more ordinary acceptation, "subtyle dryftis (callida consilia) ought nat to sette a iudge out of the ryght wey." Elyot renders "adpulsus, the dryfte of shepe to the water."

<sup>2</sup> "To dryte, cacare, egerere." CATH. ANG. In the Wieliffite version, Phil. iii. 8, is thus rendered; "I deme alle thingis as drit;" and the word occurs also in Wieliffe's "Objections of Freres. Freres setten more by stinking dritt of worldly goods, then they don by virtues, and goods of bliss." See Jamieson's observations on the etymology of the verb to drite, exonerare ventrem. Ang. Sax. gedritan, cacare.

"Good droy to serve hog, to help wash, and to milk,
 More needfull is truly, than some in their silk."

Sax. drefend, turbidus." Forby mentions drovy, used in Norfolk as an epithet of loathing, on account of filthiness of the person. Ang. Sax. drof, conosus.

"Irous Cambises was eke dronkelew,

And ay delighted him to ben a shrew." Sompnoure's Tale.

Horman uses the word "dronkleu, dronkeleu." In a curious treatise on Obstetrics of the latter part of the XVth century, Add. MS. 12, 195, are particular instructions for the selection of a nurse, among whose recommendations are "þat sche be wysse and well a-yyssyd, and þat sche lof þe chylde, and þat sche be not dronkeleche."

<sup>2</sup> Chaucer makes repeated allusion to the somniferous qualities of the night-shade, or dwale, the Atropa belladonna.

 Why slepen ye? it is no nitertale." Court of Love.

A strange effect is attributed to this plant in a volume of miscellaneous collections, once belonging to William Worcestre, Sloane MS. 4, p. 2. "For to take alle maner of byrdis. Take whete, or other corne, and take guse of dwale, and menche þe corne þer yn, and ley yt þer þe byrdis hawntene, and when they have eten þer of, þey shalle slepe, þat ye may take þem with yowre handys." According to the explanation given of birrus, the garment called a DUDDE seems to have been a coarse wrapper or dread-nought, probably the same as the Irish mantle made of raw wool, which was in request in England as late as the time of Charles I., as appears by the Custom-house rates. "Birrum, vestis pilosa seu grossa, a schyppe's mauntel." ORTUS. Forby gives to duddle up, or wrap up with clothes; in the North, as well as other parts of England, rags or clothes in general are called dudds; and Grose mentions a square in Stourbridge fair, where linen cloth was sold, called the duddery. See Jamieson.

<sup>4</sup> By early writers this word is written very variously, but approaching more or less to the Ang. Sax. dweorg, dweorh, nanus, which in the valuable fragment of Ælfrie's Glossary, discovered by Sir Thomas Phillipps, in the Chapter Library, Worcester, is written "dwæruh." Thus the gloss on G. de Bibelesworth, "Ico rey ester un petit neym (dwerouh)." Arund. MS. 220. In Lybeaus Disconus "dwerk" occurs repeatedly, and in King Alisaunder we read of "durwes, the leynt of an elne." In Synonym. Harl. MS. 1002, f. 173, occurs the word "dwarof," and in Cath. Ang.

EDDYR, or neddyr, wyrmes. Serpens.

"a dwarghe, tanillus." See duergh and droich in Jamieson's Dictionary. In the Catholicon is given the following explanation: "Sessillus, i. parvus staturâ, quia non videtur stare, sed sedere;" and the Ortus gives "Nanus, a dwarfe, or a lytell Turke." Compare COONYONE, or drowtly. Bp. Kennett gives the word "dwerowe" as of local use, but in the Eastern counties it appears to be no longer known; in his glossarial collections, Lansd. MS. 1033, is the term "durgan, of short or low stature, as, he is a durgan, a meer durgan, a durganly fellow. Isl. duergur, Kiliano, dwergh. Westm(erland) a dwarwh."

<sup>1</sup> The Medulla explains bigermen to be the mixed grain called in the Promptorium MESTLYONE, but it seems here to signify after-grass, or after-math, still called edgrow in some parts of England. Bp. Kennett mentions the word in his glossarial collections, Lansd. MS. 1033. "Eddish, roughings or after-math in meadows, but more properly the stubble or gratten in corn-fields, from Sax. edise, quod post messem in campis relinquitur. esh, as a wheat esh, a barley ash. In Cheshire eddgrew, eddgrow, eddgrowth, from the Saxon preposition ed (which in composition denotes allwaie again, as re in the Latin,) and growan, germinare, crescere." This word is not noticed by Mr. Wilbraham, and it does not appear in the East Anglian Glossaries; in Shropshire, according to Holway's Provincial Dictionary, the after-grass is called "edgrew," or, as stated by Mr. Hartshorne, "headgrove, or headgrow." Salopia Antiqua. The common appellation both in Norfolk and Suffolk is eddish, Ang. Sax. edisc, gramen scroiticum, but it is also termed rawings, roughings, or rowen, a word used by Tusser and noticed by Ray, which may be a corruption of the older appellation edgrow. See Forby and Moore. Tusser uses the words eddish and etch to signify a stubble, or land that has produced a crop. In a copy of the Practica of John Arderne, Sloane MS. 56, p. 3, are some names of plants in French and English, among which occurs "weldillone, i. edgrowse," possibly some herb of autumnal growth, abounding in the after-grass. The Medulla gives "frutex, a styke, a yerde, and bnske, vnderwode, or eddysche."

Mankind was lorne, and damned ay to die." Man of Lawe's Tale.

"He lente a spere with egre mode." Octovian, line 1653.

"And scendre wives, feble as in bataille, Beth egre as is a tigre yond in Inde." Clerke's Tale.

<sup>4</sup> In the dialects of the North, as observed by Ray, any kind of fuel is called eldin, and the term is applied to the brush-wood of which fences are made. See Brockett, the Craven Glossary, and Jamieson. Ang. Sax. æld, ignis, ælan, accendere. The word is given by Bp. Kennett among his valuable glossarial collections, Lansd. MS. 1033.

<sup>1</sup> Half a bushel is given hereafter as the same measure which is here intended; and the term EYȚTYNDELE seems to be derived from its being the eighth part of a coom, or half quarter, which has already occurred, COWME of corne, cumba. Compare DELE, and HALVUNDEL. Ang.-Sax. dæl, pars. Bp. Kennett, in his glossarial collections, Lansd. MS. 1033, mentions another local name for the same measure, "a tofet, the measure of half a bushel, Kent; some say two fats. Sax. fat, or fet, was the same measure as our peck."

"Mes de sueau (of ellern, MS. Phill. hildertre, Arund. MS.) lem fet suheaus, Vn manger ke est bons et beaus (wiþ milke)."

In Worcestershire the elder is termed ellern, and Piers Ploughman speaks of it thus:

"Impe on an ellere,

And if thy appul be swete,

Muchel merueille me thinketh." Vision, line 5471.

"Un schu, an ellir tree." Harl. MS. 219. Ang.-Sax. ellarn, ellen, sambucus. In the North the alder is called an eller, whence several names of places, as Ellerbeck, Ellerburn, &c. in Yorkshire, are derived. Ang.-Sax. alr, alnus. <sup>1</sup> The Catholicon explains lamia to be a creature with a human face, and the body of a beast, or, according to a gloss on Isaiah, xxxiv. 14, a sort of female centaur, which entered houses when the doors were closed, as old wives' tales went, and cruelly used the children, whence the name, "quasi lancia, a laniando pueros." The ancient leeches have given in their books numerous charms and nostrums for the relief of children "taken with elvys;" among which may be cited the following from a curious medical MS. of XVth cent. in the possession of Sir Thomas Phillipps. "For a chylde that ys elfe y-take, and may nat broke hys mete, that hys mouthe ys donne (sic). Sey iij tymes thys verse, Beata mater manere, &c. In the worchyppe of God, and of our Lady, sey iij pater noster, and iij aueys, and a crede; and he schal be hole." In Sloane MS. 73, f. 125, it is directed to "take þe roote of gladen and make poudre þerof, and ȝeue þe sike boþe in his metes, and in hise drynkis, and he schal be hool wijpinne ix dayes and ix nyctis, or be deed, for certeyn." William Langham, practitioner in phisic, recom-mends this same remedy in his Garden of Health, 1579; and orders the root and seeds of the peony to be hung about children's necks, as a charm against the haunting of the fairies and goblins. The term elf is not, however, applied exclusively to mischievous spirits, but to fairies generally. See in Brand's Popular Antiquities detailed obser-vations on the Fairy Mythology. "An elfe, lamia, eumenis, dicta ab ea, quod est bonum, et mene, defectus. 'Elfe lande,' (no Latin word) CATH. ANG. Horman seems to speak of elves as a sort of vampires: "No man stryueþ with deed men but elfis, larue;" and Palsgrave gives "elfe, or dwarfe, naia." Ang.-Sax. elf, lamia.

all the earlier writers, and is not yet obsolete in the North of England. It is related in the life of St. Peter of Melane, that "one his eme whiche was an heretyke demaunded of his lesson, and the chylde sayd to hym, credo;—his uncle sayd to hym that he sholde no more say so." Legenda Aur. "An eme, avunculus, patruus. Versus, glossarial collections. Lansd. MS. 1033, the following use of the word eam, noticed likewise by Grose: "Eam, an unkle, Bor. This term in the North is familiarly applied to a gossip, and indeed to any friend or neighbour; so is the word unkle in Worcestershire, and adjoining parts, where mine unkle or my nunkle is a common appellation, as mine eam in the North. Ex ore viri doctissimi G. H."

eventus, casus, racio." Synonym. Harl. MS. 1002. See CHESUN, and CAWSE, or

"But understandeth this, I onely commend her nought,
By encheson of her virginitie." Letter of Cupide.

<sup>2</sup> In the Latin-English Vocab. Roy. MS. 17 C. <sup>1</sup> It has been observed under the word BLO ERYE, that the reading of the MS. may perhaps be considered as corrupt, by an error of the scribe, who wrote y for þ; but it must be observed that similar errors are of very rare occurrence in this MS., and that the words are here placed in their proper order, as written with a y, whilst ERTHELY will be found in its place afterwards, the letter þ being in the Anglo-Saxon alphabet usually placed at the end, and in the Promptorium next after w. In an early MS. of the Medulla Grammaticæ, in the Editor's possession, which is equally free from the use of the character y instead of þ, which towards the later part of the XVth century became very general, occurs the word "gliteus, eryen."

Harrison, in his description of Britain, B. ii., c. 24, speaking of the numerous antiquities turned up by the plough, says that "in the beginning of the same Kings daies (Henry VIII.) also at Killeie a man found as he eared, an arming girdle harnessed with pure gold," with spurs of gold, and other precious things, of which part were in the possession of one Dr. Ruthall. or recluses, were a numerous class in England; many curious particulars regarding them have been brought together by Fosbroke, in his British Monachism, p. 503. The essential difference between the hermit and the ANKYR, or recluse, the terms occurring in the Promptorium, appears to be defined by Giraldus in his epistle to Abp. Langton, where he makes use of the following expression: "Heremite solitarii—Anachorite conclusi." Ang. Sacra, ii., 436. They had both, however, a fixed dwelling-place, although differing in certain conditions; the establishment of an hermitage was among those acts which in former times served to testify, in a signal manner, of the piety of the founder, or his gratitude for divine protection. Thus it appears by Pat. 1 Hen. IV. that, having landed in Holderness, on his return after many years of banishment, and been seated on the throne, one of the first acts of that sovereign was the precept "de heremitagio edificando apud quendam locum vocatum Ravenscrobourn, in quo Rex ultimo suo adventu applicavit." A curious evidence of the high respect and estimation in which recluses and hermits were held at this period, is afforded by the will of Henry, Lord de Scrop, A.D. 1415, whose bequests in their favour are singularly numerous and detailed. Rymer, ix., 275.

<sup>1</sup> The verb to erne or yerne, signifying to hasten, or run as an animal, Ang.-Sax. yrnan, carrere, has not been sufficiently distinguished from the verb to yearn, Ang.-Sax. geornian, desiderare, expressive of anxious longing or deep affection. The former occurs in several of the old romances; thus it is related of the wonderful long-legged race that Alexander found running bare-foot in the Indian forest,

"Every wilde dere astore, Hy mowen by cours ernen tofore." K. Alis. line 5063.

So also of the King of Navarre, when he charged forward to meet the Soudan's champion,

"Vpon a stede he gan yerne

With sper and scheld." Octouian, line 965.

See also line 1934, where it is written "erne." It expresses also the strenuous movement of the sailor.

"The maryners away gonne skylle,

Well hastily." Ibid. line 561.

In Piers Ploughman's Vision it is used to signify the flow of water, or running of tears.

"And then welled water for wicked workes, Egrely ernyng out of men's eyen." Passus 20.

Lancham, in his curious account of the reception of Elizabeth at Kenilworth Castle, in 1575, uses the word in describing the eager course of the stag-hound; "the earning of the hounds in continuauns of their erie, y<sup>e</sup> swiftnes of the deer, the running of footmen, the galloping of horsez . . . mooued pastyme delectablyl." Bishop Kennett, in his glossarial coll. notices the sense of the word to earn, as used in the North, which is given also by Brockett and Jamieson; "to earn, to run as chees doth. Earning, chees rennet, Bor. from Sax. yrnen, carrere." Lansd. MS. 1033.

"Et euerrouadel (sparewe net) à la ceurounde (at þe euesinge) Prent le masshoue et le arounde (swalewe)."

"Seuerunder à la seueroude (a serundel at þe eueses)." Arund. MS. 220, f. 301, b. It would seem hence that it was usual to take small birds, as the maskeron, or sparrow, and the swallow, by means of a net adjusted to the house eaves; they probably served, as they do still in Italy and Southern Europe, as articles of food. In Piers Ploughman's Vision are mentioned "Isykles in evesynges;" and in the Creed "Orcheyarde and erbers evesed wel clene;" in which instance the word seems to be used precisely in the sense of the Ang.-Saxon verb efesian, tondere, unless it may signify that the erber, or garden of herbs, was neatly hedged in. The Medulla renders "intonsus, vnevesed. Antipophara, an evesynge." In the North of England the eaves are called easings. "Seueroude, the eaue, eaving, or easing of a house." COTGR.

<sup>2</sup> The word chefe, signifying chance or fortune, has occurred already, but in the MS. is written, as it would seem erroneously, CHEP. It appears to be taken from the French chef, chief, which, according to Roquefort, implies not only the head, or the commencement of a thing, but the end, issue, or extremity. Chaucer, in the Merchant's second Tale, speaks of "the boncheff and the myscheff;" and in the account of William Thorpe's examination by Alp. Arundel in 1407, published by Foxe from a contemporary authority, it is related that he said, "if I consented to you to doo heere after your will for bonchefe or mischefe that may befall me in this life, I deme in my conscience that I were worthy herefore to be cursed of God."

alphabetically, has here the same signification as that in which it is used by Chaucer, and many of the old writers, namely, of putting to the question, or examining judicially.

<sup>1</sup> "To fage, adulari, assentari, blandiri, blandificare, delinire, palpar. A fagynȢ, Uandicia. FagynȢ, Uandus," CATH. ANG. This word is derived from the Ang.-Sax. fægnian, fægnian, gaudere, which has also the signification of flattering. Hardyng, relating the guileful practices of Vertigern on the weak King Constance, says,

"Such subtile meane to fage the Kyng he fandē." Chron. c. lxxvi.

Coles gives "fage, a merry tale." Palsgrave gives the verb "I fagge from the trouthe (Lydgate); this terme is nat in our comen use." It may be questioned whether Drayton does not use the verb to fadge in this sense; but it is explained by the Glossarists as signifying only to agree, or accord; Ang.-Sax. fegan, jaungere.

"With flattery my muse could neuer fadge." Pastorals, Ecl. 3.

<sup>2</sup> It would at first sight appear from this reading of the MS. as also from a word that occurs subsequently, FORȝETȢ, or forȝetyȢ, that the initial ff must have some special power of its own, and not merely represent the capital F. None such, however, can be assigned, and the readings are, probably, in both instances corrupted by the scribe. In the present case the correction appears to be FAYNE, or fawne, and in the second the true reading may be FORȝETȢ, or forgetȢ. "Fayne, ubi mery. Alacer, aprieus, dilectabilis, hilaris, letus," CATH. ANG. Ang.-Sax. fægen, letus. See FAWN'.

<sup>3</sup> The appellation fair child, bel pils, or BEFYCE, which has occurred previously, was one of endearment or courtesy, afterwards used only to signify a son-in-law. Instances of its use are not infrequent; thus in Piers Ploughman's Vision, when Joseph relates to his father his dream that the sun, moon, and stars "hailed hym all,"

"Beau fitz, quod his fader,
 For defaute we shullen,
 I myself and my sones,
 Seche thee for neede." line 4819.

<sup>4</sup> A FAYTOWRE was, as it seems, a conjuror, or a quack-salver, so called from the French factior, or facticior, a sorcerer; and thence the name was applied to itinerant pretenders to such skill, to mendicants, and generally to idle livers. "Faitour, factior, un parressenz," LACOMBE. The plant called quack-salver's turbit or spurge, the Tithymalus or Esula of the old botanists, Euphorbia, Linn. was much employed in homely physie, as also by the empirics in former times. Its virtues are detailed by Gerarde and Parkinson. See TITYMALLE. The MS. has simulator, as also simulacio.

<sup>1</sup> Compare ROW CLOTHE, as faldyngge and other lyke, which occurs hereafter. The term faldyng, signifying a kind of frieze, or rough-napped cloth, is derived by Skinner from Ang. Sax. feald, placc, because coarse wrappers or mantles were usually made of it. Chaucer describes the West Country shipman as clad "In a gowne of falding to the kneec." Cant. Tales, Prolog.

Nicholas, the Oxford clerk, had his books, and appliances of science,

"On shelues all couched at his bed's hed ;

His presse icouered with a faldyng red,

And all aboute there lay a gay Sautrie." Miller's Tale.

Nich. de Schirburn, an ecclesiastic of York, bequeathed, in 1392, "unicam de nigro faldyng lineatum;" and Ric. Bridesall, merchant of the same city, makes this devise; "lego patri meo meum ammalusum, videlicet faldyng elok." Testam. Ebor. i. 173, 171. "Amphibalus, a slavelyn, a faldyngge or a duddl." MED. GRAMM. "A faldyngge, amphibalus. A faldyngge, placcio, convolvicio," CATH. ANG. This kind of cloth was supplied, probably, from the North of Europe, and identical with the woollen wrappers of which Hermoldus speaks, "quos non appellamus Faldones;" Chron. Slav. i. c. 1; called by Adam Bremensis "Paldones." Frieze received its name from Friesland, and the rough garments of that country are called by Andrew Borde "dagswaynes," as has been noticed above in the note on that word. The Polonic of Scotland may have received its name from its Polish origin; see the curious observations on that word in the Supplement to Jamieson's Dictionary. These garments, as also the Irish mantles, much in request so late as the reign of Charles I. as appears by the Custom-house rates, were, probably, the same as the faldyng; the last were usually imported in pairs, upon which the duty, as rated in 1553, was 5s. and by the Kytson Household Book it appears that in 1573 the price of "a coople of Irish mantells" was 43s. History of Hengrave. "Endromis, vestis villosa de arietis pellibus facta, vel pallium forte villosum, de an grysshe mantell." ORTUS. "Beacca, that kynde of a mantell whiche nowe commeth out of Ireland, or a longe garment made of roughe frise." ELYOT, 1542. Fallin signifies in Irish, according to Llyud, a mantle, and the term appears to be identical with that used by Giraldus Camb. in his description of the Irish, composed in 1185; "caputis modicis assuti sunt et arcus, trans humeros deorsum, cubito tenus protensis, . . . sub quibus phalangis brevis quaque, palliorum vice, utantur." Topog. Hibern. i. iii. c. 19. The fashion of the phalangis is exhibited in marginal drawings in a valuable contemporary MS. of Giraldus, in the possession of Sir Thomas Phillipps; and it is described by the appellation coccula in the Life of St. Cadoc, MS. Landav. Eccl. as cited by Spelman, under that word. See further Tyrwhitt's Chaucer, and Ledwich's Antiquities of Ireland, 267.

The fan, or van, here appears both on the armorial surcoat, and the ailettes; the bearing, which is a curious example of the arma cantantia, or armes parlantes, appears to have been, not seven vans, but three, as given in the Roll of Arms, t. Edw. II. Cott. MS. Calig. A. xviii. A faithful representation of this curious memorial has been given by Messrs. Waller in their valuable Series of Monumental Brasses.

in 1507, is the entry, "a fane for my vise (winding stairs); iv vanys for my bruce." Rokewode's Hist. of Suff. 151. Chaucer, in the Manciple's Prologue, alludes to the rural sport of justing "at the fan," in some MSS. "van;" which has been explained as signifying a kind of quintain, so termed from its revolving like the fane of a weather-cock. In the curious version of Vegetius, Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. a passage occurs, however, which would lead to the supposition that Chaucer's allusion refers to a rural conflict, with the winnowing fan, by way of shield; it declares "how olde werriours were wont to iuste with fannes, and pley with the pil, or the pale;" and that tyros or young soldiers ought to have "a shelde made of twigges sumwhat rounde, in maner of a gredryn, the whiche is clepede a fanne—and therwith they sholde haue maces of tree." B. I. c. xi. See QUINTYNE hereafter.

<sup>2</sup> The etymology of this appellation of the sacred vestment, termed also the maniple, is uncertain; the Latin pinus has been suggested, the German Fahne, or the Ang. Saxon word of the like signification, fana, vevillum. The resemblance of the maniple to the penon on the lance, called in France fanon, or phanon, is obvious. The word can hardly, however, be of Ang. Saxon derivation, as in Ælfrie's Glossary, written towards the close of the Xth cent. the maniple is termed "manuallis, handlin;" and among the gifts of Bishop Leofric to Exeter Cathedral, about 1050, are mentioned "iv subdiacones handlin," MS. Bodl. Auct. D. 2, 16. Leo IV. P.P. towards the middle of the IXth cent. ordained thus, "nullus cantet sine amictu, sine albâ, stola, fanone et casulâ;" and a contemporary writer, Rabanus Maurus, says, "quantum sacerdotis indumentum mappula sive mantile est, quod vulgo fanonem vocant." Iust. Cler. c. 18. The original intention and use of the maniple is explained by Alcuin and Amalarius, writers of the same period, as follows: "Mappula, que in sinistrâ parte gestatur, quâ pituitam oculorum et narium deterginus." Shortly after, however, the rich and massy ornaments bestowed upon the fanon rendered it unsuitable for its original purpose. A specimen discovered at Durham, in the tomb attributed to St. Cuthbert, is still preserved there; it is elaborately ornamented with needle-work, on a ground woven with gold, and was wrought, as appears by inscriptions upon it, by direction of Ælfheda, Queen of Edward the Elder, for Frithelstan, consecrated Bp. Winchester A.D. 905. It was probably brought to Durham, with other precious gifts, by Athelstan, the successor of Edward, in 934. This fanon measures 32½ in. exclusively of a fringe at the ends, 1¾ in. deep; and its breadth is 2¼ in. Elaborate drawings of this interesting relic, and of the stole discovered with it in 1827, are in the possession of the Society of Antiquaries. They are both ornamented with figures of saints. By this, and other representations, it appears that the fanon was at that period worn loosely thrown over the back of the hand, as on the Bayeux Tapestry in the representation of Abp. Stigand; but subsequently it was attached closely round the wrist. In a few instances the fanon appears carried on the right, instead of the left hand, an example of which occurs in the Bible of Charles the Bald, MS. of the IXth cent. See Montf. Mon. Franc. I, pl. xxvi. The fanon was usually of the same suit, de eadem secta, as the stole, and the parures of the amice and the alb; the material of which they were formed was most costly. Among the gifts of Will. de Elintune to Rochester, it is recorded

It must be observed that some distinction seems to have been made in Italy in the XIth cent. between the fanon and the maniple, but its precise nature has not been ascertained. <sup>1</sup> To fare, Ang.-Sax. faran, ire, is a verb frequently used by the earlier writers, as R. Brunne, Rob. of Gloucester, Langtoft, and Chaucer.

"Ten thousand prest and yare,
Into bataill for to fare." K. Alisaunder, line 1188.

Sir Thomas de la More, in his Life of Edward II. relates that at Bristol, on the way to Berkeley Castle, Thomas de Gorney put upon his head a crown made of hay, and the soldiers "ironâ nimis acerbâ dicunt, fare forth Syr Kynge." Ed. Camden, p. 602. Minot, speaking of the journey of Edward III. into Brabant, in 1338, says,

"Unto France fast will he fare,
To confort hym with grapes."

Various significations of this verb are given by Palsgrave, "I fare, I go a iournay. I fare with one, or entreate hym well or yuell. I fare, I playe at a game so named at the dyse. I fare, I resemble another thyng in my dealing. I fare, I take on, as one doth y<sup>t</sup> is in sorowe." Occasionally it is used in the sense of compelling to go; thus, in the Towneley Mysteries, Herod, enraged at the birth of Christ, declares,

"Under my feete I shalle thaym fare,
Those ladys that wille (not) lere my lare." p. 120.

<sup>2</sup> Palsgrave gives the verb "I fasyll out, as sylke or veluet dothe, I ravel; my sleve is fasyllid, ravelée. Fasyll of clothe, cassura." ? Ang.-Sax. fes, fashra. The term to ravel, now generally used in this sense, thus appears to be derived, not from the verb to reave, or tear away, as it has been supposed, but from the French.

<sup>1</sup> "Fastyngange, carniprivium." CATH. ANG. Palsgrave gives "at fastyns, at Fastyngonge, à Quaresme prenant." Blount, in his Dictionary of Hard Words, 1680, gives "fasyntide" as a Norfolk word, which Forby considers as now obsolete. In the statement made by the citizens of Norwich respecting a riot that occurred in 1441, termed Gladman's Insurrection, they declare that it originated in the circumstance that the said Thomas Gladman "on Tuesday, in the last ende of Cristemesse, viz. Fastyn-gonge Tuesday, made a disport with his neyghbours, coronned as Kyng of Cristemesse," Blount. Hist. ii. 111. A detailed account of such local usages at Shrove-tide will be found in Brand's Popular Antiq. vol. i. Hardyng, relating the conflict between the Yorkists and Queen Margaret, which closed with the battle of St. Alban's, Shrove Tuesday, Febr. 17, 1461, says,

"And southward came thei then therefore

To Sainet Albones, vpon the fastyngange eue (al. fastirne.)" Chron. c. 237.

The term is compounded from Ang.-Sax. fasten, jejunium, and gong, iter, or going, the commencement of Lent. "Caresme prenant, Fastnes, or Shrove Tuesday." COTG.

<sup>2</sup> "A fatte, cupa, cuca. A fattmaker, cuparius." CATH. ANG. "Cupa, a coupe, or a fatte, or stope." ORTUS. "Fatte, a vessel, querue. Fatte to dye in, cuier à tindre." PALSG. "Cuve, an open tub, a fat, or vat." COTG. Ang.-Sax. fat, fat, vas. Caxton, in the Book for Travellers, enumerates "things that ben ysed after the hous, —platers, disshes, saussers, sallyers, trenchours; these things shall ye fynde of tree, and of erthe. Now after, a disshe fat (esculier) where me leyeth therein the forsaid thinges, and the spones of tree." There was a local measure of grain, called a fat, identical with the cupa, cupus, or cava, and which contained a quarter, or 8 bushels. The Stat. 1 Hen. V. c. 10, recites that it had been ordained that there should be only one measure, namely 8 bushels to the quarter; but that the purveyors of the Crown were accustomed to take 9, and the merchants and citizens of London take of all sellers the same quantity, as a quarter of wheat, "par un mesure usé deins la dicte Cité, appelé le faat, oue un bussell mys sur le dit faat." The word coupe does not occur in the Promptorium, in the same sense as FATE, but is so given in the Ortus and the Cath. Ang. "A cowpe, cupa. A cowper, cuparius." Caxton says in the Book for Travellers, "Paule the couper maketh and formaketh the keupis (refait les canes.)"

"Sir Launfal brayde out hys fochon,

Launfal Miles. Cott. MS. Calig. A. II.

It must be observed, however, that the fauchon and falso seem occasionally to be named with long-handled weapons, and that the falehion may occasionally have been a kind of bill, with the curved or scythe-shaped blade whence the name was taken. Chaucer uses the word as signifying a sword, and in Piers Ploughman's Vision allusion occurs to St. Paul, keeping the gate of heaven with his "fawehon." Palsgrave gives "Fawchyon, a wepen, margay baston de ivif;" and Cotgrave, "Malcus, a faulchion, hangar, wood-knife."

"Furunculus, a soore called a felon; also a soore callid a catter's hear, whiche breketh out in the fingers with great wheales and moche payne. Togax, a felon, whiche happeneth on a mann's tynger." ELYOT. Baret gives "A fellon, vincomme, or catte's haire; a bile or sore that riseth in man's bodie, furunculus; Bosselle dure, ou froule, eng cloe. A felon, or impostumation vnder the rootes of the nailles, paronychia;" and Cotgrave, "Furuncule, a fellon, or whitlaw; Ponary, a felon, or whitlaw, at the end of a finger." Gerard recommends as a remedy the Persicaria hydropiper, or arsmart, which, "bruised and bound upon an impostume in the ioynts of the fingers (called among the vulgar sort a fellon or vncome,) taketh away the paine." Elyot explains the term vncome as follows: "alcantitas mortua, sykenes that cometh without our defeute, and of some men is callid an vncome."

Thus in the version of Vegecius, Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. it is related that Scipio bid his Spanish prisoners cleanse and dig ditches, "with this reprocuable seorne; ye ben worthy, he saide, to be blottede and spottede, foulede and defoulede with fenne and with drit of water (lato inquinari) and of blode, þat in tyme of werre ne were not, ne wolde nat be bespreynt ne be wette with ennemyes blode." B. iii. c. 10.

"Bis duo dat maratrum, febres fugat atque venenum,
Et purgat stomachum, sic reddit lumen acutum."

Macer gives a detailed account, in which the following remarkable passages occur: "þe edderes wole ete fenel, when her yen dasnyþ, and so she getiþ a-yene her clere sighte; and þer þurgh it is founde and preved þat fenel doþ profit to mannys yene: þe yen þat ben dasked, and dasnyþ, shul be aroynted wit þe ius of fenelle rotis medeled wit hony; and þis oynement shalle put a-way alle þe dasewenesse of hem, and make hem bryt." The virtue of fenel, in restoring youth, was a discovery attributed likewise by Macer to serpents; "þis prouþ auctours and filisofenis, for serpentis whan men (sic) olde, and willeth to wexe stronge, myghty, and yongly a-yeen, þei gon and eten ofte fenel, and þei become yongliche and myghty." MS. in the possession of H. W. Diamond, Esq. FENKYLLE is obviously a corruption of the Latin name; this herb is still called in German Fenichel, and in Dutch Venekel. In Piers Ploughman's Vision mention occurs of

<sup>1</sup> In the Assembly of Ladies, a poem attributed to Chaucer, Attemperaunce is described as arrayed in a blue gown of cloth of gold, in tabard-wise, purfled, or trimmed with fur, and set with pearls and diamonds.

"After a sort, the coller and the vent,
 Like as armine is made in purfeling,
 With great pearles full fine and orient,
 They were couched all after one worching."

The glossarist interprets vent as signifying "the fore-part;" but this does not sufficiently explain the term. In the XIIIth cent. the fent or vent appears at the collar of the robe, both in male and female costume, being a short slit closed by a brooch, and which served for greater convenience in putting on a dress so fashioned as to fit closely round the throat. This is shown by the effigies at Fontevault, engraved by Stothard, and especially by those of Queen Berengaria, at the abbey of l'Espan, and of Richard I., recently discovered at Rouen. Archæol. xxix. pl. xxi. In these instances it is sufficiently apparent why the fent should be termed, as in the Promptorium, fibulatorium; but at a later period being considerably prolonged, the opening of the robe in front extending often much below the waist, a brooch was no longer sufficient to close it. At the period when Chaucer wrote, the fent was trimmed with rich furs, and the fastenings were ornaments of chased work, jewelled, of a very splendid description. They are termed in inventories "attaches," and exhibited on the effigies of Lady Mohun, and of Joan of Navarre, Queen of Henry IV., at Canterbury. The less richly decorated effigy of Queen Philippa, at Westminster, presents an example of the fent, simply closed by a lace; and the combination of furs and jewels in this part of costume appears in many MSS. which have furnished Strutt with examples, among which may particularly be mentioned Roy. MS. 16 G. V. See Strutt's Dresses, pl. xciv. The propriety of applying to the fent, thus purfled and adorned, the term jimbria, as in the Promptorium, is evident, as likewise limbus, which is given by Ducange, on an ancient authority, as synonymous with fibulatorium. In the Wardrobe of Sir John Fastolf, A.D. 1459, there was "j jakket of red felwet, the ventis bounde with red lether." Archæol. xxi. 253, "Fente of a gowne, feute." PALSG.

<sup>2</sup> The use of the verb to fear, in an active sense, is not uncommon.

"That ryhaude fered me with his loke,
 That confort to me coude I none take." Castell of Labour, 1506.

"Absterre, i. penitus terere, Anglice, to fayr. Terreo, i. terrorem inferre, to feere." ORTUS. "I feare one, I make hym afrayde. I feare awaye, skarre awaye, as we do beestes or hyrdes, dehasser." PALSG. Ang.-Sax. feran, terere. See FESYN.

Elyot renders "veterinarius medicus, a horseleche, or ferror," now called corruptedly a farrier. In the version of Pliny, by Holland, it is related that the Empress Poppæa "was knowne to cause her ferrers ordinarily to shoe her coach horses, and other palfries, &c. with eleané gold." B. xxxij. c. 11. In the order of the Pageants of the Play of Corpus Christi, at York, 1415, are enumerated among the various trades, "smythes, fevers." Sharpe's Coventry Mysteries, p. 137. This last appellation is taken directly from the old French, fèvre, fibere, or ferre, a blacksmith.

<sup>2</sup> Among the appliances of a sacred nature, there were feretra of two kinds; first, the bier for carrying the corpse to the grave, "feretrum, bare," Gloss. Ælfrie, thus mentioned in the laws of Henry I., "amici extrahant mortuum, deferentes in feretrum, et portantes eum ad ecclesiam." By the Constitutions of Will. de Bleyes, 1229, and Walter de Cantilupe, 1240, Bishops of Worcester, as also of Abp. Peckham, 1280, among the ornaments and requisites to be provided in every church, at the charge of the parishioners, was included "feretrum competens ad sepulturam mortuorum." Wilkins, i. 623, 666; ii. 49. In its secondary sense feretrum signified a portable shrine, containing the relics of saints, and carried in processions on a frame similar to the ordinary bier; and also stationary shrines of similar fashion, but which it was not customary to display as gestatory ornaments, such as those of St. Cuthbert at Durham, or St. Thomas of Hereford, in the cathedral there. It is recorded in Reg. Roff. 120, that "Willielmus Rex Angliæ magnus, in articulo mortis (1087) dedit—feretrum, cum altari gestatorio deargentato, et pallium cum leonibus." In 1355, Elizabeth de Clare, daughter of Gilbert Earl of Gloucester, made the following bequest: "Je devise à Saint Thomas de Hereford un guaye de n're dame, d'argent surorré, d'estre taché sur son fiertre." Roy. Wills, p. 31. In the ancient documents relating to the shrine of St. Cuthbert the term feretrum implies, as Mr. Raine states, not the shrine itself, but the quadrangular space or oratory wherein it stood: the keeper had the title of feretrarius. See Raine's Saint Cuthbert. Amongst numerous representations of the feretrum may be mentioned the procession of St. Alban's shrine, in the MS. of M. Paris, with drawings, supposed to be by his own hand, Cott. MS. Nero, D. i.; Strutt's Manners and Customs, i. pl. lxxv. One occasion on which it was customary to carry the feretra in procession, was at the parochial perambulations in Rogation week, a full account of which will be found in Brand's Popular Antiq. vol. i. Horman, in his chapter of sacred matters, says, "We two muste beare the feretrum (tensam gesture) a procession in the gange dayes." The term "fierte" occurs in Langtoft's Chronicle; and in the Golden Legend mention is made of the "fyerte," or shrine of St. Alphey, f. 117, b. "Fierte, fierte, fierte: Chasse, reliquaire, brancard." ROQUEF. The term feretrum in the MS. Ordinar. Ecc. Rotom. signifies the pyxis, wherein the consecrated Eucharist is deposited.

<sup>1</sup> The pheasant was brought into Europe from the banks of the Phasis, in Colchis, according to Martial, by the Argonauts; it was highly esteemed by the Romans, and possibly introduced by them into England. In default of positive evidence as to its existence here in early times, it can only be stated that about the time when the Promptorium was compiled, it had become sufficiently abundant in East Anglia. Thus in the Howard Household Book, amongst the costs incurred at Ipswich, in 1467, "whane Syr John Howard and Mastyr Thomas Brewse were chosen knyghtes of the shyre," occurs the item, "xij fesawntes, pryse xijss." Household Expenses, presented to the Roxburghe Club by B. Botfield, Esq. p. 399. "Ornitho est gallus vel gallina silvestris, Anglice a fesande or a werkok." ORTUS. "A fesande, fasianus." CATH. <sup>2</sup> R. Brunne uses the word "fesid," which Hearne explains as meaning whipped or beaten (p. 192.) Ang.-Sax. fesian, fagare.

<sup>3</sup> The love-feasts, or ἀγάπαι of the primitive Christians, were held in the churches; but this usage was suppressed by the Council of Constantinople, A.D. 691, and discountenanced by Gregory the Great, in his Letters to the British converts. It is probable that the author here refers solely to the primitive custom. There is no evidence that the practice of feasting in churches had been retained in any part of England; but it appears probable that the agape of the earlier times gave rise to the church-ale, of which, and of wakes, frequently celebrated near the precinct of the church, a full account will be found in Brand's Popular Antiq. See the Hieroglexicon D. Maeri, Ducange, and Spelman, c. Agape.

<sup>4</sup> In Piers Ploughman's Vision, line 6153, where allusion is made to Matt. vii. 3, the mote in the eye, festura, is termed "festu." The Medulla likewise renders "festura, a festu, or a lytul mote." The name was applied to the straw, or stick used for pointing, in the early instruction of children: thus Palsgrave gives "festue to spell with, festec." Occasionally the word is written with e or k, instead of t, but it is apparently a corruption. "Festa, a feskue, a straw, rush, little stalk, or stiek, used for a fescue. Touche, a fescue; also, a pen, or a pin for a pair of writing tables." COTGR.

<sup>1</sup> Chaucer uses the word fetise, and fetisely, in this sense; it is apparently derived from the old French fetis, or fuitis. Palsgrave gives "featysshnesse, proprenesse, feactisc;" as also the synonymous word "feate, or proper of making, godin, godinct, coint, mynon; fetly, nyeely, coytement. I haue apted them together the fetlyest (le plus gentiment) that euer you sawe. Feted, fetered, or well shapen of the lymmes, aligné. It is as well fetered a ehylde as euer you sawe. You neuer set your eye upon a fayrer fetered woman, mieuix alignée." Horman likewise speaks of "the feat conueyns of a speche that soundeth well to the eare, argutia plausibilis sermonis. She wereth corked slippers to make hir tal and feet."

William Paston writes, in 1454, of Thomas Bourchier, Bp. of Ely, who was translated in that year to Canterbury, "My lord of Ely hath do his fewthe." Paston Lett. iii. 222. The word is taken from the French, "féaulté, féauté, fidélité, foi, constance." ROQUEF. It is commonly taken for the oath of allegiance in the feudal system:

"When thise Bretons tuo were fled out of this lond, Ine toke his feaute of alle that lond helde." R. Brunne.

<sup>3</sup> In the Wicliffe version occur the following passages: "he that seith to his brother, Fy (ul. fugh) schal be gilty to the counsell." Matt. v. 22. "And as thei passiden forth, thei blasfemen him, moyngne her heddis, and seynge, I'ath, thou that distriest the temple," &c. Mark xv. 29.

written FY3IN. To fie or fey now signifies in East Anglia, as in Craven and Hallamshire, to clean out, as ponds or ditches; it is thus used by Tusser, and also to express the cleansing of grain.

“Choyced seed to be picked, and trimly well fy'd,
 For seed may no longer from threshing abide.” August's Husbandry.

“Escurer, to scowre, fey, rinse, cleanse.” COTG. Bp. Kennett, in his glossarial coll. gives “to fea, fey, feigh or fow, to cleanse or empty, as to fea a pond, a privy, &c. Dunelm. Isl. feigia, mandare, cluere; whence to feag, by metaphor, applied to whipping or correcting, as, He feag'd him off.” LAUSD. MS. 1633. In the Wicliffite version, Deut. xxiii. 13 is thus rendered, “þou schalt bere a litil stake in þe girdil, and whanne þou hast sete, þou schalt digge bi cumpas, and þou schalt hile wiþ erþe þingis defied out, where þou art releuyd;” in the Vulgate, “egesta humo operies.” See DEFFYN', and PEYAR.

<sup>2</sup> FYLOWRE, or barbowrs crafte. MS. “A filoure, affilatorium; to filoure, affilare.” CATH. ANG. The term affilatorium occurs with the signification of a hone, in the Usus Ant. Ord. Cisterc. c. 85. The implement so called seems to have been identical with that now called a steel, in French fusil, which is rendered by Cotgrave “the steele, wherewith a butcher whets his knives.” A resemblance in form to the spindle or spoole used in spinning was probably the origin of the appellations FYLOWRE, filarium, and fusil. In the Boke of Curtasye a “fylour” appears to signify a rod, as that upon which a curtain may be hung, moveably, by means of rings. The word occurs in the directions for the grooms of the chambers, regarding making the pallets, and two beds of greater state, for lords, <sup>1</sup> The Privy Purse Expenses of Henry VII. comprise an entry in 1493, "to Dr. May for th' exebueon of Thos. Phupo," who appears to have been King's scholar at Oxford; and the allowance is subsequently termed "the finding, 2 li." Exe. Hist. The term exhibition, or allowance of money, taken from the Latin, which in mediæval times had the same signification, is used in this sense by Shakespeare and B. Jonson, as likewise still retained at the Universities.

<sup>3</sup> The practice of maintaining beacons, to give warning of approaching invasion, is one that may be traced in Britain to the most remote times. The term itself is Anglo-Saxon, beacen, signum, beacne torr, specula. The right of erecting beacons was one of the exclusive privileges of the Crown; and a tax for their maintenance, termed beconagium, was levied upon every hundred. At an early time, as Coke observes, the beacon was merely a stack of combustibles prepared on an elevated spot, or a rock; Ang.-Sax. beacenstan, pharus; subsequently to the time of Edward III. as he states, "pitch-boxes, as now they be, were, instead of those stacks, set up;" that is, a kind of large cresset, raised on an upright pole or beam; hence the appellation FIRBOME, Ang.-Sax. beom, trabs. Blount cites the "Ordinatio pro vigilis observandis a Lygane usque Yarmouth, t. Edw. II. Quod levare et reparare faciatis signa et firelares super montes altiores in quolibet hundredo, ita quod toti patriâ, per illa signa, quodcumque necesse fuerit, præmoneri potest;" which is rendered by Stowe, "He ordained bikenings or beacons to be set up." A.D. 1326. The care with which these signals were at all periods provided, appears by numerous evidences in the public records. In 1415 Henry V. on his departure for France, provides for the safety of the realm, and directs the provision of "signa vocata bekyns in locis consuetis." Rymer, ix. 255. Hall relates that when Richard III., with false confidence, disbanded his forces, he issued

And when the noyes is once bruted that the enemies approche nere y<sup>e</sup> land, they so- deynly put fyre in the lanthornes, and make showtes and outrages from toune to toune, and from village to village." 3 Rich. III. This kind of signal, of which representations will be found in Archæol. i. pl. i. xv. pl. xii. was likewise termed a standard: "A bekyn or a standarde, statela." CATH. ANG. It was taken by Hen. V. as a badge, and appears among the sculptures of his chantry at Westminster. "Beakyn, feu au gut," PALSG. The elevation whereon it was placed was sometimes termed a tote-hill; see that word hereafter.

"Such serviture, also, deserveth a cheek,
That runneth out fiskeing with meat in his beek."

"I fyske, ie fretille. I praye you se howe she fysketh aboute." PALSG. "Trotière, a raunpe, fisingig, fiskeing lusswife, rauninging damsell." CORG. Compare FYKIȚ a-bowte, and see Jamieson's remarks on that word. It occurs in R. Coer de Lion, 4749.

<sup>1</sup> According to the Medulla the term FYSHELLE is synonymous with FYSCH LEEP; "Nassa, quoddam instrumentum ex viminibus et cirpis, tanquam rhete, contextum, ad capiendos pisces, a psyche or a fysshelle." So also it is related in the Golden Legend, "Than they put hym in to a lytell fysshell or basket, well pytched, and set it in y<sup>e</sup> see, and abandoned hym to dryue wyder it wolde." f. 99, b. "Fiscelle, petit panier de jonc, fiscella." ROQUEF. Fyschew signifies a reed, or supple rod, as osiers, &c.

<sup>5</sup> In Norfolk, according to Kennett, Ray, and Forby, the upper turf pared off to serve as fuel, is termed flaks or flags. The repetition of this word below, FLAGGE, drye wythe pe gresse, is apparently a corrupt reading. In the North such sods of turf are called also flags, or flaws, or slaughter. See Jamieson and Brockett. "A flaghte, ubi a turfe A flaghte (or flyghte) of snawe, floccus." CATH. ANG. Dan. flager, Teut. vlaeghen, deglubere; Isl. flaga, excindere glebam.

<sup>6</sup> This word, as also Ang.-Sax. flaxe, the French flac, or flache, &c. appear to be directly taken from the low-Latin flacta, adopted probably from the Greek. In William and the Werwolf a certain clerk is mentioned who came to Rome "wip two flaketes of ful fine wyne," written also "flagetes," p. 68. "Flacta, a flakette. Olba, genus calicis, a bottell, a flaket." ORTUS. "A costrelle, onefirum, &c. ubi a flakett. A flaket, flacta, olba, uter, &c. ubi a pottle." CATH. ANG. "A flaget, flacon." PALSG. The term does not appear to be retained in Norfolk, as in the North. "A flakett, flasket, or flask; bottle made in fashion of a barrel. Bor. Flaskin, a wooden bottle, or little barrel which labourers use for beer. Yorkshire." Kennett's gloss. coll. Lausl. MS. 1633.

<sup>1</sup> The term flash, signifying a shallow pool, does not appear to be now retained in Norfolk; but it occurs in names of places, as Flash-pit, near Aylsham. In low-Latin flachia, flasca, and flaco, in old French flache or flaque, have the like signification. A supply of water from the locks on the Thames, to assist the barges, is termed a flash, and in Sussex loose water-soaked ground is called flashy. Plot speaks of the "flashy over-watery taste" of some white fruits. Hist. Ox. 156. See FLASCHE, or flasche where reyne watyr stondythe, and FYT, or flasche.

<sup>2</sup> This word, placed here out of its proper alphabetical order, whereas FLAGGE of þe erthe has occurred already, has been retained as found in the MS., on account of the uncertainty whether it is an interpolation, or a vitiated reading. Possibly the correct reading may be flawe, a term synonymous with flagge, a sod of turf. Blount, in his Law Dict. v. Turbary, cites a charter in which "turbaria bruvia—a flaw-turf, or heath-turf," is mentioned. In the North the words flaw and flaughter are still commonly used in this sense. See Jamieson and Brockett.

<sup>3</sup> "A flawne, opacum." CATH. ANG. "Fluton, a flawne. Artocira, a flawne, i. cibis factus ex pasta et caseo. Laganum est latus panis et tenuis oleo linitus, quasi oleo friatus, a pancake, a flawne." ORTUS. "Flaune meate, fluat, flan, faon. I loue well a flawne, but and it be well sugred I loue it the better." PALS. Caxton says in the Boke for Travellers, "Of mylke and of egges men make flawnes (flans), of mylke soden with the flour men make printed cakes (rustons)."
 Recipes for making flawnes will be found in the Fornue of Cury; "Flawnes for Lentyn," Harl. MS. 5401, f. 193, 202; and "flathons," under the head of "l'grande farmez," Harl. MS. 279, f. 42, b. The following directions "for flaunes" are found in the poem entitled "the slyztes of cure."

"Take new chese, and grynde hyt fayre
 In mortar wyth egges, wyth out dyswayre;
 Put powder þerto of suger I say,
 Coloure hyt wyth safrone ful wele þou may;
 Put hyt in cofyns þat bene fayre,
 And bake hyt forthe y the pray." Sloane MS. 1986, f. 87.

<sup>4</sup> In the North the word is still in use, as Bp. Kennett noticed in his glossarial collections, Lansd. MS. 1033. "Flaun or flawn, a custard. Bor. As flat as a flawn. proverb. Sax. flyna, flæna, artologannu."

<sup>5</sup> This must not be confounded with the general appellation of flat fish; the ray or seate was formerly called FLATHE, or, according to Willughby and Ray, flaire, still retained in the name of the sting-ray, called in some places the fire-flaire. In North Britain it is known as the fire-flaw, according to Jamieson. Harrison, in his description of England, uses the name flath, evidently as denoting the ray or seate. In the account

"Botes he toke and barges, þe sides togidere knytte,—

"Botes and barges ilkon, with flekes mak þam tighte." p. 321.

Hardyng relates the singular escape of Sir James Douglas, who had been hemmed in by Edward III. in Stanhope Park, and by means of hurdles, which, to prevent pursuit, his men drew after them as they went, passed over a quaking and miry moss.

"But James Douglas their flekes fell dyd make,
 Which ouer the mosse, echone at others ende,
 He layde anon, with fagottes fell ouer the lake." Chron. c. 178.

In a satirical poem, put forth in 1550 against the liberty of religious discussion, the services and preachers of the Reformed Church, entitled "An old Song of John Nobody," printed in the Appendix to Strype's Mem. of Cranmer, it is said of those who with ignorant assurance set themselves up as expounders of the Gospel,

"More meet it were for them to mylk kye at a fleyke." p. 138.

Horman says, "Ley this meate in trays and flekis, conchas sive alucos," (? alucos) where the term may signify a shallow wicker basket, in some parts termed a flasket. "Alucos, vas factum ad modum alvei, a trough." ORTIS. In the North hurdles are still called flaiks; see Jamieson.

<sup>1</sup> To fleet, or skim the cream, is a verb still commonly used in East Anglia, and the utensil which serves for the purpose is termed a fleetting-dish. "I flete mylke, take away the creame that lyeth above it whan it hath rested." PALS. "Esburver, to fleet the creame potte; laict esburré, fleted milke; moigne, fleted milke, or whaye." Hollyband's Treasure. "Escremé, fleted, as milke, uncreamed." CORG. Ang.-Sax. flet, flos lactis. A celebrated Suffolk cheese, made of skimmed milk, is called flet-cheese. Tusser, in his lesson for the dairy maid Cisley, on bad qualities of chcese, says,

"Gehazi his sicknes was whitish and dry,
Such cheeses, good Cisley, ye floted too nigh."

<sup>2</sup> The term fleet, signifying a channel, an arm of the sea, or water-course, occurs not infrequently in several parts of England, as Northfleet and Southfleet on the Thames, the Fleet-ditch, London, Holt-Fleet on the Severn, near Worcester, Fladbury, anciently Fleetbury, and Twining Fleet, on the Avon. On the coasts of Norfolk and Suffolk the name is common, and properly, according to Forby, though not invariably, implies a channel filled by the tide, and left at low water very shallow and narrow. At Lynn, where the Promptorium was compiled, there are several channels so called, as White Friars' Fleet, and Purfleet. The grant of the possessions of the Gild of the Holy Trinity, Lynn, by Edward VI. A.D. 1548, alludes to rents laid out in "repairing of banks, walls, fletes, and water-courses in Lenn." Blomf. IV. 598. "Flete where water cometh, breche." PALS. Ang.-Sax. fleet, sinus. In the North, as Bishop Kennett notices in his glossarial collections, fleet signifies water, as in the ancient song over a corpse.

"This ean night, this ean night,
Every night and awle,
Fire and fleet, and candle light,
And Christ receive thy sawl." Lansd. MS. 1033.

"A chymney, caminus, epicasterium, fumarium, fumerale." CATH. ANG. The term chimney seems, however, not to have been originally synonymous with fomerel, but to have signified an open fire-place, or chafer, such as the "chymneye with charecole" in the pavilion prepared for the conflict of Syr Galleroune with Gawayne. See the Avntys of Arthure. Thus also in the will of Cecilia de Homeldon, 1407, is the bequest, "lego unum magnum caminum de ferro Abbatii de Darham." Wills and Invent. Surtees Soc. i. 45. In Gawayn and the Grene Knyzt, however, composed about the same period, "chalk whyt chymnees" are described as appearing upon the roof of the castle. The FOMEREL was a kind of lantern, or turret open at the sides, which rose out of the roof of the hall, and permitted the escape of the smoke; it had sometimes the appellation of the lover, a word which occurs hereafter; thus Withal, in his Dictionary, mentions the "lovir or fomerill, where the smoake passeth out." Among the disbursements of Thomas Lucas, Solicitor-General to Henry VII., for the erection of Little Saxham Hall, in 1507, occurs a payment "to the plommer for casting and working my fummerel of lede;" and it appears to have been glazed like a lantern, for there is a payment to the glazier "for 50 fete glas in my fummerelle." Rokewode's Hist. of Suff. pp. 149, 150. In the Book of Wolsey's Expenses at Christ Church, Oxford, is an entry relating to the "femerell of the new kitchen." Gutch, Coll. Cur. i. 204.

The word funnel appears to be derived from fundulus, "quasi fundle," as Junius observes. "Infusorium est quoddam vasculum per quod liquor infunditur in aliud vas; vel est vas in quo est oleum quod ponitur in lucernis, a fonell dyshe (al. tonnell dysshe)." ORTUS.

"Seþe feiþli of a forcer a fair bok sche rauzt,
And radde þer on redli riȝt a long while."

Chaucer says in "La belle Dame sans Merci,"

"Fortune by strength the forcer hath vnshete, Wherein was sperde all my worldly richesse," v. 65.

Caxton, in the Book for Travellers, says, "The joyner made a forcer for my loue, her elieste, her seyrne, un forcier, sa laycel, son escrin. Set your jewellis in your forcier, that they be not stolen." Palsgrave gives "fo(r)sar, or casket, escrain; fo(r)cer, a little cofer, coffret," and coffret is rendered by Cotgrave "a casket, cabinet, forset, (sic) &c."

"Allas! that drynke shal for-do
That God deere boughte." line 5284.

In the Golden Legend it is said in the Life of Becket, that Henry II. "wolde fordoo suche lawes as his oldres hadde vsed to-fore hym." Palsgrave says, "What so euer he do on the one day, on the morowe I wyll fordo it, defaire."

<sup>2</sup> Jocelyn de Brakelonda relates in his Chronicle, p. 84, that Abbot Samson examined the relics of St. Edmund in 1198, and when the shrine was closed up, "positus est super loculum forulus quidam sericus, in quo deposita fuit scedula Anglice scripta, continens quasdam salutaciones Altwini Monachi," with a memorial of the opening of the shrine, which was subscribed by all who had been present. Foruli, according to Papias, are "thece vel ciste librorum, tabularum, vel aliarum rerum, ut spate; dicta, quod de foris tegant;" in French, fourreau, or fourrel, has the like meaning. Horman says, "I hadde leuer haue my boke sowed in a forel (consuatur in cuculli involucro) than bounde in bourdis, and couerede, and elapsed, and garnysshed with hollyens." Jennings, in his Observations on the Dialects of the West, states that the cover of a book is still termed a forrel. Palsgrave gives "coueryng for a book, chemissette," a term which appears to be synonymous with forelle, and which has been explained by Charpentier, v. Camisia libri. In an Inventory taken at Notre Dame, Paris, in 1492, is mentioned "un petit messet, couvert de cuir rouge, garni d'une chemissette de checretin rouge." Two of the mourners, whose figures are seen around the tomb of Richard Beauchamp, at Warwick, hold each a book, wrapped in the forelle, or chemissette; see Stothard's Monumental Effigies. Its fashion is more clearly exhibited in a picture at Munich, by Schorel, which has furnished the subject of a plate in Shaw's Dresses and Decorations.

<sup>3</sup> This verb is derived from the Ang.-Sax. for, which often gives in composition the sense of privation or deterioration, and fandian, teature. "God forlende it!" PALS. To forhinder, signifying to prevent, is retained in the East-Anglian dialect, according to Forby. Many other words similarly compounded have become wholly obsolete, se-

The Ang.-Sax. for-spæc has merely the signification of a preface, fore-speca, prolocutor; by Shakespeare and other writers to forespeak is used with the sense of forbidding. The use of the word in the sense of fascinating or charming arose probably from a superstitious belief, which is not extinct at the present time in North Britain, that certain persons had the power of injuring or bewitching others by immoderate praise. See Jamieson's observations upon this word.

Tales, v. 381; Jamieson's Diet. v. Nanes; and Sir Frederick Madden's glossaries appended to William and the Werwolf, and Syr Gawayn. In the last he retracts the opinion previously expressed, and is disposed to conclude that the original form of the phrase was the Saxon, "for than anes." It implies occasion, purpose, or use; thus Palsgrave gives "for the nonest, de mesmes; for the nones, à propos, à escient. C'est un gallant de mesmes, et de fait apence." This dagger is sharpened for the nones, apillé tout à escient." Hornman says, "he fayned or made hymselfe sicke for the nonis, deditā operā. He delayeth the matter for the nonys, de industriā. It is a false mater deuysed for the nonys, deditā operā confectu." Occasionally, as in the following instance, it is used ironically: "You are a cooke for the nones, wyll you sethe these roches, or you haue sealed them? vous estes ung cuisinier de mesmes." &c. PALSG. "He is a poppe fole, or a starke fole, for the nonys, homo fatuitate monstrabilis." HORN.

<sup>2</sup> Palsgrave gives the verb "to fownder as a horse, trébucher." Dr. Turner, in his Herbal, 1562, makes use of the term in allusion to ailments of the human body, where he says that Pyrethrum "is excellently good for any parte of the body y<sup>t</sup> is fundied or foundered." In his treatise of baths and mineral waters, he says that the baths of Baden, in High Germany, "heate muche membres that are foundre or fretished wyth cold, and bringe them to theyr naturall heate agayne;" and that the Pepper bath has virtues to restore "limbs fretished, foundered and made numme wyth colde."

Minshew would derive the term "a fragilitas," and Skinner from the Italian fragli; but it more closely resembles the old French "Fraians, frayel; cabas, panier de junc," ROQUEF. In Suffolk, according to Moore, a flexible mat-basket is called a frail. See Bp. Kennett's and Nares' glossaries.

Betwixen yelwe and blake somdel y-meint." Knight's Tale.

In the gloss on the Equivoque of Joh. de Garlandia it is said, "lentacula est quedam macula in facie hominis, Anglice a spotte or frecon: lenticulosus, fraconed." "Frecken, or freeces in one's face, lentile, brand de Judas." PALSG. Forby observes that the word freckens is still used in Norfolk. A.-S. fræcn, turpitude.

<sup>2</sup> Previously to the XVIth cent. the ordinary mode of constructing houses in the Eastern counties, as likewise in other parts of England, was by forming a frame of wood, or skeleton structure, the intervals or panels being afterwards filled up with brickwork, lath and plaster, or indurated earth, by the process called in Norfolk dawbing. Such constructions are usually termed timbered houses, or, in Shropshire, Cheshire, and neighbouring counties, where they are found highly ornamented, black and white houses. Harrison, who wrote his description of England about A.D. 1579, being resident in Essex, observes that "the ancient manours and houses of our gentlemen are yet and for the most part of strong timber, in framing whereof our carpenters haue been, and are, worthilie preferred before those of like science among all other nations. Howbeit, such as be latelie builded are comonlie either of brieke or hard stone, or both." B. ii. c. 12, Holinshed, Chron. i. 188. It is from this period that a marked change in the costly and ornamental character of domestic architecture in England is to be dated; previously, with the exception of some parts where the abundant supply of stone occasioned a more frequent use of such solid materials, houses were ordinarily of framed work. Palgrave says, "My house is framed all redye (charpenté), it wanteth but setting up." Among the disbursements for building Little Saxham Hall, A.D. 1507, by Thomas Lucas, Solicitor General to Henry VII. occur payments "to the joy-nours for framyng of 6 chambres, 25s. For framyng of my great parlour and great chambré, 10s." Rokewode's Hist. Suff. 147. The statute 37 Hen. VIII. c. 6, 1545, recites that certain novel outrages had of late been practised, such as "the secret burnynge of frames of tymber prepared and made, by the owners therof, redy to be sett up, and edified for houses." This misdemeanour was made felony.

<sup>1</sup> The word frank appears to be derived from the old French. Cotgrave gives "Franc, a franke or stie to feed and fatten hogs in;" and Florio renders Saginario, "a franke, or coupe, or penne; a place where beasts or birds are fatted." Ital. Diet. Harrison, in his description of England, speaking of the mode of making brawn, says, "it is made commonlie of the fore part of a tame bore, set vp for the purpose by the space of a whole yere or two, especiallie in gentlemen's houses (for the husband men and farmers neuer franke them for their owne vse aboue three or foure moneths), in which time he is dieted with otes and peason," &c. B. iii. c. i. Holinsh. Chron. i. 222. This verb is used by Shakespeare, and repeatedly by Holland, in his translation of Pliny. See Nares' Glossary.

It is a term of French derivation; Cotgrave gives "Franchemulle d'un mouton, a sheepes call or kell," and it seems to have signified a viand much the same as the haggis. Directions for compounding it will be found in the "Kalendare de Leeche Metys," Harl. MS. 279, f. 32. "Nym eyroun with þe whyte, and gratid brede, and chepis talow. Also grete as dyse nym pepir, safroun, and grynd alle to-gederys, and do in þe wombe of þe chepe, þat is the mawe, and sethe hem wyl, and serue forth." See also the Forme of Cury, p. 95. <sup>1</sup> Fremyde is a word used by most of the older writers.

"Sal neuer freik on fold, fremmyt nor freynde, Gar me lurk for ane luke lawit nor lerd." Gologros and Gawane, 1079.

"Mony klyf he ouer clambe in contrayez straunge, Fer floten fro his frende; fremedly he rydes."

Gawayn and G. Knyzt, 714.

It occurs in Rob. of Glouc. and Chaucer; and signifies both strange, as regards country, and alien, as to kindred.

"Whether he be fremd, or of his blod,
The child, he seyde, is trewe and gode." Amis and Amiloun, 1999.

"Those children that are nursed by frembde men's fires are, for the most part, more harde and strong then they be which are daintily brought up in their owne fathers houses." Precious Pearle, translated by Coverdale, A.D. 1560. "Fremmyd, exterus, externus. To make fremmyd, exterminare." CATH. ANG. "Exter, the last, fremmede, or strange." MEDULLA. "Estrangé, separated from, growne fremme or out of knowledge, and acquaintance. Estrangier, a stranger, alien, outlander, a fremme bodie, that is neither a dweller with, nor of kinne vnto us." CORG. ANG.-Sax. fremed, alienus.

<sup>1</sup> Ray gives among his N. Country words "to frist, to trust for a time." A.S. fyrstan, inducias facere. Jamieson explains it as signifying in the primary sense to delay, or postpone, and thence to give on credit, to grant delay as to payment. Germ. fristen, prorogare tempus agendi. "To friste, induciare." CATH. ANG.

<sup>2</sup> "A froke, cucullus." CATH. ANG. There is much ambiguity in the use of the term froccus, the monastic frock, which occasionally appears to have been confounded with the cuculla, although properly a distinct garment. At the General Council at Vienna, 1312, Clement V. defined the cuculla to be a long, full, and sleeveless garment; the flocus, considered identical with froccus, to be a long habit, with long and wide sleeves. They are evidently distinguished by Ingulph, who states among the ordinances of Egelric, Abbot of Croyland from 975 to 992. "Induit omni anno totum conventum cum sectâ suâ de tunicis, omni altero anno de cucullis, et omni tertio anno de froccis." Rerum Angl. Script. i. 54. The distinction appears likewise to be made by M. Paris, where he speaks of the unbecoming changes in monastic attire, introduced at St. Alban's during the time of Abbot Wulnoth, towards the close of the Xth cent. So also in the enumeration of garments allowed by custom to each monk of Glastonbury, at the latter part of the XIth cent. it is stated, "unusquisque fratrum ij cucullas, et ij froccos, et ij stannina, et ij femoralia habere debet, et io caligas, et peliciam novam per singulos annos." (G. de Malmsh. de Antiqu. Glast. Hearne, ed. Domesday, i. 119. At an early period the cowl appears to have been portion of a sleeveless garment which sometimes was a mere cape, but occasionally reached quite to the heels, and was worn over the long, full, and sleeved habit termed a frock. See the illustrative plates in Muratori. Script. Ital. i. part 2. Chron. Vulturense; Mabill. Ann. Bened. i. 121. At a subsequent time it seems that these garments ceased to be distinct, and the long dress of the monk, having the cowl attached to it, was termed indifferently froccus, frocca, and flocus, or cuculla. Further information on this subject will be found in Ducauge.

<sup>1</sup> A satisfactory interpretation of this word has in vain been sought. The practice of buying up woollen yarn for exportation was carried to a great extent in Norfolk, and other parts of England. It was highly injurious to the interests of the cloth-workers, and occasioned loss to the revenue. Many enactments appear in the statutes to protect both the weavers of Norfolk, and the customs, against the crafty proceedings of merchants, both strangers and denizens, "regrators and gatherers of woll." See particularly stat. 23 Hen. VI. c. 2; 7 Edw. IV. c. 3; 4 Hen. VII. c. 11; 33 Hen. VIII. c. 16. Perhaps froyd may imply the artful diligence with which covetous traders persisted in eluding the statutes, and robbing the staple manufacturers of Norfolk. Jamieson explains "frody" as signifying cunning; Teut. vroed, industrius, attentus ad rem. In the North, according to Brockett, froating means anxious unremitting industry.

<sup>2</sup> A pancake is called in the Eastern counties a froyse, a term derived, as Skinner conjectures, either from frizare, or the French froisser, because the substances of which it is compounded are beaten up together. Forby gives, as a Norfolk proverb, the following phrase: "If it won't pudding, it will froize;" if it won't do for one purpose, it will for another. See ancient recipes in the Forme of Cury, p. 96; and the "Kalendare de Leche Metys. Froyse out of Lentyn." Harl. MS. 299, f. 36. "Froyse of egges, dorte d'arfe." PALSG. Voulte d'arfe is the ancient appellation of an omelet. "Fritilla, a froyse or pancake." ELYOT.

work is called gadrooned, from the French "godéronné, a fashion of imbossement used by goldsmiths, and termed knurling." COG. Eronce implies a wrinkle, crumple, or gather, generally in allusion to dress, as in the VIS. of Piers Ploughman, 8657. "Frounsyng, froncement." PALSG. Frontinella is not explained by Duc. and in the Ortus is rendered "the pyt in the neeke;" it seems, therefore, to mean a wrinkled or irregular depression of surface. Possibly the correct reading may be froncinella. Fronticiatus, i. rugatus, Duc.

<sup>1</sup> "A fruntalle, frontale." CATH. ANG. The frontal of an altar is defined by Lyndwood to be "apparatus pendens in fronte altaris, qui apparatus alius dicitur Palla." Provinc. 252. The synod of Exeter, A.D. 1287, ordained that in every church the parishioners should provide "frontellum ad quodlibet altare." Wilkins, ii. 139. Abp. Winchelsey, in his Constitutions, A.D. 1305, prescribes that provision be made of "frontale ad magnum altare, cum tribus tuellis." Lyndw. 252. The frontal must not be confounded with the permanent decoration of the fore part of the altar, properly termed tabula or tablementum, which was formed either of sculptured or painted work, and sometimes of the most precious metals, chased, enamelled, and set with gems, as was that in Winchester cathedral, described in the Inventory given by Strype, Life of Abp. Parker, App. 187. The frontal was formed of the most costly stuffs, and often, if not properly by prescribed usage, was of the same suit or colour as the vestments used at the same time in the service of the altar. As there were both the tabula frontalis and superfrontalis, which last seems to have been identical with the retro-tabula or post-tabula, so likewise there were the pannus frontalis and superfrontalis, the second being in both cases the decoration placed above the altar, and attached or appended to the wall or screen against which it was placed. The inventory of sacred ornaments in the Wardrobe Book of 29 Edw. I. A.D. 1300, enumerates "Duo frontalia bradata, majora et minora, de una sertá," p. 350; identical, probably, in purpose with those termed "frontella ij pro altare, unum videlicet superius, et aliud inferius pro eodem," which were purchased by John de Ombresley, Abbot of Evesham, from the executors of Will. de Lynne, Bishop of Worcester, who died in 1373. Harl. MS. 3763. In Pat. 3 Hen. VI. these ornaments are again differently termed. Among various gifts to churches in France delivered by the executors of Henry V. it appears that they sent to St. Denis "unam altum frontellam, et unam bassam frontellam de velvet, rubens, cum foliis aureis brouderatus." Rym. x. 346. In the Inventory of the gifts of Abp. Chicheley to All Souls' College, A.D. 1437, there appears to be a distinction between the terms frontale and frontellum, as it enumerates, among many others, "j frontale et suffrontale de blodio velvet operatum cum stellis, patibulo, et salutatione; j frontellum de blodio velvet cum foliis quercinis aureis; vj frontys, et vj suffrontys unius secte, steynid, pro secundis altaribus," &c. Gutch, Coll. Cur. ii. 262. The precise difference is not apparent; but each secta, or totus apparatus for an altar, comprised, according to this document, the "frontale, suffrontale, frontellum, ij curtinae, j des-cloth, j tece," or corporas case: possibly frontellum may be only a diminutive of the other term. Ducange gives the term "refrontale, apparatus altaris," the same, probably, as the pannus superfrontalis; as likewise the tabula suprafrontalis was, as has been observed, termed also retro-tabula.

King of Scots, A.D. 1424, regulate the export of "fowmartis skinnis, callit fithowis." The fowmart appears, however, to be distinct from the fitchew: in the Boke of St. Alban's, among "bestys of the chace of the stynkynges fewte," are named "the fulmarde, the fyches, &c. and the pulcatte." Harrison, speaking of indigenous animals, and the hunting of foxes and badgers, observes, "I might here intreat largelie of other vermine, as the polcat, the miniuier, the weasell, stote, fulmart, squirrill, fitchew, and such like." <sup>2</sup> Forby gives funk as signifying touchwood. The word may be derived from Germ. funk, Dan. funke, scintilla. R. See also pp. 2, 79; Gawayn and the Grene Knyzt, 1425; the Boke of St. Alban's, and Malory's Morte d'Arthur, B. 18, c. xxi. It seems probable that the term feuterer may be hence derived; but the Glossarists have supposed it to be a corruption of vaultrier, a keeper of the dog called in French "vaultre, a mongrel between a hound and a maistiffe; fit for the chase of wild bears and boars." COTGR. Bp. Kennett notices the term in his glossarial coll. Lansd. MS. 1033: "A feuterer, a dog-keeper; the word is corrupted from vautrier, Fr. vaultrier, Lat. veltrarius, one that leads a lime-hound, or grey-hound for the chase." In a vocabularly written in the latter part of the XVth cent. Harl. MS. 1002, f. 142, after "haywarde, parcare," &c. occurs "Federarius, a fewerer." Nares cites several passages in which this term is used.

<sup>1</sup> Sunt obstringilli qui per plantas consuti sunt, et ex superiori parte corrigid contrahuntur. CATH. The galache was a sort of patten fastened to the foot by cross latches, and worn by men as early as the time of Edw. III. Allusion is made to it by Chaucer, "Ne were worthy to unboole his galoche." Squire's Tale, 10,869.

In the inventory of the effects of Henry V. taken A.D. 1423, mention occurs of "j peir de galages faitz d'estreyn, &c.;" but it is not easy to understand how straw should be a proper material for the purpose. See Rot. Parl. iv. 329. In Sir John Howard's Household Book, A.D. 1465, p. 314, are named both galaches and pynsons, which last are in the Promptorium explained to be socks. See Household Expenses in England. This kind of shoe was occasionally an article of luxury and ostentatious display, which probably suggested the allusion that occurs in the Vision of Piers Ploughman, where one is described as coming eagerly, as if to be dubbed a knight,

"To geten hym gilte spores,
Or galoches y-couped." line 12,099.

The term "y-couped" seems to imply the extravagant fashion of the long-peaked toe: "Milleus, a coppid shoo." ORTUS. In the reign of Edward IV. a statute was passed, by which the higher classes alone were permitted to wear shoes, "galoges," or boots, with a peak longer than 2 inches (Rot. Parl. v. 505, 566; Stat. of Realm, II. 415); but, from certain allusions in ancient romance, it would seem that the fashion was, by the usage of a much earlier period, permitted to none under the degree of a knight. See Sir Degore, 700; Torrent of Portugal, 1193, &c. The curious drawings in Cott. MS. Julius, E. iv. (t. Hen. VI.), one of which, representing King John, has been given in Shaw's Dresses, exhibit the galache in its most extravagant form.  GANYNGALE, or galyngale, spyce.<sup>4</sup>
Galanga.
 GANNEKER (ganokyr, s.)<sup>5</sup> Ga-
nearia, v.g. in cupio, ganeo, v.g.

<sup>1</sup> This word occurs in the Harl. MS. alone, and possibly the correct reading may be GALAWNTE. "Gallaunt, a man fresshe in appareyle." PALSg. Ang.-Sax. gal, libidinuosus. For lessivus should probably be read luscivus, i. e. "petulans, luxurius, vel superbe se agens, ioly or wanton." ORTUS.

<sup>2</sup> By Chaucer the nightingale is said to "cry and gale," Court of Love, 1357; in which sense the word may be derived from the Ang.-Sax. galan, canere. Jamie-on gives to gale, or gail, to cry with a harsh note, a term applied to the cuckoo; and to galyie, to roar or brawl. According to Forby, to yawl signifies, in Norfolk, to scream harshly, as the cry of a peacock; and Moore gives yalen, to cry as a fretful child. "Japper, to bark or baye like a dog, to yawle, to bawle. Höüdler, to yawl, wawl, to cry out aloud. Möüaner, to mawle, yawle, or cry like a little child." COTG. Ang.-Sax. gyllan, giellan, stridere.

<sup>3</sup> "To gane, fatiscere, hiare, inhiscere. To gayne, oscitare." CATH. ANG. "I gane, or gape, I yane, ie baille. He ganeth as he had not slepte ynoughe." PALSg. Ang.-Sax. ganung, oscitatio. In the gloss on G. de Bihelesworth the verb to galp occurs, "Par trop veiller hom baille, galpep." See also the Vis. of P. Ploughm. 8,214; Cant. Tales, 10,664, 16,984. Horman renders "he that galpeth, oscitans."

<sup>4</sup> Among the spices used in ancient cookery, the powder of galingale is frequently named, as may be seen in the Forme of Cury. It was the chief ingredient in galentine, which, as Pegge supposes, derived thence its name. It was also employed in medicine, as a cardiac and cephalic. In the version of Macer's Treatise on Spices, MS. in the possession of Hugh W. Diamond, Esq. it is stated that "Galyngale resolupþe fleume of þe stomak; hit helpþ þe deistione; it doþ amende þe sauour and odour of þe mouthe if it be eten." He further attributes to it virtues of a carminative and aphrodisiac nature. It occurs among spices mentioned in the Household Roll of the Countess of Leicester, A.D. 1265; "pro vij lib. Galingaliam, ix. s." (Manners and Expenses of England, p. 14.) Chaucer makes allusion to its culinary use, Cant. Tales, 383. The annual provision of spices for the household of the Earl of Northumberland, A.D. 1512, comprised "Galyngga, j quarteron." According to Parkinson, the real galingale was the root of a Chinese plant, of which he gives a representation; but it appears that the root of the rush called English galingale, Cyperus longus, Linn. was much used in place of it, both as a drug and a condiment.

<sup>2</sup> The reading of the Winchester MS. is probably here correct. In Norfolk a gage is, according to Forby, a bowl or tub to receive the cream, as it is successively skimmed off; so called, as he observes, from its use as a gauge, to show when a sufficient quantity has been collected to be churned. The word does not occur in the other MSS.

<sup>3</sup> In a treatise of the seasons, printed with Arnold's Chron. p. 172, it is recommended that in winter "men shulde lete them bloode in ther bodys by garsinge, but not on veynes, but if it be the more nede;" meaning the operation of cupping, called in the Promptorium BOYSTON. "To garse, scarificare." CATH. ANG. "Cusura, a cut, a garse, an incision." ELYOT.

<sup>4</sup> The term ANGYLLE, to take wythe fysche, meaning a fishing rod, has occurred already, as also ELYER, or elger, which appears to be an eel-spear. "Contus, an algere, a shaft, a dart, a polloure. Fascina, a hoke for fysshe, an algere." MED. MS. CANT. The word GARFANGYL seems wholly obsolete; possibly the first syllable may be traced to Ang-Sax. gar, juculum, or the implement may be a kind of spear used in taking the GARFYSCH.

quaintly-fashioned water-spouts in the forms of men or monsters with yawning mouths, of which mediæval architecture presents so endless a variety, is taken from the French, "Gargyle in a wall, gargoille." FALG. See also Roquefort, v. Gargoile. Horman says, "Make me a trusse standing out upon gargellys, that I may se about: podium, suggestum, vel pulpitum, quod mutalis innitatur. I wyll haue gargyllis under the beamys heedis: mutulos, sive proceres, &c." Flyot renders "frunee, the vppermoste parte of the throte, the gargyll." A remarkable application of the gargoyle in architecture occurs on the south side of Notre Dame, at Paris; all the piscinas of the apsidal chapels surrounding the choir of that side being furnished with external gargoyles, which are fashioned like the upper parts of a lion, or dragon, and answer the purpose of the ordinary interior drains, which served to allow the water used in ablutions at the altar to pass into the earth. Their date is of the XIIIth cent. and nothing of a similar kind has been noticed in this country.

<sup>1</sup> In the Creed of Piers Ploughman is a curious and graphic description of a monastery, with its numerous and stately buildings,

"With gaye garites and grete,
And iche hole y-glased." line 425.

A GARYTTE was, in the original sense of the term, a watch tower, or look-out, on the roof of a house, or castle wall, called garita, in French guerite. In the version of Vegetius, Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. it is said of the defence of a camp, and keeping watch by night, "it is nat possible algate to haue highe garettes, or toures, or high places for watche men, therfor it nedethe to haue out watche." B. iii. c. 8. Caxton, in the Book for Travellers, says "of thinges that ben vsed after the hous,—hit behoueth to the chambres, loftes, and garetis, solliers, greniers." Cotgrave explains garitte, or guerite, to be a place of refuge from surprise, made in a rampart; a sentry, or watch-tower; and "tourrel à cul de lampe, a small out-jutting garret, or tower like a garret, on the top of a walle." See SOLERE hereafter.

<sup>2</sup> A garnish signified commonly the set or service of pewter, and likewise, in more stately establishments, of more precious material. Previously to the introduction of fictile ware of an ornamental description in the latter part of the XVIth cent. the ordinary service of the tables of our ancestors was on vessels of pewter, the silver plate being for the most part reserved to decorate the cupboard, or buffet. Harrison, in his description of Eng. written about 1580, speaking of the great skill to which English pewterers had attained, says, "Such furniture of household of this mettall, as we commonlie call by the name of vessell, is sold usuallie by the garnish, which dooth containe 12 platters, 12 dishes, 12 saucers, and those are either of siluer fashion, or else with brode or narrow brims, and bought by the pound, which is now valued at six or seuen pence, or peradventure at eight pence. In some places beyond the sea a garnish of good flat English pewter of an ordinarie making, . . . is esteemed almost so pretious as the like number of vessels that are made of fine siluer, and in maner no less desired, amongst the great estates, whose workmen are nothing so skillful in that trade as ours." Holirsh. Chron. i. 237. In the inventory of the college of Bishop Auckland, A.D. 1498, the silver plate having been described, there are enumerated "xx powder platers, xij powder dishes, viij saucers, j garnishe of vessell." "Full straight and euyn lay his jolly shode." Miller's Tale.

Hence also seems to be taken the term GATE SCHADYLLE, the division of a road into two or more directions. It appears to be wholly obsolete, and unnoticed by the Glossarists. See Carfax (cartehouse, MS.) above, p. 62.

<sup>4</sup> In the Romance of the Seuyſn Sages, the Emperour had given ear to the false accusation brought against Florentine by his step-mother; but the truth was at length made known.

"A! Dame, said the Emperowre,
 Thou haues ben a fals gilowre,
 For thi gaudes, and thy gilry,
 I gif this dome that thiou sal dy." line 3957.

Mr. Weber has printed the word here gande, to which he gives the sense of a wile or mischievous design. Minot, in his poem on the Battle of Halidon Hill, says,

"The Scottes gaudes might nothing gain."

Chaucer uses the word in the signification of a trick, or joke. See Parlonere's Tale, 12,323, and Troil. B. ii. It implies also an ornament or toy of little value. Sherwood gives "a gaude, babiole," which Cotgrave renders "a trifle, whimwham, guigaw, or small toy for a child to play withal." See Jamieson, and Nares, v. Gaud.

<sup>1</sup> To gavel signifies in Norfolk, according to Forby, to collect mown corn into heaps, in order to its being loaded. "Javeler, to swathe or gavel corn; to make it into sheaves, or gavels," COTG. Moore gives the word likewise as used in Suffolk.

<sup>2</sup> The Myrica gale Linn. sweet gale, or bog myrtle, grows in boggy places in many parts of England, and before drainage had been carried to any extent in the fenny Eastern counties, it was probably found in sufficient abundance to be commonly used as fuel. Gerarde says that the Myrtus Brabanticus, gaule, sweet willow, or Dutch myrtle, grows plentifully in sundry places, as in the Isle of Ely, and the fenny places thereabouts; "whereof there is such store in that country, that they make fagots of it, and sheaves, which they call Gaule sheaves, to burn and heat their ovens." He mentions also that it was used to give an intoxicating quality to beer or ale, as it is still employed in Sweden.

<sup>3</sup> "Gaunselle, applauda," CATH. ANG. The composition of this sauce is thus given in Arund. MS. 344; printed in Household Ordin. 441; and Warner's Cookery, 65. "Gaunsell for gese. Take floure, and tempur hit with gode cowe mylke, and make hit thynne, and colour hit with saffron; and take garlick, and stamp hit, and do thereto, and boyle hit, and sew hit forthe." Caxton says, in the Book of Travellers, "Nicholas the mustard maker hath good vynegre, good gauselyn, gausalliede." The term is evidently derived from "gausse d'ail, a clove of garlick." COTG. The Ortus explains "applauda vel appluda, dicitur sorbitiuncula ex paleis facta," (a gaunselle," MED.) This Latin word properly means chaff of corn, or husks, but here is taken in reference to the gausses, or husk-like covering of the garlick.

<sup>1</sup> It would hence appear that the recital of gests, the deeds of conflict or gallantry, which was the proper business of the gestour, was accompanied by appropriate action, or gesticulation. "Gestire, i. gestus facere, scilicet diversis modis agitare, gaudere, luxuriari, &c." CATH. Ierne stated erroneously that gests were opposed to romance, Chron. Langt. pref. p. 37; a mistake which Warton has properly corrected. Chaucer uses "to geste," to relate gests; and "to tell in gests;" Cant. T. 17,354, 13,861; and these passages apparently imply that gests were chiefly written in alliterative verse. He calls the Gesta Romanorum, "the Romain gestes." See Tyrwhitt's notes on Cant. T. 17,354, 13,775, and Warton's Eng. Poetry. "Gest, a tale. Gestyng, bourde," PALSgrave.

"Adibtheth him a gay wenche of the newe jet." line 118.

"Yit a poynte of the new gett to telle wille I not blyn.

Towneley Myst. 312.

Chaucer says the gay pardoner thought he rode "al of the newe get," or fashion; and he also uses the word in the sense of crafty contrivance, where he relates the deceit practised by the Alchemist, by means of a stick filled with silver filings.

"And with his stikke above the crosselet,

That was ordained with that false get,

Chan. Yem. T. 16,745.

<sup>3</sup> It appears that in former times great virtues were attributed to jet. Alex. Neecham, Abbot of Cirencester, who died A.D. 1217, says in his work De Rerum Naturâ, "Gagates . . . aquâ ardet, oleo restringitur; attrita calfactus applicatus detinet, atque succinum: ydopropis illum portantibus beneficium prestat." lib. ii. c. 97, Roy. MS. 12 G. XI. f. 53. The observation of the electric properties of this mineral led him in the succeeding chapter to make some detailed remarks "de vi attractiva," among which will be found a notice of the use of the magnet by mariners. In Trevisa's version of Barth. de propr. rerum, are the following observations: "Gette hyght gagates, and is a boystous stone, and neuer the less it is precious." It is best and most abundant in Britain, of two kinds, yellow and black, both of which have by friction the power of attracting light substances. It drives away adders, relieves fantasies, and has virtues against the visits of fiends by night. "And so if so boystus a stone dothe so greate wonders, none shuld be dispisid for foule colour without, while the vertu that is hid within is vnknewe." lib. xvi. c. 49. It was also regarded as a test of virginity, and rendering signal aid in parturition; these, and other properties, are noticed in Caxton's "Boke callid Caton," sign. e, viij. Even in the XVth cent. it was valued for certain medicinal qualities; for Dr. Turner, Dean of Wells, says in his Herbal, 1562, "Miscel burde lyme melteth a swelled milt, if it be sodden, and layd to wyth a gete stone, or the Asiane stone." Beads, used for the repetition of prayers, were frequently formed of this material; thus among the gifts of Philip le Hardi to his daughter, on her marriage with the King of Bohemia, A.D. 1393, occurs, "Item, j paternostres de perles et de juyet, ou il y a xxxij grossies perles, et ix enseignaulx d'or." Hist. de Bourg. iii. Alianor Duchess of Gloucester bequeaths A.D. 1399, "un pare de paternostres d'ore, cont' xxx ariez, et iij gaudes de get, qe faurent à mon seignour et mari." Royal Wills. See also Testam. Ebor. i. 381. There is evidence that by some persons such beads were superstitiously regarded as gifted with extraordinary virtue; and to this belief Bp. Bale appears to make allusion, Kyng Johan, p. 29.

<sup>2</sup> This term denotes the singular projection of the solars or upper stories in old timbered houses, of which most picturesque specimens are still seen at Chester, and other towns. "Proceres dicuntur capita tribium que eminent extra parietes. Hectea dicitur solarium dependens parietibus cenculi." ORTUS. The Catholicon explains menianum to be the same as solarium, so named from Menianus, who made in the Forum certain convenient places for beholding public spectacles. "Meniana, buildings outward in prospectes and galleries, especially when they be so builded that the edifice iutteth out in length from the pillar or other part of the house, wherin the building especially resteth; buildings of pleasure hanging and iutting out." COOPER. Horman says that "buyldynge charygydde with iotyes (maniana edificia) is parelous when it is very olde." In Macbeth, act I. sc. vi. Shakespeare makes use of the term "juttie" in this sense, where Banquo commends the position of Macbeth's castle. Florio, in his Ital. Dict. 1598, gives "Barbarane, an outnooke, or corner standing out of a house, a jettie. Sporto, a porch, bay-window, or out-butting, or jettie of a house, that jetties out farther than anie other part of the house." Cotgrave renders "suspendue, a jettie, an outiutting roome. Suspendue, soupenue, a pent-house, iuttie, or part of a building that iuttieth or leameth ouer the rest." Steevens cites an agreement made by P. Henslowe for building a theatre in 1599, with "a juttie forwards in eyther of the two upper stories."

gives "Manducos, images carried in pageantes with great cheekes, wide mouthes, and making a great noyse with their iawes." The Ortus renders "Manducos, a gaye horse;" and Forby gives the following explanation of the term: "Jibby-horse, a showman's horse decorated with particoloured trappings, plumes, streamers, &c. It is sometimes transferred to a human subject." In the MS. the word manducum is placed under GYBELET; but its proper place is here. See Ugc. Vocab. Arund. MS. 508, f. 141, b.

Ray has gail or guile-fat among North Country words, and it is given also by Brockett and Jamieson. "A gile-fatte, acromellarium." CATH. ANG. In 1341, Thomas Harpham, of York, bequeaths "unam canam, que vocatur maske-fat, et ij parvas canas que vocantur gyle-fatts." Testam. Ebor. ii. 2. The term occurs repeatedly in the Wills and Invent. printed by the Surtees Soc.; and in the Invent. of Jane Hall, Durham. 1567, a distinction is apparent between the "gile howse," and the brew-house, the former being perhaps the chamber where the wort was set to eool. See vol. i. 279. In the accounts of the building of Little Saxham Hall, 1507, it is called the "yele-house." Rokewode's Suff. 146. See Invent. of Sir John Fastolfe's effects, 1459, Archæol. xxi. 277; Unton Invent. pp. 3, 13; and Hartshorne's Shropshire Glossary, c. 111it.

<sup>4</sup> In medieval Latin guare signifies to lead or conduct in safety, to instruct, "quasi viam," according to Ducange. In the Wardr. Book of 28 Edw. I. there is a payment "pro radiis unius Lodmanui conducti pro navi guandā inter Kveodbrith et Karla-crook," p. 273. Roquefort gives "guier: mener, guider, conduire à la guerre, gouverner," &c. Chaucer uses the verb to gie, Cant. T. 15,604, 15,627. Gower says of the education of Alexander by Aristotle,

"But yet he set an examplayre,
His body so to guye and rule,
That he ne passe mot the rule." Conf. Am. lib. vii.

See also the Vis. of P. Ploughm. 1257. R. Brunne uses both the verb, and the noun "gyour," a leader; and in the Romance of K. Alis. 6023. "divers gyours, and sump-teris" are mentioned as attending on his Eastern expedition. "Commino, to lede, or to gie." MED. Palsgrave gives the verb, "I gie, or gyde, Lydgate."

"Go not to the wrastling, ne shooting the cock,
As it were a strumpet or a giglot."

<sup>3</sup> "A gylte, suella." CATH. ANG. A gilt, or gaut, signifies in the North a female pig that has been spayed; see Grose, Brockett, and Jamieson. Bp. Kennett, in his glossarial coll. gives "galts and gilts, boar-pigs and sow-pigs. Bor. from old Dan. gallte, ƿorras. Sax. gylte, suilla." See Yorksh. Dial. p. 39. Any female swine is called a gilt in Staff. Lansl. MS. 1033. See Hartshorne's Shropshire Glossary.

<sup>4</sup> This word is still used in Norfolk, precisely in the sense that it has here. Forby gives "Gimmers, small linges, as those of a box or cabinet, or even of the parlour door." A sperynge here denotes that by which a place is closed up, as a door or window, the lid of a chest, &c. The derivation of the word is doubtless from the French, gémmeaux, twins; and the term applies properly not only to a hinge, composed of two portions, of exactly similar form and size, jointed together, but to anything else which is formed of twin pieces of like dimension, united in any manner, either as a hinge or otherwise. In the version of Veggeius attributed to Trevisa, an expedient is described, to be used in a besieged fortress, against the battering ram: "Somm hathe an iren, made as it were a peire tonges, i-lemewle as tonges in the myddes," by which the head of the ram is seized, and turned aside. B. iv. c. 23. Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. Among the disbursements for building Little Saxham Hall, A.D. 1507, under smith's work are mentioned "iij pair of jemews for almerys," or eupboards, as many for portal doors, and a pair for the buttery windows. Rokewode's History of Suff. pp. 146, 149. Ray, among N. Country words, gives "Jimmers, jointed hinges, in other parts called wing-hinges;" and the term occurs in the Craven dialect, with the observation, that

See Nares, Brand's Popular Ant. and Archæol. xiv. 7. Palsgrave has "Gymewe of a gyrdell, crochet d'une troussure. Gymell song, jumeau;" and Higgins, in his edition of Huloet's Diet, gives "Gimow (or gemoll) a little ryng to weare on the fynger. <sup>1</sup> A gin signifies, according to the old writers, a cunning or deceitful device, and thence an ingeniously constructed machine of any kind. Chaucer uses the word in both senses; thus the crafty trick of the Alchemist, which is termed "a false get," as has been observed in the note on the word GET, is called also "a false gin." In the Squire's T. it is related that the magical steed of brass would bear its rider at pleasure,

"And turne again with writhing of a pin;
He that it wrought, he coude many a gin."

In the Golden Legend, the wiles of Satan are termed "gynnes of temptacyon," Life of St. Bernard. In the Romance of Coer de Lion warlike machines are termed gins; as they are continually in Trevisa's version of Vegecius, Roy. MS. 18 A. XII "Trocha, the gyn whyche is called a crane." ELYOT. See Hartshorne's Shropshire Glossary. "Exostra, a vice or gin of wood, wherewith such things as are done within, out of sight, are showed to the beholders by the turning about of wheeles." Junius's Nomenclator, by Fleming.

<sup>2</sup> This word is a corruption of the French "Gilbecière, a pouch, bag, poake, budget," COG. properly such as was used in hawking, &c. but commonly worn by the merchant, or with any secular attire. Chaucer says of the Frankelein, or country gentleman, is, according to the Catholicon, "genus armorum quod Gallice dicitur gisarma, a gero, vel ceto, a cordendo: it sunt gese vel cese Gallorum, pila Romanorum." In the curious Dictionary of John de Garlandia, printed in the Collection of documents relating to French history, Paris, 1837, there is an enumeration of weapons and engines of war, used at the siege of Toulouse, in 1218: the writer says that he saw "securas, bipennes, cathagasi Gallorum, cathias et pygiones, cum dolonibus, avelancias Anglicorum (undacias, al. MS.) pila Romanorum, &c." The MS. at Rouen gives the following reading, "securas Duchos, jesa Gallorum." But, although the gisarme seems in these passages to be appropriated as a Gaulish weapon, Wace, in the Roman de Rou, written about 1160, repeatedly describes the English in Harold's army as armed with sharp gisarnies and hatchets, whereas their opponents fought with long lances and swords. See lin. 12,908, 12,928, 13,437. It may be observed, however, that on the Bayeux tapestry the Saxons are represented as combating with the heavy axe, but no weapon appears which resembles the gisarme. In the Royal mandate, 36 Hen. III. 1252, printed by Wats at the end of his edition of M. Paris, the sheriffs are commanded to assemble all persons from the age of 15 to 60, and cause them "jurare ad arma," according to the amount of their lands and chattels; those who were rated under 40 shillings land, or from 40 shillings to 10 marks chattels, "jurati sunt ad falces, gisarnas, cultellos et alia arma minora." From this document, and the stat. Wint. 13 Edw. I. c. 6, 1285, it is apparent that the gisarme was one of the weapons in ordinary use among the inferior ranks of the English army. See Stat. of Realm, i. 97. A curious description of the conflict of the King of Nimech, armed with "gisarme and sword Lothe," occurs in the Romance of Kyng Alis. line 2302. See also Havelok, 2553; Ritson's Metr. Rom.; Chaucer, R. of Rose, 5978. The gisarme was used in England as late as the battle of Flodden, 1513; it was of two kinds, according to Sir S. Meyrick, namely, the glaive gisarme, and the bill gisarme; the distinctive mark of the weapon being a spike rising at the back, as may be seen in Grose's Armour, pl. 28, and Skelton's Illustr. of the Armoury at Goodrich Court, ii. pl. 84, 85.

"An anelace and gipsere all of silke
Hing at his girdle, white as morow milke."

In the Invent. of valuables, the property of Henry V. A.D. 1423, is enumerated "j gipcer de noier velcet, garniz d'or, pris 66s. 8d." Rot. Parl. iv. 215.

<sup>2</sup> The gyterne, getron, or cittern, Fr. güterne, was a stringed instrument, which seems, from the repeated mention that is made of it by Chaucer, to have been much in favour, probably as an accompaniment to the voice. In the Lat. Eng. vocabulary, Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. are given "giga, getyrne: gigator, getyrner." f. 43, b. Amongst the curious representations of musical instruments in Sloane MS. 3983, t. Edw. II. f. 13, the harp is called "gigo cel lira," but the same is named "arpes," f. 4, b.; with the former there is seen an instrument with five strings, and the head recurved, which perhaps exhibits the form of the gyterne at that early period. In default of any positive information on the obscure subject of the early history of music, it may be stated, conjecturally, that the gyterne is the instrument which was held in an horizontal position, and played either by hand or with a plectrum, as may be seen in almost every representation of the angelic choir, whether in sculpture, painted glass, or illuminated MSS. The minstrels' gallery on the North side of the nave at Exeter Cath., sculptured in the reign of Edw. III. may be noticed as a remarkable instance. In Hawkins' Hist. of Music, iv. 113, a figure is given of the cittern, from Merseus, Harmonie Universelle, 1656, which represents an instrument with six strings, differing from the Spanish guitar in the pear-shaped form of the belly. It was little esteemed, and chiefly used in

<sup>1</sup> A GYTONE, or guidon, is the name of a sort of banner, or streamer, called in Latin guido, which Ducange derives from guida, a guide. Guidon has been supposed to be a corruption of guile-homme; and is written "guydhome" in Harl. MS. 2258, where it is stated that its length was to be  $2\frac{1}{2}$  or 3 yards: "euery standard and guydhome to have in the chief the erosse of St. George, to be slitte at the ende, and to conteyne the creste or supporter, with the posey, worde and device of the owner." From Harl. MS. 838, it appears that every baronet or superior estate should display a banner, if he were chief captain; every knight a pennon, and "euery squier or gentleman his getoun or standard." It is also directed that both the last should be slit at the extremity, whence probably the getoun was called conscisorium, as given above. In the contemporary poem descriptive of the siege of Rouen, A.D. 1415, it is said,

"There was many a getoun gay,
With myehille and great array." line 1214.

See Sir Fred. Madden's note on this line, Archæol. xxii. 396; and Retrospect. Rev. i. 511, N.S. It appears that a gytone was not only carried in the field, but attached to the mast of a ship; thus, in a bill of expenses for the Earl of Warwick, A.D. 1437, is a charge, "Item, a gyton for the shippe, of viij yardis longe, poudrid full of raggid staves, for the lynnyng and workmanship ij s." Dugl. Warw. In the Will of John, Baron de Graystok, A.D. 1436, is this bequest: "lego pro mortuario meo optimum equum cum totâ armaturâ mea, cotearmour, penon, et gyton", &c." Wills and Inv. i. 85, Surtees Soc. Palsgrave gives "Guyderne, a baner in a felde, guidon: Gyderne, guidon:" and Cotgrave has "guidon, a standard, ensigne, or banner, under which a troop of men of arms do serve; also he that bears it."

<sup>2</sup> This word seems to have implied not only to furbish arms, or armour, but, by means of some kind of varnish, to preserve the polish from rust. Sir John Paston gives the following direction: "As for my byll that is gylt, I wolde it were taken head to; there is von in the town can glaser weel I now, and ellys late it be weel oylid." Palsgrave gives the verb "I glase a knyfe to make it bright; ie ffourbis."

"Unseled lime, chalke, and gleire of an eye."

In a curious MS. in the possession of Sir Thomas Phillipps, concerning the craft of liming, is the following recipe: "To couche gold: take gleyere, and safferoun grounde, and couche on thy golde, whyle hit is moyste." Foxe relates that one Margery Backster, being accused of heresy, thus declared her opinion of images; "lewel wrightis of stocks hew and forme such crosses and images, and after that, lewd painters gleere them with colours." The French word glaise has also, according to Cotgrave, the signification of "gravell, sand, and small pible stones, or sand mingled with stones; also a whitish and slimy soil," in Latin glarea; hence it is said in Caxton's Mirroir of the World, part ii. c. 85, that "by Acres the cyte is founden a maner of sande, and there is founden also of the gayre of the see, whiche ben medled to gydre, and of thysse two myxtyons is made good glasse and clere." Bosworth derives glare from A.-S. glære, pellucidum quidvis.

Kennett's gloss. coll. Lansd. MS. 1033. The Medulla gives, "Conspico, to glene, or els to gadyre songles. Aristor, i. colligere, spicas, to glene, or to gadre songles." MS. Cant. Mr. Wilbraham gives songow, used in this sense in Cheshire.

See Jamieson, v. Gley. Compare GOGULEYE, hereafter.

<sup>4</sup> "To glosse, ubi to fage. To glose, glosare, glosulare." CATH. ANG. In the earlier version this verse is thus given, "fage to thi man, and meue hym that he shewe to thee what bitokeueth the probleme." This signification of FAGYN has been noticed above.

Percy's Essay on Minstrels, Sir Tristrem, Havelok the Dane, Jamieson, &c. In the Vision of Piers Ploughman, a singular comparison occurs, doubtless used proverbially, as an analogous expression is at the present time. <sup>1</sup> "A goffe, ubi a godefader. A gome, ubi a godmoder." CATH. ANG. In the North goff signifies a fool, according to Brockett and Jamieson. Cotgrave gives "commère, a she-gossip, or godmother, a gomme," but the term appears to be now obsolete.

<sup>2</sup> The interjection Goddot, Goddoth, occurs frequently in Havelok the Dane; Sir F. Madden, in his Glossary appended to that curious poem, supposes it to be a corruption of God wot! formed in the same manner as Goddrl for God's will, in Yorkshire and Lancashire; a conjecture which appeared to be confirmed by the following passage, where it is related that Havelok made a vow to found a priory,

"And therof held he wel his oth,
For he it made, God it woth!" line 2527.

The word, it is further observed, appears to have been limited to Lincolnshire or Lancashire, and a single instance of its occurrence is cited from a poem written in the former county, t. Edw. I. From the form, however, of the word, as it occurs in the Promptorium, the derivation appears to be more obviously from A.-Sax. gutan, concedere.

<sup>3</sup> This term occurs in the Wicliffite version, Mark ix. 46; "If thin yghle sleaundre thee, caste it out; it is better to thee to entre gogil-yghed (luscam, Vulg.) into the rewme of God, than have tweyne yghen," &c. Palsgrave gives among the adverbs, "a goggell, cu boucler. Goggle-eyed man, loche." Junius thinks it may be derived from A.-S. secg cȝede, strabo.

<sup>2</sup> A riek of corn in the straw laid up in a barn is called in Norfolk, according to Forby, a goaf; every division of the barn being termed a goaf-stede: to goave signifies to stow corn therein. See also Ray and Moore. Tusser uses the verb to gove, to make a mow or riek; see August's Husbandry, st. 23. In a short Latin-Eng. Vocabulary of the XVth cent. written apparently at Creak, in Norfolk, Add. MS. 12,195, occur "Gelimo, to golue. Ingelinum, golfe." Palsgrave gives "goulfe of corne, so moche as may lye bytwene two postes, otherwise a baye."

<sup>3</sup> Roquefort gives "golŋon, sorte d'habit de guerre;" but in the Promptorium golyon and gown seem to be almost synonymous, both being rendered by the Latin gunellus, a diminutive of guana. The term is used by Gower, where he relates the exchange of garments made by Hercules and Iole, in order to deceive Faunus,

" He hath hir in his clothes clad,
And east on hir his golion,
Whiche of the skin of a lion
Was made."

<sup>1</sup> This word occurs in the glosses on G. de Bibelesworth, Arund. MS. 220, as the rendering of foreyn, a place retired, a "witldraught," as it was called,

"Vu mauys vint en ma forere (an heuedlond),
Os par despît jist foreyn hier (gonge.)"

Hence the term "chambre forene," which is used by Robert of Glouc. In the Seuyn Sages it is related that a father and son went together to commit a robbery, and the father falling into a pit, bid his son cut off his head, that he might not be recognized. He carried the head away to conceal it,

"But als he com bi a gong, Amide the pit he hit slong." line 1315.

Fabyan gives the following tale, 43 Hen. III. "In this yere fell that happe of the Jewe of Tewkysbury, whiche fell into a gonge vpon the Saterdaye, and wolde not for reuerence of his sabbot day be plucked out; wherof heryng the Erle of Glouceter, that the Jewe dyd so great reuerence to hys sabbot daye, thought he wolde do as myche to his holydaye, whych was Sondaye, and so kept hym there tyll Monday, at which season he was found dede." The Medulla gives "Birsa, cloaca, a gonge;" and Palsgrave "Gonge, a draught, ortrait." A.-S. gong, gāng-setil, gāng-pytte, gāng-tun, latrina.

<sup>2</sup> "Gonge farmer, maister de basses oeuvres, guigueron, cerrier d'ortraitz. I ferme a siege, or priuy, v'escur. Neuer come to your newe house, tyll your seges or priuyes be fermid, tant que vous ayez curé les orttrays." PALSGr. Thomas, in his Ital. COEG. Bp. Kennett gives the following note in his glossarial coll. Lansl. MS. 1033: "To farm, to cleanse or empty, Bor, Oxfordshire; as, to farm kine, to farm a stable or cow-house; from Sax. feormian, purge, whence the cleansers of jakes or priues are in some places called jakes-farmers." Compare FOWAR, FOWYN, and FYIN.

<sup>3</sup> Flory, ms. Slush and gore are generally mentioned together in Norfolk, as Forby observes, the former expressing the thin, the latter the thick part of the mire. Ang.-Sax. gor, latum. Brockett gives gor, in the Northern Dialect.

"For gore and fen, and full wast,
 That was out y-kast,
 Togydere they gadered, Y wys." Lybeaus disconus, line 1471.

<sup>4</sup> Lacinia is explained in the Catholicon to be "vestis lacinata, vel ori sive extremitas vestimenti;" to which the following addition in made in the Ortus, "vel nodus clauicidis, a hemme of clothe, or a gore, or a trayne." G. de Bibelesworth says,

"Car par deuauant avez eskours (lappes),
Et d'encosté sont vos girouns (sidgoren.)"

This word is used repeatedly by Chaucer, and Tyrwhitt observes that its meaning was not intelligible. It seems, however, to imply a slit in a garment, whereby a piece is either inserted or taken away, so as to widen or contract it; thus the attire of the Carpenter's young wife is described, who wore

"A barm-cloth, as white as morwe milk, Upon her lendes, ful of many a gore." Miller's T. 3237.

Here it doubtless signifies that her apron was gathered in with numerous plaits, in girdling it about her hips. Sir Thopas says, where he relates his dream,

"An elf-queene shall my lemman be,
And slepe under my gore." Cant. T. line 13,719.

Here the expression seems to be one of those conventional phrases of romance of which the meaning cannot be closely defined, and implying ample coverings, garments full and rich. In Emare, the Queen of Galys is said to be "goodly unther gore,—wordy unther wede,—comely unther kelle." Ritson, Metr. R. ii. 243. "Goore of a smoeke, poyste de chemise," FALSG. <sup>1</sup> In the North, and other parts of England, the Ulex Europæus, Linn. or common furze, is called gorse. Ang.-Sax. gorst, erica, rubus. See the note on the word FYRRYS, above. "Ruscus, a gorst, or a furse." MED. MS. CANT. In the margin is the addition in Somner's hand, of the Ang.-Sax. words, "eneoholen, fyres." Cotgrave gives "genest espineux, furres, whinnes, gorse, thorne-broom."

<sup>3</sup> GOSYP-MANN, MS. The Baptismal sponsors were formerly called gossips, a term which Skinner derives from Ang.-Sax. God, Deus, and syb, affindus, as it were "cognati in Deo;" and by the Canon law marriage was forbidden between persons thus allied, as much as between relatives by blood. In the Lay le Freine, it is related that the knight, to whom two sons were born, sent to greet a knight who was his neighbour,

"And pray him that he com to me,
And say he schal mi gossibbe be."

It would hence seem that the term comprised not only the co-sponsors, but the parents of the child baptized. Verstegan, in his explanations of ancient words, observes upon "Godsip, now pronounced gossip. Our Christian ancestors, understanding a spiritual affinity to grow between the parents and such as undertook for the child at baptism, called each other by the name of Godsib, which is as much to say, as that they were sib together, that is, of kin together through God." p. 175, edit. 1655. Fabian says of the repudiation of Ingebert of Denmark by Philip Augustus, king of France "yt was not longe or she were from hym deuoured for cause of alyauce of gossypred, or other-wise." <sup>1</sup> "Lanugo, i. lana super poma, vel flos tribuli qui postquam bene siccatus est levi flatu effertur in aerem." CATH. In the Promptorium an allusion is made to another and strange supposition regarding the production of gossamer, noticed by Skinner, namely, that it was formed from the dew scorched by the morning sun, and thence, as it seems, termed here corruption. It is evident from Chaucer that this phenomenon had exercised the ingenuity of curious observers in ancient times.

"As sore wondren som on cause of thonder,
On ebbe and floud, on gossomer, and on mist,
And on all thing, til that the cause is wist." Squiere's T. 10,572.

An allusion to the anciently received notion occurs in Spenser, who speaks of — "the fine nets which oft we woven see Of scorched dew."

"As light and thin as cobwebs that do fly
In the blew air, caus'd by the autumnal sun,
That boils the dew that on the earth doth lie;
May seem this whitish rug then in the scum,
Unless that wiser men make't the field spider's loom." H. More.

Even Dr. Hooke advances a conjecture that the great white clouds seen in summer might consist of gossamer. Microgr. 202. Dr. Hulse and Martin Lister first observed the real mode of its production by a species of spider. See Ray's Letters, 36, 69; Lister de Araneis; and the interesting relation in White's Hist. Selb. The etymology of the word is very obscure; Skinner suggests gossampine, Fr. gossipium, Lat. the cotton plant. The derivation proposed in the Craven Glossary, from its appellation "summer-gauze, hence gauze o' th' summer, gauzamer, alias gossamer," is hardly tenable, when it is considered that the term was probably received in our language long before the introduction of the tissue called gauze. An early instance of its occurrence is in the gloss on G. de Bibelesworth, whose treatise was composed in the time of Edw. I.

water at guttes;" so that the road for shipping was much injured. Vol. iv. 72. This word is retained in use in several parts of England; Skinner and Ray give gowts, a word signifying in Somersetshire channels or drains under-ground. Bp. Kennett has the following notes in his gloss. coll. Lansd. MS. 1033: "A wide ditch, or water-course that empties itself into the sea, is called in Romney Marsh a gut, from old Dan. giota, scrobs: thence gutter, dim. a mill gut, a gote, i. e. a floud-gate, Northumb. Ang.-Sax. geotan, fundere." In the Craven Dialect gote denotes a channel of water from a mill-dam as does goyt in Hallamshire. Jamieson gives goat and got, a small trench or drain. A similar word occurs in old French; "Goute: gouttière, égout." ROQUEF.

"*Vostre regardz est gracios (lonelik),
 Mes vos oez sunt sacions (gundy);
 Des oez otez la sacye (þe gnnde),
 E de nics la rappe (þe maldrope).*"

Bp. Kennett, in his glossarial coll. Lansd. MS. 1033, has the following note: "Gunded eyes, Westm. Goundy, filthy like running sores, Gower. Gunny eyes, Yorksh. Dial." Ang.-Sax. gund, pms, sanies. Skelton describes the "eyen gowndye" of Elynour Rumming.

<sup>1</sup> A grayle is a service book containing the responses, or gradalia, so called because they are sung in gradibus, or by course. It is thus described by Lyndwood: "Gradale—ponitur pro libro integro, in quo contineri debent officium aspersionis aquæ benedictæ, missarum inchoationes, sive officia, Kyrie, cum versibus Gloria in excelsis, gradaliu, Halleluja, et tractus, sequentiæ, symbolum cantandum in Missâ, Offertorium, Sanctus, Agnus, Communio, &c. quæ ad chorum spectant in Missâ solennis decantatione." Province. iii. tit. 27. At the synod of Exeter, A.D. 1287, it was ordained that certain books should be provided in every parish, at the charge of the parishioners, among which is named the gradale. Wilkins, Conc. ii. 139. It is likewise included in the constitution of Abp. Winchelsey, to the same effect, A.D. 1305. Lyndw. The stat. 3 and 4 Edw. VI. for abolishing divers books and images, enacts "that all books called antiphoners, missals, grails, processions, &c. heeretofore used for service of the church, shall be cleerlie and vtterlie abolished, and forbidden for euer to be vsed or kept in this realme."

"Bithenk hou oft rape wil rewe,
And turn to grame wel grille." Amis and Amiloun, 657.

"Lordynges, he saide, y am aschamed,
And sore anoyed, and agramed." K. Alis. 3310.

In Havelok the verb to greme occurs, line 442, and the adjective gram, meaning angry or incensed, line 214. See also Seuyng Sages, 2703; Cant. Tales, 16,871; and Jamieson, v. Gram. Ang.-Sax. grama, molestia, gremian, irritare.

<sup>3</sup> It may be observed in the Forme of Cury, and all books of ancient cookery, that "myyd," or grated bread, was continually employed in the composition of a variety of dishes. Palsgrave says, "I holde a penny that I shall grate this lofe, or you can grate a rasyn of gynger;" that is, a root, racina.

<sup>2</sup> The primary meaning of the word grangia, in French grange, or grance, seems to have been a repository for grain, or, according to Ducange, a threshing floor; and thence it implied the farming establishment generally, with its various buildings and appliances, as it is accurately defined by Lyndwood, in his annotations on the Constit. of Abp. Mepham, Provinc. lib. ii. tit. i. Spelman cites a MS. in which the name Thomas Atelape, that is, at the lathe, or barn, is said to be in French, Thomas de la Graunge. The term has even the more extended sense of a hamlet; that is, probably, the assemblage of dwellings occupied by the dependants of the farm, which, doubtless, forming a nucleus, gave rise to the greater number of villages in ancient times. Palsgrave gives "graunge, or a lytell thorpe, hameau. Graunge, petit village." Huloet makes the following distinctions: "Graunge, or manour place without the walls of a citie, suburbium. Graunge, or little thorpe, viculus. Graunge, where husbandry is exercised, coloniola."

<sup>1</sup> The term GRECE seems to be derived from the plural of gre, a step. It is thus used in the Wicliffite version; "þou schalt not stye bi grees (per gradus, Vulg.) to myn auter, lest þi filþe be schewid." Exod. xx. 26. "Forsøþe Esdras þe writere stood on þe grees of tree (super gradum ligneum, Vulg.) whiche he hadde maad to speke þeron." Esdras, viii. 4. Compare iv Kings, xxiii. 3, and Dedis, xxi. 35. Sir John Maundevile says, in his relation of the state of the great Chan of Chatay, "the grees that he gothe up to the table ben of precyous stones, medled with gold." p. 259. And again, "Vesselle of sylver is there non, for thei telle no prys there of, to make no vesselle offe, but thei maken ther of greengyes, and pileres, and pawmentes to halles and chambres." p. 263. In the version of Vegetius, which is attributed to Trevisa, among directions how a strong place should be fortified by double walls, the intervening space being filled with earth, it is said that there should be in the making of the inner walle, at every forty or fifty fote of lengthe, esy gresinges fro the playn grounde of the citie up to the walls." <sup>2</sup> This name of the badger, which was taken, probably, from its colour, has previously occurred as synonymous with BAWSTONE. The gloss on the Equivoqa of John de Garlandia gives the following explanation: "Taxus, quoddam animal, a brocke or a grey." "Graye, a beest, taxe." PALSG. "Grisard, a badger, boason, brocke, or gray." COEG. "Grayo, a gray, a brocke, a badger." FLORIO. See Holland's Pliny, viii. c. 38.

"But first he cheweth grein and licorise,
To smellen sote, or he had spoke with here." Miller's Tale.

They are again mentioned in Rom. of the Rose. Gerarde and Parkinson give representations of the Meliquette, greatest sort of cardamoms, Grana Paradisi, or Guinea grains; a pod shaped like a fig, and full of red seed. The true grains of Paradise were brought <sup>1</sup> The fish here intended seems to be the cod or keeling, Morhua vulgaris, Cuv. which is called the green fish, probably from its colour, but, as stated in Willughby's Hist. Pisc. p. 166, from its being taken on the coast of Greenland. It abounds in the Northern seas: a multitude of British and Dutch fishermen are occupied in taking and preparing it for transport to all parts of Europe. It is called also habberdeen, Island fish, or stock-fish. "Moruë, the cod, or green fish. Moruë verte, green fish." COTG. This green variety, called the Scotch cod, is most common towards the North.

<sup>2</sup> In the Golden Legend, Life of St. Paul, there is a relation that the head of the saint was found by a shepherd, who "set it up by the place where his shepe greased." Palsgrave gives "to grease, or grase, as a horse dothe." The word, as usually written, is more in accordance with the derivation, Ang.-Sax. grasian, gramine vesci. Forby gives another signification of the verb to graze, as used in Norfolk, namely, to become covered with the growth of grass; in this sense it is given likewise in the CATH. ANG. "to gresse, herbere, herbescere."

Ploughman, 450, 2182, 4353: in the glossary, Mr. Wright refers to the story of Will Gris in the Lanercost Chron. Skinner cites Gouldman's Dict. as the sole authority for the word grice, and proposes as an etymon Belg. gris, cinereus. The word appears to be now obsolete, or retained only in the diminutive griskin. Bp. Kennett in his gloss. coll. Lansd. MS. 1033, gives, "grice, a pig; Island. gris, vel gry, succula;" and cites the Yorkshire Dial. p. 42, and Douglas's Virgil. See Jamieson.

<sup>2</sup> Neccham, in his treatise de nominibus utensilium, writes as follows respecting female costume: "Camisia sindonis, vel serici, vel bissi, materiam sorciatur (i. capiat.) Penula (pane) mantelli sit ex scisimis (gris), vel experiolis (ekureus), sive scurellis, vel ex canniculis, vel ex laeronibus (leeruns); cujus urala (penule) sit ex sabellino, &c." Cott. MS. Titus, D. xx. with an interlinear French gloss. This kind of fur is mentioned by John de Garlandia, in his Dictionary, among the more costly kinds: "Pelliparii—carius vendunt cisimum (al. scinum) et uralas de sabellino;" upon which the following gloss is given, "cisimus est illud quod dicitur Gallice vare, et gris." Docum. Inedits, Paris sous Philip le Bel, App. 591. The esteem in which it was held appears from M. Paris, who states in his account of the honorable reception of the Tartar envoys by Innocent IV. A.D. 1248, "dedit eis vestes pretiosissimas, quas robas vulgariter appellamus, de escarlate prælecto, cum penulis et fururiis de pellibus variis cisimorum." It is not easy to ascertain with precision what is the animal that supplied this fur; it appears to be described by Gesner as the Mus Ponticus, or Venetus, commonly called variatus, and the fur of which was termed by the Germans Grauwerc. The terms gris and vair seem, indeed, to be frequently used as synonymous, but many authorities may be cited from which a distinction is apparent. Much curious information on this subject, and on the use of costly furs in general, has been given by Ducange, in the first dissertation appended to Joinville. Chaucer describes the sleeve of the monk as "purfled at the hond with gris" of the finest quality. Cant. Tales, Prolog. 194. Mention occurs of "grey and gry" in Vis. of P. Ploughman, 10,065. See Jamieson, v. Greece. In the Invent. of the Wardrobe of Hen. V. taken 1423, are enumerated various garments "farvez de cristigrey;" probably a variety of gris.

<sup>1</sup> An engrafted scion is called in Norfolk a greft, or grift, according to Forby, who proposes as an etymon Angl.-Sax. græft, sculptile. "Graffe, or gryffe of a tree, ente. I gryffe a gryffe, je ente." FALSG.

<sup>2</sup> This fabulous animal is particularly described by Sir John Maundevile, in his account of Bacharie. "In that contree ben many griffounes, more plentee than in any other contree. Sum men seyn that thei han the body upward as an eagle, and benethe as a lyonne, and treuly thei seyn sothe that thei ben of that schapp. But o griffoun hathe the body more gret, and is more strong thanne viij. lyouns, of suche lyouns as ben o this half, and more gret and strongere than an e. egles, suche as we han amonges us." He further states that a griffin would bear to its nest a horse, or a couple of oxen yoked to the plough; its talons being like horns of great oxen, and serving as drinking cups; and of the ribs and wing feathers strong bows were made. See p. 325. Casley observes that in the Cotton Library there was such a cup, 4 ft. in length, silver-hooped, and inscribed "Griphi unguis dico Cathberto Dunelmensi sacer;" another curiously mounted as a standing cup, on an eagle's leg of silver, is still preserved in the cabinet of antiquities at Paris, in the King's Library, having been brought, at the Revolution, with the spoils of the treasury of St. Denis. A curious account of it is given by Dublet, in his history of that abbey, p. 243. From an ancient M.S. Invent. of the treasury of Bayeux Cathedral, it appears that three such talons were there preserved, and on solemn occasions appended to the altar, as precious rarities. A "corne de griffoun" is mentioned in the Kalend. of Exch. iii. 176. The egg was likewise preserved as a valuable curiosity, and used as a goblet; see the lists of the jewels and plate of Edw. III. 1338, ibid. pp. 171, 172. "Item, j orfe de griffon garnis d'argent, ad pie et coerele." The griffin was assumed by the Le Despenser family, and the upper part appears as the crest on the helm of Hugh le Despenser, who died 1349, exhibited on his tomb at Tewkesbury. Another strikingly designed representation of this curious animal is seen at Warwick, at the feet of Richard Beauchamp, who died 1430.

"To riche men was he grille, of pouer held no tales." Langton, Chron. p. 92.

It is thus used by Chaucer. See also Amis and Amiloun, 1275, 1802; Towneley Myst. p. 137; Covent. Myst. p. 230; Reliqu. Ant. ii. 166; Jamieson, v. Grylle.

<sup>4</sup> "A gripe, griphes, vultur." CATH. ANG. This obsolete appellation of the vulture has been derived from Angl.-Sax. gripan, rapere, but more probably from the Lat. graps, or the French. "Grype, a beest, gripe." FALSG. It must, however, be observed

Holinshed says in the Hist. of the Conquest of Ireland, B. ii. c. 18, that the "griph or geire is a kind of eagle, but such as is ravenous, and feedeth more vpon carren than vpon anie foule of his owne preieng; and for his cowardnesse carieth neither the name nor praise appertaining to the true eagle." The egg of the grype, frequently mentioned as a rarity much valued, and used as a drinking-cup, is probably to be referred to the fabulous animal, the griffon, and may have been merely the egg of the ostrich. Gower relates that Albinus kept the skull of Germund, which was fashioned as a goblet,

"And pollyshed was eke so elene,
 That no sygne of the sculle was sene,
 But, as it were, a grype's eye." Conf. Am. lib. i.

In the will of William Gascoigne, Lord Chief Justice, dated 1419, is mentioned "ciphas, vocatus a gryp ey, ligatus cum argento, et deaurato." Testam. Ebor. i. 303. In the Invent. of Fountains Abbey, taken at the dissolution, and given by Burton, occurs the item, "A grype schill, with a covering gilt, 27 oz."

<sup>3</sup> Marchanwte, ms. The original meaning of the term grocer is defined in the stat. 37 Edw. III. 1363, respecting "Marchantz nomez grossers," so called because they "engrossent totes maners des marchandises vendables," and kept them back in order to sell at an improved price. Stat. of Realm, i. 379. In the following century they were established as a distinct trade; see the "Incorporatio Groceriorum Lond." Pat. 7 Hen. VI. and another patent in the year following, "pro custod' mistere Grocerie." Before the early part of the XVIth cent. their dealings seem to have become limited to grocery, as now understood: thus Palsgrave gives "grocer, grossier, espicier." Seplarius is explained as meaning "negotiator, qui multa vendunt." See Ducange.

millet, Lithospermum officinale, Linn. was formerly esteemed as a remedy for the stone, and other diseases; according to the observations of Gerard, Parkinson, Langham, and similar writers. Tusser enumerates "gromwell seed, for the stone," among herbs which ought to be found in the farmer's garden. See March's Abstract. See also a treatise on the virtues of plants, written in the XVth cent. Roy. MS. 18 A. Chron. p. 210.); and in the contract for building Fotheringhay Church, A.D. 1435, the foundations are termed "the ground-werk." Mon. Ang. iii. Sir John Maundevile gives the Greek inscription which was seen on the rock whereon the cross of the Saviour had been set, thus rendered: "Quod rides est fundamentum (βάσις) totius fidei hujus mundi, that is to seye, that thou seest is ground of alle the feythe of this world." p. 92. Palsgrave gives "grounde, the botome of a foundation of any thyng, foundation."

<sup>2</sup> A grup or groop signifies in Norfolk a trench, narrower than a ditch, as has been observed in the note on the word GRYFFE. In the North the term retains the signification assigned to it above. See Brockett, Craven Glossary, and Jamieson. Bp. Kennett likewise notes this use of the word: "groop, or grupe, a ditch or trench, especially that which runs across the length of the byer, or cow-house; Boe." Lansd. MS. 1033. Skinner suggests the derivation from Ang.-Sax. groepe, lutrina, scols. "Minsorium, a grope." ORTUS. "A grupe, minsorium." CATH. ANG. Gouldman, in his Dictionary, 1664, gives "a groope in stables and houses, minthorium," from "minthos, dung or ordure." ELYOT. Μίθος, sterces. <sup>1</sup> In the Ortus agromellum and granomellum are rendered "growte;" and idromellum is explained thus: "potus ex aqua et melle, Anglice modo or growte." "Growte, idromellum, agromellum, acromellum, granomellum." CATH. ANG. This term properly implies ground malt, or the first infusion preparatory to brewing, which is thus distinguished in Harl. MS. 1002, f. 114. "Worte, idromellum, sed growte dicitur agromellum." Ang.-Sax. grut, for, condimentum cerevisie. In medieval Latin it was called gratum, or gradum; see in Rokewode's Hist. Suff. pp. 31, 32, a document in which mention occurs of gradum ordeii. In old French malt was called gru, or grust, according to Roquefort; but Palsgrave gives the word "grout that scrueþ to brewyng, in Fraunce there is none vsed." G. de Biblesworth, who wrote in the reign of Edw. I. gives a curious account of the mode of brewing, in which "grout" occurs as a gloss on the word "berce," which is not found in the glossaries, and may possibly be a barbarous compound of bere, a drink, or ber, barley, and zithum, which, according to Borel, was the Gaulish appellation of beer. The term grout is not used in the detailed account of brewing given by Harrison in the description of England, B. ii. c. 6, Holinsh. i. 169. In the North, according to Coles, Ray, and the Craven Glossary, grout signifies wort of the last running. Bp. Kennett gives the following note "Grout, growt: in Leicestershire the liquor with malt infused for ale and beer, before it is fully boiled, is called grout, and before it is tunned up in the vessel, is called wyrt, or wort. Ang.-Sax. grut, nora cerevisie. They have in the West a thick sort of ale, which they call grout-ale, and it is in most places a common proverb, as thick as growt. Kilian, grauwt, condimentum cerevisie." Lansd. MS. 1033. The term was not, perhaps, exclusively confined to denote farinaceous mixtures for the purpose of brewing; thus land in Addington, Surrey, was held by the serjeanty of making in an earthen pot in the royal kitchen, on the day of coronation, a mess called "diligrount," as stated by Blount, in his Jocular Tenures, p. 50. In the Plac. Cor. 39 Hen. III. it is called "le mess de gyron," or, if compounded with fat, it was termed "marrigrount."

<sup>2</sup> In the Wicliffite version the following use of this verb is found, Jos. x. 21: "No man was hardi to gruche (þer to make pruy noise, mutin, Vulg.) agens þe soncs of Israel." Sir John Maundevile speaks of "the welte that Moyses made with his hond in the desertes, when the people grucehed, for thei fownden no thing to dryuke." It is said in the Golden Legend, that "when the herte is full of grace, hym oughte not grutehe by impacyence." In the Vision of Piers Pl. and Chaucer's Works, the word occurs frequently. <sup>3</sup> Various etymologies have been proposed of the word gugaw, in its ordinary sense; "Crepundia, toys or gugawes for children, as rattles, clappers, &c. Junius, by Higinis. "Babile, a trifle, whim-wham, gugaw, or small toy for a child to play withall." CORR. Skinner suggests Ang.-Saxon gēgaf, uga, or heawgas. simulachra, or the French word joujou, but gogaw or gogaille seems more nearly to resemble it, and signifies, according to Roquefort, "bagatelle, plaisanterie. Gogoyer, se réjouir," &c. It would, however, seem that the word is here given as synonymous with flute, and the inquiry suggests itself whether it had originally denoted some musical instrument, and thence been used in a more general signification. According to Roquefort there was a wind instrument called gigue, and this statement corresponds with the observation of Ferrari, that giga, Ital. may be derived from γίγας, a kind of flute. It is singular that, according to Brockett and Jamieson, a Jew's harp is called in N. Britain a gēgaw, but in that instance, as likewise here, in the Promptorium, it seems probable that the word is used merely in reference to that with which idle disport may be taken, like trifles in childhood.

<sup>4</sup> "A gunne, fundibulum, murrusculum. A gunner, fundibularius, fundibalista." CATH. ANG. written A.D. 1483. The difficulty of ascertaining with precision the period of the introduction of engines from which missiles were propelled by means of gunpowder arises chiefly from the circumstance, to which allusion is made by Selden, that the term gun, supposed by Somner to be merely a contraction of mango, or mangona, may have been used to denote some engine of war, long before the application of gunpowder to such purpose. Mr. Douce observes that the earliest mention of "gonnes" is found in the Romance of Kyng Alisaunder, line 3268; but in his note on that passage he says that it must not be concluded that they were used with powder, as originally they might have been engines of the catapult kind. Weber, Metr. Rom. iii. 306. The same remark applies to the account of the siege sustained by Kynge Aragus, who

———"ordeyned hym ful well

In the Avowynge of Kyng Arther, a "gunne" is mentioned, the effect of which is compared to lightning, but it is still doubtful whether the term should be understood to imply a projectile impelled by any ignited substance, or merely filled therewith.

"There came fliand a gunne,
And lemet as the leuyn." St. 65, edit. by Mr. Robson.

It seems very probable that the missile here intended was a tube filled with Greek fire, or feu volant. In several MSS. of the Practica of John Arderne, a surgeon of eminence t. Edw. III. instructions are found for compounding "faces Gregois" and "faces volants:" the latter being a liquid mixture, described as of an oily nature, with which a pipe being filled, and ignited by a match, would fly in any direction. A figure is given in the margin. He proceeds to describe "face volant" of another kind. "Penez j. li. de soufre vij, de charbon de saux, (i. weloghe,) ij. li., de salpêtre, xj. li. si les fidez bien et solement moultre sur un piere de marbre, puis battez le poudre parmy un sotille couverchif. Cest poudre vault à gellere pelottes de fer, ou de plomb, ou d'areque, oue en instrument qe l'en appelle gunne." See Sloane MSS. 335, 795. A detailed account of passages in ancient documents or chronicles which throw light on this obscure subject has been given by Sir S. Meyrick, in his Crit. Enquiry, and a paper on the history of hand fire-arms, Archæol. xxii.; and likewise by Mr. Archibald, in his description of ancient artillery discovered on the coast of Lancashire, Archæol. xxviii. It may here suffice to state that gunpowder was known in Western Europe about the middle of the XIIIth cent.; and that the earliest recorded instance of its use in war, in this country, appears to have been in the first expedition of Edward III. against the Scots, in 1327, when artillery, termed by Barbour "crakys of wer," was employed. See Jamieson. There can be no doubt that Chaucer uses the term "gonne," to signify an engine charged with gunpowder; as in the following comparison:

"Swift as a pellet out of a gonne,
When fire is in the powder ronne." House of Fame, B. iii.

The Household of Edw. III. as appears by the ordinances which commence 1344, printed by the Ant. Soc., comprised "Ingyners lvij. Artellers vj. Gonners vj." Their daily pay in time of war was 6*d.* The invention of hand fire-arms is assigned by Sir S. Meyrick, on the authority of Billius, to the Lucquese, in 1430; (Archæol. xxii. 60) yet a prior use of some weapons of the sort seems to be indicated. In an inventory of the arms and effects of Sir Simon Burley, taken apparently after his execution, 1388, and now in the possession of Sir Thomas Philipps, among "petites choses à Baynard Castell," is named "j. petit gonne de feer." In the Pell Records, 1 Hen. IV. 1400, payments appear for "quarell gunnes," at 7*s.* each; for salpêtre, sulphur, and wadding; and the contemporary evidence of Monstrelet shews that "bastons à feu" were among the arms of the English sent to the relief of the siege of Orleans, in 1428. Hand-guns are named among purchases for the defence of Holy Island, 1446; and were used at the siege of Caistor, in Norfolk, about 1459. Paston Lett. iv. 316. In the version of Vegetius attributed to Trevisa, and completed 1408, in the account of military engines, allusion is made to "grete gounes that shete now a daies stones of so grete peyse that no walle may withstande them; as hathe be wele shewede bothe in the Northre cuntre, and eke in the werres of Wales." <sup>1</sup> The term habergeon appears properly to be a diminutive of hawberk, although here given as synonymous. Wace, in his Roman de Rou, written about 1160, describes the Conqueror as armed, at the battle of Hastings, with a "boon hawbert;" but Odo, his half-brother, Bishop of Bayeux, who could not decorously assume the complete military equipment, and rode with a staff merely to stimulate the combatants, provided himself with this partial defence.

"Un habergeon avoit vestu,

De sor une chemise blanche." T. ii. 220, edit. by Pluquet.

The precept of Randolph III., Earl of Chester, to his barons, about the close of the XIIth cent. requires that their knights and free tenants should have "loriens, et haburpillas," and the ordinance of Hen. III. 1252, "super juratis ad arma," directs that every man, according to the rate of his land and chattels, should arm himself either with the lorica, the haburpillum, called also in this document habherens, or the perpunctum. The stat. of Winchester, 13 Edw. I. 1255, makes the same distinction between the haburg, habergeon, and perpoint, to be used by the three classes respectively, according to their assessment. Stat. of Realm. i. 97. From these authorities it is evident that the habergeon was a defence of an inferior description to the hawberk; and when the introduction of plate armour in the reign of Edw. III. had supplied more convenient and effectual defences for the legs and thighs, the long skirt of the hawberk became superfluous; from that period the habergeon alone seems to have been worn. This, in its turn, being superseded by the cuirass, was reduced to the mere apron of mail; but at the time when the Promptorium was compiled, the expensive nature of plate armour caused its use to be restricted, and combatants of the lower classes were content to arm themselves with the brigandine, or the habergeon. The value of three "haburionnes," in 1374, was 13 marks: see Invent. of Edward de Appelly, Sloane Cart. xxxi. 2. Milan was celebrated for the manufacture of this defence: in a document dated 23 Hen. VI. relating to armour delivered out of the Tower, are mentioned "haberg'ons, some of Meleyn, and some of Westewale," that is, probably, Westphalia, or the Westervald, where the iron-works of Solingen have long been in repute. Archæol. xvi. 125. In the Inventory of Sir John Fastolf's armoury, 1459, are likewise found "iiij. haburionnes of l'Milayne." Archæol. xxi. 271. In the Wicliffite version Goliath is said to have had "a brasun basynet on his heed. and he was elodid wiþ an haburion hokid (eþer mailid, lorica squamata." Vulg.) "He shal cloþe riȝtfulnesse for an haburion (pro thouce, Vulg.) and he shal take certen doom for a basynet." Sapiens, v. 15. "Bliz, lorica qui contrahit dardus lictis accumulatis, a hawbergon; ita trilix. Pancerium est lorica, an haberyon." ORTUS. See Ducange, v. Halsberg; and Jamieson, v. Awbyrehewie.

<sup>2</sup> This dish, now considered as almost exclusively a Northern delicacy, seems to have been anciently in more general esteem. A curious metrical recipe is found in the Liber Cure cocorum, Sloane MS. 1256, f. 103. "*Onusas, i. tripi vel ventriculus qui continet alia viscera, a tripe, or a podynge, or a wesaut, or haggas. <sup>1</sup> Forby explains hay-net as signifying in Norfolk "a hedge net, a long low net, to prevent hares or rabbits from escaping to covert, in or through hedges." See also Moore. In a lease dated 1572, in the manor of Hawsted, Suffolk, the landlord reserves the right of "hawking, haying," &c. that is, rabbit-netting. Cullum's Hawsted, p. 198. "Haye, a net for connes, bourcettes à chasser," PALSG. "Tendere plagas, to pytche hayes, or nettes. Cussis, nets which may be called haies." ELYOT. "Toiles, toils, or a hay to inclose or intangle wild beasts in. Pan, a toyle or hay wherewith wild beasts are caught." CORG. The word is doubtless derived from Ang.-Sax. hæg, or hege, septum. In the edition of the Ortus in Mr. Wilbraham's library, clausura is rendered "a closse, or a heye." Haye occurs elsewhere in the sense of an enclosure; thus in the gloss on the "liber vocatus equus," called in the Promptorium "Distigius," written by John de Garlandia, occurs "Cimiterium, chyrehe-haye." Harl. MS. 1002. In the Golden Legend it is said, "he had—foule way thorough hayes and hedges, woodes, stones, hyiles and valeys." f. 68, b.

<sup>2</sup> "Harife, rubium minor. herba est," CATH. ANG. The Galium aparine is called in the North, according to Ray, "Hariff and catchweed, goose-grease;" according to Parkinson it was reckoned by the old botanists as a kind of madder; but he does not give the name hayryf, which is probably derived from the asperity of its stalks. In some places it is called hairrough. Palsgrave gives "haylife, an herbe."

In the version of Vegetius is a description of the military engine called the "snyale or welke (testudo), a frame of goode tymber, shaped square, keuerede and hilled alle a-boute wythe rawe hides, or with feltes, and heyres, for drede of brynnyng." Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. f. 105. Among the trades, in the order of the pageants of the Play of Corpus Christi, at York, 1415, "hayresters" are mentioned. Drake, App. In the Golden Legend the term hayre is of frequent occurrence, signifying a garment of mortification. St. Thomas clothed himself with an "hard heyre, full of knottes, whiche was his sherte, and his breche was of the same." And again, during grievous pestilence, "they couered the crosse and the auters with blyssed hayres; and thus we sholde take on vs clothyng of penaunce." In mediæval Latin a shaggy garment was termed haura, according to Ducange. Ang.-Sax. hara, cilicium.

Height! is now used only to turn a cart-horse to the left; and Ree! is given by the latter as a command which causes a movement to the right. Bp. Kennett gives "to hite up and down, to run idly about, North; Hiting, gadding abroad. Sax. ytynge, peregre. In Yorkshire for Geē oo, the carters say Hite and reē. Height nor ree, neither go nor drive, spoken of a wilful person." Lansd. MS. 1033. See Yorksh. Dial. p. 58. HAYHT is not found in any other MS. of the Promptorium. Harry appears to be the imperative mood of the word HARYYſ, which occurs subsequently; or possibly the out-cry, haro, haroll. Both the ejaculations above given occur in the Towneley Mystery of the death of Abel, p. 9, where Cain and his plough-boy are represented as tilling the ground, and the latter cries to the horses, "Harrer, Morelle, iofurthe, hyte!"

<sup>1</sup> Among the effects of Henry V. were "ij. tentis de blug corde, dec. avec j. porche, et j. alez," 1423, Rot. Parl. iv. 240. In a letter to Sir John Paston, 7 Hen. VII. it is said respecting preparations for the expedition into France, "ye Kyng sendythe ordynauunce dayly to ye see syde, and hys tents and alys be a makynge faste;" also that great provision was made by the gentry, who were to accompany him, "for hors harnes, tentes, halys, garduyens, carts," &c. Past. Lett. v. 412. Among the requisites provided for the Earl of Northumberland, in the French campaign in 1513, at the siege of Therouenne, are named "haylles, tents, and pauillions." Ant. Rep. iv. 364. See also Hall's Chron. 12 Hen. VIII. p. 618, last edit. "Hale in a feld for men, trif. Hall, a long tent in a felde, tente." Elyot gives "secur, a paunyllion, or haule." The hangings of a chamber, as it has been observed in the note on the word DORCERE, were termed hallings, in Latin hala, ala, or aulua. "An hallynge, aulcum, anabaturum," CATH. ANG.

<sup>2</sup> Compare EYTYNDELE, and TYNTE. Ray, Bp. Kennett, in his gloss. coll. Lansd. MS. 1033, and Grose mention another name for the same measure, in use in the North, namely, "frunde, a measure of two pecks." As it is called eytynde, because it is the eighth part of a coom, so also furundel, or frunde, a corruption of furthindele, as being the fourth part of a bushel. Ang.-Sax. feorðan, quartus. See Cowel's Interpr. v. Furundellus. The term "eytendele" occurs in the Hist. Eliensis, where it is recorded of Will. de Longchamp, Bp. of Ely, who died 1197, "ordinavit ut in die anniversarii sui darentur pauperibus xij. extendeles de frumento." Angl. Sacra, i. 633.

<sup>3</sup> "Halfe a fardynge, calculus, calculas, minutum," CATH. ANG. See the notes on the word CU. Sherwood, in his Eng. French Dict. 1632, gives "a cue, la moitié d'un fardin, mot usé seulement des escoliers d'Oxford." There is a proverbial saying of contempt, "I would kick him for half a farthing;" but the cue seems to have been as imaginary as the bodle, of like supposed value, and in the North familiarly mentioned as if it really existed. See Brockett, and the other North-country glossarists.

"As yonge clerks, that ben likerous

It occurs likewise in Skelton's Bowge of Court; Croke Lorelle's bote, &c. This cry appears not to have been exclusively nautical, for it forms the burden of a ballad on the Battle of Bannocksburn, 1314, the alternate stanzas of which, as given in Caxton's Chron. terminate thus, "with heuelogh—with rumbilogh;" or, as in Fabyan, "with heue a lowe—with rumbylow." "A cor et à cry, by might and maine, with heaue and hoe." corg. Hence seems to be derived the surname of Stephen Rummelowe, Constable of Nottingham Castle. 45 Edw. III. mentioned in Issue Roll of Exch. 1369. Compare CRYE of schypmen, that ys clepyd haue howe.

<sup>1</sup> The noun halse, the neck, and the verb to halse, to embrace, are used by most of the early writers. See R. Brunne, Chaucer, the Vision of P. Ploughman, &c. Ang.-Sax. hals, collum. "Amplexus, a clyppynge, or a halsynge." ORTUS. "An halsynge, amplexus; to halse, amplexare. An halsynge, salutaris; to hailse, salutare." CATH. ANG. "Halsynge, accolle. The verb to hailse occurs in this sense of saluting in the Vision of P. Ploughman, 4816, 4918. See Jamieson.

<sup>2</sup> Compare CROKYD, or crypylie, or lame, above. "Halte, caduz, claudus. To halte, claudicare, ericare. An halter, claudicarius; duplicarius, qui ex utraque parte claudicat." CATH. ANG. Instances of the use of the word "erokyd" in the sense of lame may be found in Syr Gowghter, line 673; Sir Tryamour, line 228. So likewise in the Wicliffite version "claudum" is rendered "erokid," Matt. xviii. 8.

<sup>3</sup> In the version of Vegetius, Roy. MS. 13 A. XII. it is said that "halfendele the profites (dimidia pars) of the knyghtes sowle shulde be kept vnder the principalle baner." B. ii. c. 19. In a petition from the Commons, 1442, it is said respecting the appropriation of a penalty, that "the halvyndeale" should belong to the King, and the other moiety to the party suing the offender. The hanaper office in the Court of Chancery derives its name from the hanaperium, a large basket wherein writs were deposited. Among places of deposit, in which instruments were stored away in the Exchequer Treasury, are named "hanaperia de virgis—of twyggs." Sir F. Palgrave has given a representation of one, date 3 Rich. Ang.-Sax. handselen, mancipation. It implies generally a delivery in hand, an earnest, the first use of a possession: and likewise a reward or bribe, as in Vis. of P. Ploughman, 3128; and the Poem on the deposition of Richard II. edited by Mr. Wright, p. 30. Sir F. Madden explains "honde selle" to mean a gift conferred at a particular season. Gawayn and the Grene Knyzt. 66. "Hansell, or a newe yeares gifte, strea." HULOET.

<sup>3</sup> Forþy gives the verb to hap, to wrap up, happing, a covering, and hap-harlot, a coarse coverlit. Ang.-Sax. hapian, cumulare. The last word is used by Harrison, in a passage which has been cited above, in the note on DAGGYSWEYNE. See also Huloet, Baret's Alvearie, and Skinner. The verb occurs in King Edward and the Shepherd.

"And deuylls salle harre hym vp evene
In the ayre als he sulde stegh to heuene." Harl. MS. 6923, f. 62.

See Towneley Myst. p. 247. Fabyan says, in his relation of the murder of Bp. Stapylton, 1325, "the corps of y<sup>e</sup> sayde bysshop, with hys ij servauntes, were haryed to Thamys syde, where the sayd bysshop had begonne to edyfy a toure," &c. Part. vii. The following passage occurs in Golding's version of Beza's book of Christian questions, 1572: "Whereas the same (the will) ought to be ruled by reason, as by a wagon-guider; yet, notwithstanding, how often doth it harie him headlong awaye?" Palsgrave gives the verb, "I harye, or mysse entreate, or hale one, ie harie. Why do you harye the poore fellowe on this faeyon? I harry, or carry by force, ie trayne, and ie herolle. He haryeth hym aboute, as if he were a traytour." Ang.-Sax. hergian, eastare. Forby gives harriage, signifying confusion.

<sup>1</sup> The Companula trachelium, Linn. is called by Parkinson throat-wort or haske-wort. Skinner gives Hask-wort, Trachelium, forte a sapore austero. Compare Dan. Sw. and Dutch, harsk, rank, or rusty. Haskard, coarse or unpolished, appears to be hence derived. Horman says that "Homer declaring a very folysshe and an haskard felowe (ignorum) under the person of Thersyte, sayth that he was streyte in the shulders, and copheeded lyke a gygge." Harsh is sometimes written harrish; thus Dr. Turner, in his Herbal, 1552, says that "dates, if they be eaten, they ar good for the harrishenes, or roughnes of the throte;" and of plums, "they that ar litle ones, and harde, and harrish tarte, ar sterk noughts." "Sorbum, an harryshe peare," ELYOT.

<sup>2</sup> "Ulfus, hassok." MED. Forby states that, in Norfolk, coarse grass, which grows in rank tufts on boggy ground, is termed hassock. In the foundation charter of Sawtrey Abbey, A.D. 1147, Simon, Earl of Northampton, grants certain lands adjoining Whittlesea mere, the boundaries being minutely described: in one place the limit is defined to be "indirecte per transversam marisci, usque ad tercium hassocum a firmâ terrâ inter mariscum et Higgenium." The cartulary of Ramsey supplies a repetition of this statement, contained in the attestation of Alex. Maufe regarding the disputed limits of the donation made by the Earl, his lord; in this document the Latinised word hassocus twice occurs. "Pastores vero nostri super exteriores hassocos versus Walton inter pratam et mariscum debent stare, et animalia sua usque ad pedes suos venire permittere." Mon. Angl. orig. ed. t. i. pp. 850, 852, 853. Ducange, not being acquainted with the locality, interprets the word as denoting the kind of stone called tufa. In an account relating to the castle of Guysnes, in 1465, among the miscellaneous records of the Queen's Rememb. a statement appears as to the clearing away of "cirporum ac arundinum, segres, soddes et hassokes," which grew to the obstruction of a certain mill-course. The word is still used in N. Britain. See Jamieson.

Gerarde refers the name Trimestre to the Amil-corn, or starch-corn, Triticum amyleum, cultivated in Germany and the Low Countries to make starch; but according to Parkinson the grain here alluded to appears to be the naked barley, Hordeum vernum, which, as he observes, "is not scene or sowne by any almost in this land," called in Germany Zeytgerste, or Titerste, small barley, or "one for the present." It appears, however, that in Tusser's time the early variety was cultivated in the Eastern counties.

<sup>1</sup> The enumeration of the household of Henry II. in the Constit. domus Regis, Liber Niger Scaec. Hearne, i. 348, comprises "De magnâ coquina—host' (ostarius?) hastelarius," his three men, and the "hastalarius." The latter seems to be the same as the "hastator," named in the ordinance for the household of Louis XI. 1261, called in French hasteur. See Ducange. Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Essex, among the household servants named in his will, 1361, as "potager, ferour, barber, ewer," &c., mentions "Will. de Barton, hastiler." Roy. Wills, p. 52. In the Liber cure cocorum, the author thus states the intention of his treatise.

"Fyrst to ȝou I wylle schawe

 Of potage, hastery, and bakun mete,
 And petecure I nylle forȝete." Sloane MS. 1986, f. 47.

The chapter "de cibis assatis, of rosyd mete," comprises a singular dish, termed "hasteletes on fysshē day," consisting of figs, raisins, dates, and almonds, transfixed on a "broche of irne," and roasted; f. 87, b. Compare Forme of Cury, p. 8. Among the domestic officers of the Earl of Northumberland, 1511, was a "yoman cooke for the mouth, who doith hourelly attend in the kitching at the haistry for roisting of meat." Ant. Rep. iv. 244. Bp. Percy states that in Shropshire the fireplace is called haister; and, according to Mr. Harthorne, an hastener, or hasteler, is a kind of screen lined with tin, used for reflecting the heat in roasting. See Salopia Ant. The derivation is evidently from hasta. "Haste, a spit or broach." COTG. Compare ROOSTARE, or haste-lere, hereafter.

When Philip Augustus fell into the river, in consequence of the breaking of the bridge of Gisors, Mareadeus, a captain in the host of King Richard, according to Langtoft's account, derided him thus;

"Sir Kyng rise vp and skip, for þou has wette þi hater, þou fishes not worþe a leke, rise and go thi ways,
 For þou has wette þi breke, schent is þi hernays." R. Brunne, p. 204.

So likewise in the Romance of Kyng Alisander, the word signifies garments, attire: see lines 4264, 7054; and the Brahmins are said to live in austere penance, "thinnelech y-hatered," line 5922. Ang.-Sax. hætero, vestitus. In the Vision of P. Ploughman, Haukyn makes the following excuses for his soiled garment.

"I have but oon hool hater, quod Haukyn;
 I am the lasse to blame,
 Though it be soiled and selde elene:
 I slepe therinne o nyghtes." line 8900.

In line 9758, the word "haterynge" occurs in the sense of clothing. The explanation, however, given in the Promptorium, may suggest the comparison of the word with the verb, still used in Norfolk, to hatter, or exhaust by fatigue. See Bp. Kennett's gloss. coll. Lansd. MS. 1033. "To hatter, to expose to danger, to weary out, or wear out, as a horse by too much riding, or any utensil by too much leading is hattered about: Kent, Isl. hættur, periculosus."

<sup>2</sup> This verb occurs commonly in a composite form, to en-hance, or in-hance, as in the Vision of P. Ploughman, the Wicliffite version, and Chaucer. The lintel of a door is termed, from its position, the haunce. "Limen signifieth not only the threshold of a doore, but also the haunce. Supercilium, the haunce whyche is ouer the doore. Hypocritum, transumpt, or haunce." ELYOT. the former being rendered "the transam, or lintell," the latter "the hanse of a door." Cotgrave gives "contrefrontail, the brow peece, or upmost post of a doore, a haunse, or breast summer." At first sight it may appear doubtful whether heynyn or heyuyŃ (to heave) be the true reading; but by considering the position in the alphabetical arrangement of the word heynynge, subsequently, the former appears to be correct. Compare Ang.-Sax. hēan, exhere. Heithyn may be perhaps traced to Ang.-Sax. heaðo, cubica. In the version of Vegetius, B. iv. c. 19, it is said that the city wall, when a bastile or "somer castel" is brought against it, should be "enhaunsed" and made higher, and describes the means to be adopted by the assailants "ayenst this highething" of the wall. Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. "I haythe, I lyfte on heythe, ie haulec. Hayth this tester (haulec ce ciel) a lytell. I heygthen, I set vp a heythe, ie exalse. This balke (trej) is heythened two foote." It is scarcely possible to define the garment to which, modified by the fashions of different periods, the name of hewke was assigned; it appears from citations given by Ducange that the huca in the XIIIth cent. was furnished with a hood; it also seems to have been a military garment, and sometimes even of the number of such as

In King Ryenee's challenge the heralds are described as attired in "hewkes," and loudly crying for largesse. Perey's Rel. iii. 26. There was also a female attire called Hewke, Belg. huyke, which covered the shoulders and head. In the Acta Sanctorum Jun. vol. iv. 632, a female is described as clothed "in habita seculari, cum peplo Brabantico nigro, Huckam vulgo vocant." Palsgrave gives "hewke, a garment for a woman, surquayne, froc; huke, surquante;" and Minsheu explains huyke, huike, or huke, to be a mantle, such as women use in Spain, Germany, and the Low Countries when they go abroad. Skelton mentions the "huke of Lyncole green" worn by Elinour Rumming. See further in Ducange and Roquefort.

<sup>1</sup> Chaucer describes the knight as attended by three mounted "henshmen." Flour and the Leaf. The pages of distinguished personages were called henxmen, as Spelman supposes, from Germ. hengst, a war-horse, or, according to Bp. Perey, from their place being at the side, or haunch, of their lord. In the household of Edward IV. there were "henxmen, vj enfautes, or more, as it shall please the Kinge," who seem to have been chiefly wards of the Crown, and placed under the direction of a master of henxmen: their mode of living, and education at court, is set forth in the Houschohl Book of Edward IV. given among the Ordinances published by the Ant. Soc. p. 44. By the Stat. 3 Edw. IV. c. 5, "hensmen, herolds, puceyvauntez, ministrelles, et joueurs de leur entreuludes" were exempted from the penalties under the statute of apparel. In the household of the Earl of Northumberland, 1511, there were three haunsmen or hanshmen, who are enumerated with "yong gentlemen at their fryndes fynding, in my lord's house for the hoole yere:" the first served as cupbearer to the Earl, the second to his lady. On New-year's day they presented gloves, and had 6s. 8d. reward. Ant. Rep. iv. 199. <sup>1</sup> The heyward was the keeper of cattle in a common field, who prevented trespass on the cultivated ground. According to the Anglo-Saxon law the heig-ward was to have his reward from the part of the crop nearest to the pastures, or, if land were allotted, it was to be adjacent to the same. See Anc. Laws and Inst. i. 441. His office is thus noticed by G. de Biblesworth :

“In tyme of heruest mery it is ynough;
 The hayward bloweth mery his horne,
 In eueryche felde ripe is corne.” K. Alis. 5756.

Bp. Kennett observes that there were two kinds of agellarii, the common herd-ward of a town or village, called babulus, who overlooked the common herd, and kept it within bounds; and the heyward of the lord of the manor, or religious house, who was regularly sworn at the court, took care of the tillage, paid the labourers, and looked after trespasses and encroachments: he was termed fields-man, or tithing-man, and his wages in 1425 were a noble. “Inclusarius, a heyewarde.” MED. “Inclusorius, a pyinner of beestes (al. pynder.)” ORT. “Haiward, haward, qui garde au commun tout le bestail d'un bourgadi.” SHERW.

by Foxe, as delivered by R. Wimbeldon, 1389, is this passage: "Giesy was smyt with meslry, for he sold Naaman's heale, that eam of God's graee." Sir John Paston writes thus to his mother: "It'm it lyked yow to weet of myn heelle, I thanke God now y<sup>t</sup> I am nott greetly syke ner soor." Past. Lett. v. 80. Ang.-Sax. hæl, salus.

"Hinge, or hinged of a gate, cardo," &c. BARET. Hornman says, "This bottell lacketh an hynghill, uter amicino caret." See GYMEWE.

<sup>2</sup> This term is derived from a sort of pyramidal candlestick, or frame for supporting lights, called hercia, or herpica, from its resemblance in form to a harrow, of which mention occurs as early as the XIIth cent. It was not, at first, exclusively a part of funeral display, but was used in the solemn services of the holy week; thus by the statute of the Synod of Exeter, 1287, every parish was bound to provide the "hercia ad tumbras." Wilkins, Cone. ii. 139. In the account of expenses at the death of Thomas, Abbot of St. Augustine's, Canterbury, 1375, occurs an item, "pro corpore pecto, cum hercid." W. Thorn, X Script. 2152. See further the accounts of the obsequies of Anne the Queen of Ric. II. Gough's Sep. Mon. i. 176, and the will of that monarch, in which he directs that for his own interment there should be prepared "ie, hercia excellencia conuocantes regali." Rym. vii. 75. In the will of John de Nevill, 1386, it is termed "hercium." Madox, Form. 429. The Pat. 1 Hen. V. 1413, recounts the orders of the King to Simon Prentout of London, "wex chaundeler," and Thomas Gloucestre, "pictori nostro," for the provision and transport to Canterbury of the "hercio" for the funeral of Henry IV. Rym. viii. 14. The ordinance which regulated the charges by wax-chandlers, stat. 11 Hen. VI. c. 12, comprises a clause to except "herces affaires pur les nobles trespassantz." Stat. of Realm, vol. ii. 287. Chaucer appears to use the term hearse to denote the decorated bier, or funeral pageant, and not exclusively the illumination, which was a part thereof; and towards the XVIth cent. it had such a general signification alone. Hardyng describes the honours falsely bestowed upon the remains of Richard II. when cloths of gold were offered "upon his hers" by the King and lords.

"At Poules his masse was done, and diryge,

In hers royall, semely to royalte." Chron. c. 200.

c. F. repofocilium." The word intended may be retrofocilium, or repofocilium. See Dueange. The Catholicon gives the following explanation: "Repofocilium, id quod tegit ignem in nocte, vel quod retro ignem ponitur; super quod a posteriori parte focī ligna ponuntur, quod vulgo lar dicitur." In HARL. MS. 1738, it is rendered "an herthe stok, or a skrene;" in the Ortus, "a budde or a sterne." A stock (Ang.-Sax. stoc, truncus) may signify primarily a large log, against which, as a foundation, the fire was piled. The cellarer of St. Edmund's-lury held Hardwick under the abbey, and was bound annually to provide "iv. Cristmesse stocke," each of 8 feet in length. Liber Celler. Rokewode's Suff. p. 475. Hence, probably, any contrivance whereby the fire was supported, so as to facilitate combustion, an object more perfectly attained by means of andirons (AWDERNE, supra), was termed the hearth-stock. In Norfolk and Suffolk the back or sides of the fire-place are termed "the stock," and Forby derives the word from Ang.-Sax. stoc, locus. See KYNLYN hereafter.

<sup>1</sup> A hank of yarn is called in the North a hesp, or hasp, the fourth part of a spindle. Bp. Kennett gives "a hank of yarn or thread, when it comes off the reel, and is tied in the middle, or twisted. So the twist or rope that comes over y<sup>e</sup> saddle of the thiller horse is called the thille hanks; Dundelm. Perhaps from Sax. hangan, to tie or twist; but it comes much nearer to the Isl. hannk, funiculus in circum colligatus." Lansd. MS. 1033. Matara signifies the comb which serves for dressing flax, as given above under the word HEKELE, but implies also a hank of spun thread. See Dueange.

"Agraphe, a elasp, hook, brace, grapple, haspe." COTG. In this last sense the word haspa occurs in the Sherborn Cartulary, MS. in the possession of Sir Thomas Phillipps, where, among the gitts of William the sacrist (XIIth cent.?) is mentioned "Missale cum haspā argenteā." Bp. Kennett observes that in Kent, Sussex, and Oxfordshire, the word is pronounced "haps, to haps a door or cupboard. Ang.-Sax. haps, sera, phala." Lansd. MS. 1033. This older form is also retained in Somerset, Wilts, and in N. Britain, hasp being the corruption. See Jamieson.

<sup>1</sup> In Norfolk, according to Forby, to hich means to change place: "a man is often desired to hich, in order to make room; to hich anything which happens to be in the way. Isl. hika, cedere (loco.)" To hike and to hick are used in a similar sense. To hitch is explained by Johnson as signifying "to catch, or move by jerks," and so used by Pope. Skinner would derive the expression "hitch buttock, hitch neighbours," or "level coyl, (levez te cul,)" used by boys in playing, who bid one another move, and make way for the next in turn, from Ang.-Sax. hiegan, moliri, uti, or Fr. hocher. See Jamieson, v. Hatch, and Hotch. Brockett gives to hitch, hop on one foot.

<sup>1</sup> The verb to hylil, and the substantive hilling, appear to be in use in many parts of England, but are not noticed in the East-Anglican glossaries. In the writings of the older authors they occur frequently. See R. Brunne, P. Ploughm., Chaucer, and Gower. "Cooperio, to hylil to-gyder. Tegmentem, a hyllynge, a couerynge." ORTUS. In the "Objections of Freres," Wielisfe makes the observation that "Freres wollen not be apied with food and heling," that is, clothing. The accounts of the churchwardens of Walden comprise the item, "à le klerke de Thorstede par hyndynge, hyllynge at bositynge de tous les liens en le castelle." Hist. of Audley End, p. 229. In the version of Vegocius attributed to Trevisa, it is said, "loke thou ordeinne þat the leues of the yates be keuered and hilled with raw hides." Roy. MS. 15 A. XII. t. 109. Bp. Kennett has the following notes in Lansd. MS. 1933: "Helings. Stragula, bed-cloathis, roc in usu apud Occidentales. Isl. hyl, tygo, hulde, texi; Sax. of hopping, Vis. of P. Ploughm. 11,488, and to hip has in the North a like signification;
hipping stones are steppings at the passage of a shallow stream. The word seems here to be taken from the irregular movement or hopping of the halt person. Gower says

In the original, "ne fet de bourras." In Norfolk, according to Forby, hards signify coarse flax, otherwise tow-hards, in other parts of England called hurds; and in many places a coarse kind of linen cloth is still termed harden, or hirden. The Invent. of Examples are not wanting at Lynn, where a lazaret-house is mentioned at the spot called Setchhithe, in 1432; in the grant of Edw. VI. 1548, it is called Sechehithe, or the sedgy landing. Blomf. Norf. iv. 599. Oxburgh hithe is remote from the main; Woman hithe and Beck lithe occur near Cromer.

"Gousse, the huske, swad, eod, hull of beanes, pease," &c. cora. Gerarde says that Avena nuda is called in Norfolk and Suffolk "unhulled otes." In the Craven dialect, the hull is the skin of a potatoe, or the husk of a nut, and to hull signifies to peel off the husk of any seed: in Hampshire the husk of corn is termed the hull. <sup>2</sup> The primary meaning of the Ang.-Sax. word Holm appears to be water or ocean; it implies also a river island, or a level meadow, especially near a stream. It is recorded in the Sax. Chron. A.D. 903, that a great fight occurred between the Kentish men and the Danes "æt þam Holme," but the precise locality has not been ascertained. Holm signifies also an elevated spot, as in the instance of the Steep-holm, so called by way of distinction from the Flat-holm, islands in the mouth of the Severn. Leland, in his Comm. in Cygn. cant. (Itin. ix. 59,) would derive Dunelm, Durham, from dune, a hill, and holme, which he interprets thus: "Holme vero eminentis loci, interdum et subrosi, et aquis circumsepti verticem, aut eminentiam exprimit." Bp. Kennett has the following remarks: "Homes, properly holms, which signified originally river-islands, or green islands surrounded by running streams; from a resemblance whereof meadows and pasture grounds are in some places called Homes. A meadow by the late Abbey of St. Austin's, Canterbury, was commonly called North-homes; and a flat pasture in Romney Marsh is yet called the Holmes, &c. An Holm, an island, Westm.; hence Holme-cultram, Holmby house, &c. Mill-holms, watery places about a mill dam, from mill, and Sax. holm, which signifies two things, as a hill or rising ground, and a green island, or place almost enclosed with water; from whence the name of many places almost surrounded with water, as Axholm, Evesholm, corruptly Evesham, &c. The howmes, a green piece of ground near Thirske in Yorkshire, lying between the river Codbeck and the brook called Sewel." Lansd. MS. 1033. In Lincolnshire, as especially near the Trent, the name is frequent; as likewise in Norfolk, and in the vicinity of Lynn, and denotes both low pastures, and elevations of trifling magnitude, but which were perhaps insulated, before draining had been effected. Simon Earl of Huntingdon, who founded St. Andrew's Priory, Northampton, about 1084, granted "tres dolos prati, et unum hulmum;" and in the donation of H. de Pykeneye to Canons' Ashby, in 1298, he bestowed "totam pasturam illam que vocatur le Huiles, cum duobus holmis in campis Wedone et Westone." <sup>1</sup> Parkinson gives holm, as a name of the holly: in the North it is called hollin. Ang.-Sax. hollen, aquifolium. The Gloss on Gautier de Bilelesworth renders "hows, holyn." "Hussus est quedam arbor que semper tenet viriditatem, Anglice a holyn." ORTUS. "An holyn, hussus; an holyn bery, hussum." CATH. ANG. It is said of St. Bernard, in the Golden Legend, that after he became Abbot of Clairvaux, "he often made his pottage with leues of holm." Sherwood gives "hollie, holme, or hulker tree, hous, housson, mesplar sauvage." In Norfolk the holly is called hulver, according to Forby. Compare HULWUR, tre, hereafter.

<sup>4</sup> "Holt, a wood. It is yet used for an orchard, or any place of trees, as a cherry-holt, an apple-holt, Danelm. Isl. hollte, salbra." Bp. Kennett, Lausd. MS. 1033. Skinner says that holt denotes a grove, or multitude of trees planted thick together, and Tooke asserts that it is the p. part of Ang.-Sax. holan, to cover, and signifies a rising ground or knoll covered with trees. The word occurs in Cant. T. Prof. line 6; Lydgate's Thebes; Launial, &c. Among the benefactions of John Rotham, Bp. Ely, it is recorded that in 1320 he appropriated, for the distribution of alms on his anniversary, "tenementum vocatum Lythgates, et Barkeres, cum quadam alio vocato Lythgates holt." Hist. Elen. Ang. Sacra, i. 643. "Holte, a lytell wode, petit bois." FALSG. "Touffe de bois, a hault, a tuft of trees growing neere a house, and serving for a marke or grace unto the seat thereof." COG. See Jamieson. In names of places it is of occasional occurrence, as the Holt, a wood near Havant, Hants; Knock-holt wood, near Tenterden, Kent; and in Norfolk, according to Forby, a small grove, or plantation, is called a holt, as nut-holt, osier-holt, gooseberry-holt, &c. Ang.-Sax. holt, lucas.

<sup>5</sup> In the complaint of the Ploughman, t. Edw. III., given by Foxe, under the year 1560, the following version is cited of i. Tim. v. 8: "He that forsaketh the charge of thilke that ben homedich with him (sinum, et mercede domesticorum, Vulg.) hath for saken his fayth, and is worse than a misbeleued man;" (in the Wicliffite version, "his owne, and moost of his household men.") Here, and in Gal. v. 10, Wicl. version, the word seems to be used precisely in the sense given to it in the Promptorium; but it denotes also familiar, by acquaintance, and presuming. "Homely, famylier, through a quaynted, familiér. Homelynesse, príuaculté. Homely, saueye, to perte, malapert." FALSG. Horman says that "homelynesse (fiducia) comyng of a true harte, is a maner of vertue," where it seems to imply familiar confidence; and he uses the word also as follows: "He was homely with her, or had to do with her."

<sup>1</sup> It should seem that the eala, or swatan of the Anglo-Saxons, were not compounded with any bitter condiment, which was essential to the concoction of beer, a drink of Flemish or German origin, and until the XVIth cent. imported from the Continent, or brewed by foreigners only in this country. The Promptorium gives BERE, cerevisia hennulina, as distinguished from ale, which was not hopped; Caxton, in the Boke for Travellers, speaking of drinks, makes the distinction, "Ale of England, Byre of Aylemayne;" and it appears by the Customs of London, Arnold's Chron. 87, that beer was first made in London by "byere brewars, straungers—Flemyngis, Duchemen," &c. a recipe for making single beer with malt and hops is given, p. 247. It has been asserted that the use of hops was forbidden by Hen. VI. in consequence of a petition of the Commons, mentioned by Fuller, in his Worthies, under Essex, against "the wicked weed called hops;" but no record of the prohibition has been found, and the petition does not appear on the Rolls of Parliament. In the time of Hen. VIII. some prejudice seems to have arisen regarding their use, for among the articles for the reform of sundry misuses in the royal household, 1531, is an injunction to the brewer not to put any hops or brimstone into the ale. Archæol. iii. 157. Hops, called in Dutch Hoppe, Germ. Hopfen, were introduced into England from Artois, between 10 and 15 Hen. VIII. as affirmed in Stowe's Chron. about the time of the expedition against Tournay. Bullein, in the "Bulwarke of Defence," written about 1550, speaks of hops as growing in Suffolk. They are mentioned in the stat. 5 and 6 Edw. VI. c. 5, 1552, as cultivated in England; Stat. of Realm, iii. 135. Among the privileges conceded to the strangers from the Low Countries, who settled at Stamford, 1572, is a clause regarding the free exercise of husbandry, in which are specified hops, and all things necessary to gardens. Strype, Life of Parker, App. 115. The management of hops was quickly acquired, as appears by the instructions given by Tusser, in March's and June's husbandry, published 1557. See also the Treatise by Reyn. Scott, 1574; and Harrison's Deser. of Britain, Holinsh. i. 110. The remarks of Leonard Mascall in his Art of Planting, under the head of "certeyne Dutch practises," p. 85, edit. 1592, are detailed, and curious; and he appears to have been conversant with the method adopted in Flanders. The stat. 1 Jac. I. c. 18, against the deterioration of hops, shows that a large quantity was still supplied in 1603 from foreign parts. See Beckman's Hist. of Inventions, iv. 325, and Cullum's Hawsted, 202.

In the Liber vocatus femina, MS. Trin. Coll. Cant. this passage is given as follows.

"Ore alez à semer v're linois,

Now goþ to sow þour flex.

Qor de linois vous auerz les boceaus,

For of flex 3e haue þyge hoppes."

The Ortus gives "opium est nomen herbe, ache, or hoppe;" and in the interpretations by Master Geoffrey of Joh. de Garland. de Equiv. occur "Cornu, fructus corni, hoppe: cucurus, quidam arbor, hoppe tre, et quidam dicunt."

The proper distinction is here made between the hopper, or the trough wherein the grain is put in order to be ground, mentioned by Chaucer, Reve's T. 4009, so termed from the hopping movement given to it, and the seed-lepe, which was also called a hopper. "Hopper of a myll, trouge." FALSG. "Seminarium, vas quo ponitur semina, an hoppe." MED. It is in this last sense that Perkyng the Ploughman says that he will become a pilgrim,

"And hange myn hoper at myn hals

Vis. of P. Ploughm. line 3917.

In Lincolnshire, according to Bp. Kennett, a little hand-basket is termed a hoppet; and in Yorkshire a hopper is "a seed lip, or basket wherein the sower puts his corn." Lansd. MS. 1033. An implement of domestic use, probably for grinding grain, is mentioned among the effects of Thos. Arkyndall, of Northallerton, 1499. "A leed and y<sup>e</sup> stane, xij. d. A hopping tre, xj. d." Wills and Inv. Surt. Soc. i. 104. See TRAMALE of a mylle, CULD LEPE, and SEED LEPP.

<sup>1</sup> The art of working in horn was one in which the English were formerly much skilled. In 1464 the horners presented a petition to Parliament against strangers, who came "to understand the konnyng and feate of makying of horns." Rot. Parl. iv. 567. <sup>3</sup> Chaucer, in the Rom. of R. speaks of the discordant sounds of "hornepipes of Cornewaile," which, as it has been remarked in the note on the word CORNUSE, seem to have been identical with that instrument, called likewise, according to Roquefort, muse, in Latin mus. The rustic dance, to which the name of hornpipe was transferred from the instrument that served as an accompaniment, seems to be described by Jean de Meung, where he relates that Pygmalion took the "instrumens de Cornouille," or "muse," and danced to animate his statue. Rom. de la Rose, 21, 874. The horn-pipe is mentioned as a musical instrument by Spenser and B. Jonson. No explanation has been found of the word palpista.

<sup>5</sup> The horse-litter, or horse-bere, Ang.-Sax. biere, feretrum, grabatus, was used at an early period in England, and probably introduced from the South. See Mr. Markland's Remarks on Carriages, Archæol. xx. 445. Bede relates that Ceolfrið, Abbot of Wearmouth, pursued his journey to Rome, during which he died, A.D. 716, "cum ad hoc per infirmitatem deveniret, ut equitare non valens feretro caballario veheretur." W. Malmsb. relates that the corpse of Rufus was conveyed by the rustics to Winchester "in rheda caballaria," which in the Polychronicon is termed a "horse bere," and by Fabian a "horse litter." M. Westm. describes the retreat of King John from Swineshead, when, having lost his "bigas, et quasdam clittas," in the Wash, and falling sick, he was thus carried to Newark, "facta lectica equestri, descendit de palfrido, et ipsam intravit." G. de Biblesworth, who wrote in the reign of Edw. I. says,

"Pur cyse en litier (on hors bere) hom chiuuuche."

"Basterna est theca manualis vel itineris, a carre, or a charcot, or horse lytter. Lectica dicitur carrus in quo defertur lectus; et proprie lectus portabilis, a charet or a horslytter." ORTUS. "Horse lytter, letière aux chevaux." PALSg. Horse litters, called by Commenius arcerae or lecticae, carried by two horses, according to the fashion in use in Holland, are represented in the Orbis Sensualium, p. 111, ed. 1659.

<sup>2</sup> The precise nature of the article of dress, to which the name hose was given by the Anglo-Saxons, it is not easy to define: it is rendered by Elfric "caliga, ceca." In early illuminations their legs are frequently represented as covered by bands, as it seems, wound around them, and these perhaps were termed hose-bendas, which has been supposed to denote garters. The word hose is common to the Dutch, Danish, and Icelandic languages, and the old French houzes, or heuses, seem to have been identical therewith. P. Waernefridus states that the Lombards used hose (hosis), and wore over them "tabrigos birreos," when on horseback. Gest. Longob. iv. c. 23. "Calico, i. caligas et sotularis induci, to put on hose. Oso, i. asus caligare, to house. Caliga, hose; calicula, a lytell hose." ORTUS. In the XVIth cent. the term hose was used to denote the entire nether garment, comprising the upper stocks, or breeches, and the nether-stocks of hosen, or stockings. The directions of Queen Eliz. by proclamation in 1565 are curiously explicit as to the prescribed properties of this article of dress. Strype's Ann. Vol. i. App. 78.

"Furst ther sit an old cherle in a blake hure,
Of all that ther sitteth seemeth best syre."

It signifies a cap of estate, as in the bequest of John Earl of Warren, Surrey, and Strathorne, 1347: "Jeo decys à Monsr. Will. de Warenne mon filz ma hure d'argent dorré pour Strathorne ove le cercle d'argent dorré pour yed." Testam. Ebor. i. 43; Margaret de Knaresburgh devises, in 1397, "flamecolam de jilo, cam j. edamandro, ac houfe; pannum de lak; tenum de cerico; flamecolam de crispo," &c. Ibid. p. 221. In the Vision of P. Ploughman, 418, allusion is made to the "howves of selk," worn by serjeants-at-law; and Chaucer, in the Reve's Prol. 3909, uses the phrase "set his howve;" and speaks of "an howve above a call." Troil. B. iii. 775. In 1482, a petition was preferred to Parliament by the craft of "hurors, cappers," &c. against the injurious use of machinery, then introduced to supersede manual labour, by means of a falling mill, whereby the quality of "huers, bonettes, and cappes" was depreciated. See Rot. Parl. vi. 233; Stat. of Readm. 22 Edw. IV., where they are termed "hurez, huretz," &c. MS. 18 A. VI. f. 74, b. In John Arderne's Practica, Sloane MS. 50, f. 61, the use of "hahoue, et halehoue, et folioy, et horshoue," in the composition of an unguent, called Salus populi, is set forth. Gerard calls it ale-hoof, or tun-hoof, and states that "the women of our Northern parts, especially about Wales and Cheshire, do tunne the herbe ale-hoof into their ale." Compare TUNHOVE, hereafter. Langham, in the Garden of Health, 1579, details the qualities of "Alehoofe, ground iuie, gilrumbith, ground or Tudnoore;" and Cotgrave gives "patte de chat, cats-foot, alehoofe, tunehoofe, ground ivy, Gill creep by the ground." Skinner thought that ale-hoof was derived from all, and lehoof, etlibas, from its numerous medicinal properties, but the derivation of the name is possibly from hof, vogala, in allusion to the hoof-shaped leaf. In the West, the plant colts-foot is called horse's-hoof. It is possible that the readhoof of of the Anglo Saxon herbals is the ground ivy, to which, however, the name eorðifig was assigned.

<sup>3</sup> The reading here seems to require correction; the word does not occur in the other MSS. or in the printed editions. Anania is explained by Ugutio, and in the Ortus, to be "inferior flos olei, dregs of oyle," but Marin signifies the "superior flos olei;" and howe here seems to be put for such impurities as float on the surface. Junius derives huckster from the Dutch Hoecker, a retailer, because he endeavours to hook, or draw in strangers; but it seems to be allied to the Ang.-Sax. cacan, angere, because he sells at a higher price than the first dealer. In Friar Michael's Satire on the people of Kildare, written about 1308, the huckster appears to have been a female victualler, Skinner supposes it may be so called from its holding or lasting long, Ang.-Sax. feor, longe, or holding fair, as being evergreen. "Houx, the holly, holme, or hulver tree. Petit houx, kneehulver, butchers broom." COG. Holland, in his translation of Pliny, speaks of the "holly or hulver tree." B. xxiv. c. 13.

This word is of frequent occurrence in the Wielifste version. "The litil children were hurtlid togidere (collidibatur, Vulg.) in her wombe." Gen. xxv. 22. See also Mark ix. 17; Deut. xxvii. 41. In the Golden Legend it is said of the final Judgment, "the senenth sygne, the stones shal smyte and hurtle togyder." It is used by Chaucer, Spenser, and Shakespeare.

Zool. iii. pp. 87, 99. This last appears to be the species here called the huske. Palsgrave gives "husse, a fysshe, roussel;" and Cotgrave explains roussel to be "a little ruddie dog-fish." "Squatina, a soole fysshe with a rough skynne, wherewith fletchers doo make theyr arrowes smoothe." ELYOT. In N. Libr. of the earlier Wicliffite version; "Thou shalt annoynt of it the tabernacle, &c. and the candlestik, and the hustilmentis of it (utensilia, Vulg.)" Exod. xxx. 23. It occurs in several documents connected with the Eastern Counties. Joanna, relict of Sir T. Hemgrave, made, about 1421, a will under constraint of her second husband, devising to him personal effects and a sum of money, "1150 mares, with other jewel and hostelment that were mine other husbands goods and mine," as stated in her protest. Hist. of Hemgrave, 93. John Hakone of Wyneton makes the following devise in 1437; "I wyll that alle necessities and hustylments longyng to myn howsehold, that is to seyn, to halle, chaumbyr, and kechene be disposed to the use of my wife." Norwich Wills, Harl. MS. 10, f. 267. In the Paston Letters, ii. 26, are mentioned "gonnes, crossebows, and quarells, and alle other hostelments to the maneur (of Caistor) belonginge." 1469, 9 Edw. IV. In 1492 Robert Parker bequeaths to his wife all his "hostiliaments, utensels, and jewellys, to his house pertaining." Cullum's Hawsted, 17. The word seems to be taken from the old Fr. oustillement, ROQUEF. "Oustillemens, stuffe, movables, household furniture, or implements." COTE.

<sup>3</sup> Sir John Maundevile says of the Ark of the Testimony, "that arke, or hucche, with the relikes, Tytus ledde with him to Rome, whan he had scoufyt alle the Jewes." Voiage, p. 102. By Chaucer the word is written "wiche." Caxton, in the Boke for Travellers, says of household stuff, "these thinges set ye in your whuteche (huche) or cheste; your jewellis in your forcier, that they be not stolen." "Archa, a whycheche, a arke, and a cofyre, a lytelle whycheche. Cibatum, a mete whycheche. Cista, a whycheche." MED. "Hutche, a chest, cofre, huche." PALSG. Ang.-Sax. hwæcca, arca.

<sup>4</sup> Fractillus is explained in the Catholicon to be "cauda vel fragma panni fissi; cauda ornatus pendens ex inferiori parte: fractillus dicitur etiam cillus in tapeto vel alid vesti villosus." Hornian says, "he hath a pleasure in geagged clothynge, lasciviosa veste:" and Palsgrave gives "I iagge or cutte a garment, ie chicquette, ie deschicquette, ie desrouppe. I iagge nat my hosen for thirfte, but for a bragge. He is outhar a landed man, or a foole y<sup>e</sup> cutteth his garments. Iagge, a cuttyng, chicquette. If I iagge my cappe, thou hast naught to do." This strange fashion, which, as it has been observed in the note on the word DAGGE, prevailed during the reign of Rich. II. was not disused even in the XVIth cent. It is particularly noticed by Hardyng, who states that it was described to him by the clerk of Richard's household.

"Cut werke was greate both in court and tonnes, Both in meenes hoddis and also in their gownes." Chron. c. 193.

<sup>1</sup> A full account of the defensive armour called a jack is given by Sir S. Meyrick, in his observations on ancient military garments worn in England, Archæol. xix. 224. Mention of it occurs as early as 1375, in the will of Thos. de Hemenhale, who devises "anum iakke de rubio worstede." Transcripts from Norwich Registers, Harl. MS. 10. Walsingham relates that Wat Tyler's mob, in the sack of John of Gaunt's palace at the Savoy, 1381, found "vestimentum preciosissimum ipsius, quale iakke vocamus." Camd. p. 249. It is mentioned in the will of Henry Snayth, clericus, 1389; "Lego duas loricas ferreas, duas bacinetts cum ventall', et duas iakkys coopertus cum fast';" and in 1391, Margery, widow of Sir Will. de Aldeburgh, bequeaths to her son "anum dupleum cum loried interius opertum cum rubio correo capro. Item, anum iak defensionis opertum nigro relecto." Test. Ebor. i. 113, 150. Sir S. Meyrick questions the authority of Nicot's definition that the jack was an habiliment stuffed with cotton; in the Catholicon Ang. however, written 1483, is given "a iakke, bombicinum." Towards the close of the XVth cent. a less cumbersome defence of a similar nature, termed a jacket, was more in use. Palsgrave gives "iacke, harnesse, iacq, iacque; iacket, sion: iacket without sleues, hocqueton: iacket that hath but four quarters, iacquette." Caxton says in the Boke for Travellers, "Donaas the doblot maker hath performed my doublet and my iaquet, mon poerpainte et mon paltorqes." In the accounts of the Lestrangle family, 1532, are the following entries: "Item, paid for ij. pownd of twyn for the iacks. Item, paid for iij. elnes of canvas for y<sup>e</sup> iack. Item, paid to the taylour for the wurkmanshippe of iij. iacks, ix.s. iv.d. Item, paid for twyn for 3our iacks. Item, paid to Matthew Smith (or the smith) for making of plates for the iackes, iv.s. ij.d." The kind of jack to which this last entry relates is described in Lily's Euph. Eng. where it is said that the armour of the English consists of "corslets, Almaine rivets, shirts of male, iackes quilted, and covered over with leather, fustian, or canvas, over thick plates of yron that are sowed to y<sup>e</sup> same." It seems to have been identical with the brigandine. The jack may even have been occasionally formed with mail; in Edw. III. i. 2, Capell's Prolus. are mentioned "jacks of gymold mail." Thus Florio explains "Giacco, a iacke of maile, made like a corslet, a iacket or shirt of maile. Giachetto, a iacket or shirt of maile:" and Cotgrave gives "Iaque, a iacke or coat of mail, and thence a iacke for the body of an Irish greyhound, &c. made commonly of a wild boares tanned skinn, and put on him when he is to coap with that violent beast." The sense in which balthous is used in the Promptorium is singular; it signifies commonly a girdle, but here COTE ARMURE, DOBBELET, and PALTOK, military garments, are rendered by the term balthous.

that "in his yonge age he eschewed y<sup>e</sup> playes and iapes of other yonge chyl dren." Fabyan relates that William Rufus was warned of his approaching end, "but he set all at nought, and made of it a scoffe, or a iape." Horman says, "he bete me cursedly with a rod, as it had ben in iape, velut per ludum. Leue thy iapys, mitte nugas. At the begynnyng I hadde wente thou haddeste iapyde, putavi te joco fecisse." Junius has detailed the use of this word, especially by Chaucer, and seeks a derivation by comparison with Isl. geip, jactatio. Skinner derives it from Fr. gaber. It appears, moreover, from Speght's Glossary, appended to Chaucer, that, having become of ambiguous import, the word was scarcely employed in polite parlance; and this is confirmed by Palsgrave, who gives the verb "I iape a wenche, ie fout, and ie bistoeque. It is better to iape a wenche than to do worse."

rascal or base fellow."

"Lat be, quoth Joek, and call'd him jevel,

And by the tail him tugged."

Christ Kirk, st. 7.

Forté a Sax. ge-full, imundus, profanus, reus, putidus; or ge-fyll. The Lieutenant of the Tower, advising Sir Thomas More to put on worse clothes at his execution, gave this reason, because he that is to have them is but a Javel: to which Sir Thomas replied, "Shall I count him a Javel who is to doe me so great a benefit?" Lansd. MS. 1033.
In Roper's Life of More the term employed is "raskall." Skelton uses the word javell frequently: it is one of the opprobrious epithets that are put into the mouth of Wolsey, in "Why come ye not to Court?" and occurs in a passage cited by Hearne, and attributed to Skelton, Glossary to Langt. Chron. v. Wroken.

Nares quotes Spenser, and other writers, by whom the word is used, and thinks it may be derived from Fr. javelle, a brush-wood faggot, a name that might be applied to such fellows as Shakespeare calls "rash bavin wits." Holland, in his version of Pliny, speaks of the "javelis," stalks, or stems of line or flax, B. xix. c. 1. See further observations in Jamieson. Compare IOPPE, or folte, Joppus, and IAPER, Gerro.

<sup>1</sup> Jesses or gesses, used in falconry, are thus defined by Nicot: "Gects (gets, or giez) sont deux petites courroies courtes de peau de chien, une en chaque jambe du faulcon près l'ur serre; au dessus desquels sont les sonnettes tenans à une autre petite courroie à part." Latham says that "Jesses are those short straps of leather which are fastened to the hawks legges, and so to the Lease by Varvels, Anlets, or such like." The origin of the term is evident, as signified by the Emperor Fred. II. in his treatise de arte Venandi, ii. c. 38; namely, "ob hoc jecti dicuntur, quod cum eis jaciuntur falcones, et emittuntur ad pradam." They are also called Getti. See Ducange and Menage. In "Dame Julian Bernes Processe of hawkynge" it is stated that "Hawkys have abowte theyr leggs gesses made of leddy moost comynly, some of sylke, whyche scholde be noo lenger but that the knottys of theym sholde appere in myddys of the left honde, bytween the longe fynge and the leche fynge; by cause the Lewnes sholde be fastenyd to theym wyth a payre of TyrettyŃ," &c. St. Alban's Book, sign. b. iij.

<sup>2</sup> This word does not appear to be retained in the East Anglian dialect. Tusser uses it both in the sense of strutting about ostentatiously, and of actively busying oneself, or bustling to and fro. In the interesting account of his own life, he says that his desire was ease and contentment, and to live uprightly,

"More than to ride with pomp and pride,

Or for to jet in others debt."

Stanza 33.

In his Epistle to the Lady Paget, prefixed to his Book of Huswifery, among the qualities of a good housewife, he says that she "should jetty from morning to night." Palsgrave gives the following illustrations of the use of this word: "I iette, I make a countenance with my legges, ie me iamboye. I wotte nat what his herte is, but he ietteth horriblye in his pace. I iette w<sup>t</sup> facyon and countenance to set forthe myselfe, ie bragque. <sup>2</sup> An island in the Severn, about four miles N. of Worcester, called by Flor. Wigorn. "Bevereye," and at the present time Bever, served as a retreat to the people of that city when it was burned by Hardicanute, A.D. 1041, on their resisting the payment of tribute. See the Sax. Chron. Laugtoft gives a relation of the circumstances.

"But þo þat fled wiþ þer godes to þe ilde of Seuerne,
 And þat wer in þe ilde duelled þer for drede,
 Untill þe Kyng turned, and his wrath ouer zede." R. Brunne, p. 56.

In another passage, p. 151, he relates that Richard Cœur de Lion took possession of two islands in the Mediterranean, one "that ilde hight Labamare," which is described as situated in the straights of Messina; and another "ilde" called "Griffonie," meaning, perhaps, Sicily. In Kyng Alisaunder the word "ydle," as printed by Weber, seems to be the same word, varying by local pronunciation.

"Euerych ydle, euerych contrey,
 He hath y-soughth, par ma fey;
 An ydle he passeth y-hote Perfiens." 5908.

"Of what kynd of ympe in gardein or in friith
 Ymped is in stocke, fro whence it came
 It sauourith euer, and is nothyng to blame." Hardyng's Chron. c. 98.

<sup>1</sup> The application of enamel to every description of ornamental work in metal was much used in England from the Anglo-Saxon times, until the XVIth cent. The number of existing specimens is, indeed, small; owing, probably, to the precious metals having been most frequently employed for enamelled works, which have been melted down to form ornaments suited to the successive changes of fashion; but ancient wills and inventories, especially the lists of crown jewels printed in the Kalendars of the Exchequer Treasury, afford abundant evidence of the profusion of enamelled plate and jewellery in England. There may be but insufficient evidence to show that the earliest works of this kind, such as fibulae, and minor personal ornaments, were executed by British artificers; but the character of ornament which is presented by them, the mention that is made in early records of the skill of our countrymen, and the distinctive term of Opus Anglicanum, to designate their ornamental works in metal, give to such a supposition a high degree of probability. A specimen of interest preserved in the British Museum appears by the legend to have been the ring of Ethelwulf, King of Wessex, from 836 to 858, father of Alfred. See Archæol. vii. pl. xxx. It is of gold, and appears to be properly an enamelled work, the field, according to the ordinary process of the earlier period, being chiselled out to receive a vitrified metallic compound of a dark blue colour, which was fixed by fusion in the cavities formed by the tool, and set off the design produced by those parts of the metal that had been left in relief. Another mode of workmanship, in some degree analogous, appears in the jewel at the Ashmolean Museum, attributed to Alfred; a specimen recently discovered in London, Archæol. xxix. pl. x. and a few other instances. In these a semi-transparent substance, which appears to be rather a vitreous paste than a true enamel, fills the spaces in the field of the design, the outline being formed, not by chiselling the solid metal, but by means of thin fillets of gold, attached to the surface of the plate, and serving to detach the variously coloured portions of the design. At a later period the pre-eminent skill of the enamellers of Limoges caused their work to be highly esteemed in other countries. It appears that the tomb of Walter de Merton, Bp. Rochester, 1274, was made by Magister Johannes de Limogia, who came to England for the purpose. See the Executors' Accounts, Thorpe's Cust. Roff. 193. At the Reformation this memorial was destroyed; but the enamelled effigy in Westminster Abbey, representing Will. de Valence, who died 1296, if not the work of John of Limoges, affords an interesting specimen of the art practised at that place. The prevailing use of ornaments of this nature appears also from the Constit. of Will. de Bileys, 1229, and Walt. de Cantilupe, 1240, Bishops of Worcester, prescribing among the sacred ornaments to be provided by the parishioners, "ij. purpura, una argentea, vel eburnea, vel de opere Lemovicico, in qua hostia reseruentur." Wilk. Conc. i. 623, 666. Several of these exist: but the most curious enamelled ornaments of this period, as connected with England, are the small shrines called coffres Lemovicenses, on which is represented the martyrdom of St. Thomas of Canterbury. One of these is in the possession of the Ant. Soc. and another at Hereford Cathedral. Enamel was likewise made available for the decoration of sepulchral brasses, to a much greater extent, probably, than might be supposed from the few examples that have been preserved. In the XVth cent. the older process of chiselling out the design was abandoned, and a mode of enamelling, wholly superficial, came into general use; it appears to have been first adopted in Italy, but was practised for more than a century, in the greatest perfection, at Limoges. Chaucer speaks of "fine enamaile" and gold "amiled." Rom. of Rose. Spenser uses the word "aumaild," and in some documents the word is written "anelyd." Compare ANELYN, or enelyn metalle, above. <sup>1</sup> Chaucer uses the word to ensure in the sense of affirming by word of mouth; it had also that of betrothing, or promising in marriage. "I ensure, I trouthe plyght, as man and a woman togyther, ie fiance. I herde saye they were maryed, or euer I knewe they were ensured togyther. I insuer by maryage, id. In Henry VIIIth's Primer, 1545, in the lesson at matins, the following verse occurs: "The aungell Gabriel was sent from God into a cytie of Galile named Nazareth, to a virgyn which was ensured to a man whose name was Joseph." Luke i. 27.

<sup>1</sup> To job signifies in the East Anglian dialect to peck with the beak, or with a mattock; and is used in the former sense by Lestrangle and Tusser, who directs boughs to be stuck among runcival pease, upon which they may climb (February's husbandry).

"So doing, more tender and greater they wex.

If peacock and turkey leave jobbing their beax."

Holland, in his version of Pliny, B. x. c. 18, says that birds that "job and peeke holes in trees," are of the race of sprights, martins, or wood-peckers; and speaks of "wood-pecks, or jobbers," c. 29. <sup>2</sup> In Domesday mention occurs of the joculator and the joculatrix regis, T. i. f. 38, b. and 162: Ang.-Sax. gegcelere, prestigiator. The juggler and the minstrel are, as Warton observes, frequently confounded together. Music formed a part of the entertainments provided by both, and it was not, perhaps, until the XIVth cent. that the two denominations were properly distinguished. The juggler was called also TREGET-TOWRE, a term which occurs in the Promptorium. His performances were very varied, comprising sleight of hand, tricks of all kinds, tumbling, and buffoonery. Strutt has collected much information on this subject in his Sports, B. iii. c. iv. Chaucer, in the third Book of Fame, seems to distinguish the jugglers from the minstrels and musicians, and speaks of them as playing with magicians, "tragetours, and Phetonisses, charmieresses," &c.; but in the Rom. of the Rose he mentions minstrels and jugglers, as if their performances were similar. He repeatedly alludes to the wonderful tricks which were exhibited by them. "Balatro, a yogeloure. Pantomimus, a iogeloure. Parascitaster, id." MED. "To iugille, joculari. <sup>2</sup> To jounce signifies in Norfolk "to bounce, thump, and jolt, as rough riders are wont to do." FORBY. Shakespeare uses "jauncing" in a similar sense, Richard II., V. 5. "Jouer each other, to stirre a horse in the stable till he swart with all; or as our to jaunt; (an old word)." COLE.

<sup>3</sup> Neechan, in his Treatise de nominibus utensilium written early in the XIIIth cent. describing the ordinary dress of the master of the family, when at home, says, "perhenduntur (li asuorner) jupam habet penultam (faré) et tunicam (cote) manubius (manches) et birris (geraus) munibum et manubiantum," &c. Titus, D. xx. f. 7, b. When mounted for the journey he was to wear the capa, with sleeves and hood. The jupa appears to have been a long garment worn by all classes, secular and religious, and both sexes. See Ducange. It was loosely made, for Chaucer uses the comparison "riueling as a gipe;" but the diminutive term jupou seems to imply that the military garment so called, which fitted the person closely, was a kind of jupa. Chaucer mentions the gipon as part of the attire of the knight, Cant. T. ProL. v. 75, and Knight's T. v. 2122. A full account of the jupon, or guippon, will be found in Sir S. Meyrick's Treatise on Military Garments worn in England, Archaeol. xix. 236. In Ly beaus Disconus the garment is termed a "gypell." In N. Britain a kind of short cloak for women, as also a wide coat, is termed a jupe.

Gower speaks of Diogenes gathering "ioutes" in his garden; in the context they are called "wortes," Conf. Am. B. vii. Numerous recipes for preparing joutes occur in books of ancient cookery: in a curious collection in the possession of Sir T. Phillipps is the following: "Nou greybe we loute Doré, of moni muchel y-wylned. Ye elene bete, and sclarie hokke i-boilled and wel i-bakked in an eroullie elene y-washen. Hakke ioutes gentil and veire; do to ȝeopen ouer be fure greece of pork, hakke saffron, and peopur," &c. XIVth cent. MS. Heber, 8336. Kennett has the following note amongst his gloss. coll. Lansd. MS. 1033: "Isles, embers, hot ashes, Lane. Easles, in Essex. Icelandic. Eysa, cinis ignitus." This word is still used in N. Britain: see Jamieson v. Aizle, Eizle, or Isillis.

<sup>3</sup> In stat. 12 Ric. II. c. 13, 1333, it is ordered that the fumes, et autres ordures des issues et entrailles sibilés des bestes tués, comé des autres corruptions, east into the ditches adjoining to towns, shall be removed, under a penalty of £20. In the English version the word here is rendered "garbage." Stat. of Realm, ii. 59. In the Office of the Celleresse of Barking, the "ysues of the larder" are explained to be the hides, inwards, and tallow of oxen, &c. which were sold, and of which she was charged to render an account. *Cott. A.D. 1332, ed. Camd. 288. Holinshed, who calls him "a coloprophet," terms them "two iorden pots." Chron. iii. p. 440. Chaucer speaks of urinals and "jordanes" (Pardonere's Prol.), and if not identical, they seem to have been similar in form. See the marginal sketch in Sloane's MS. 73, f. 133, b. where it is said, in the directions for preparing vermilion, "take a good thicke Iordan of glas," which, after being well covered with luting, was to be used as a sort of crucible. It is precisely of the same shape as the glass vessel usually held by the leech, or water-doctor, in ancient representations. The word is found in the Vision of P. Ploughman, and is used by Shakespeare. Skinner thinks it is not derived from the name of the river Jordan, but from Ang.-Sax. ȝor, sordes, and den, receptaculum; an etymology which has been adopted by the author of the Craven Glossary. The derivation from Armoric, Jour len, urinal, has also been suggested. Blount states that the jordan was a double urinal, but offers no explanation.

<sup>2</sup> The Jewish community being regarded as the property of the Sovereign, is termed in ancient records "Judaismus Regis, Judaismus noster, or communitas Judeorum nostrorum," and the Jews were bound to reside only in royal cities and boroughs. See "Les Estatutz de la Jewerie," t. Edw. I. Stat. of Realm, i. 221. They were marked by a badge, and, although it does not appear that they were compelled to dwell in one part of a city appropriated to them, as is the Ghetto in the cities of Italy, yet they seem to have congregated in a district, probably on account of the detestation in which they were held, and it is remarkable that, although more than five centuries have elapsed since they were totally expelled by Edw. I. in 1290, the memorial of their settlement in many cities in England is still preserved in the local name of Jewry. M. Paris speaks of the Judaismus at Worcester, which was ravaged by Rob. de Ferrars in 1264; and Rob. of Glouc. says of the great outrage at the accession of Richard Cœur de Lion,

"Ther was many a wild hinc, that prest was ther to,
And wende in to the Gywerie, and woundede, and to drowe," &c. p. 485.

R. Brunne uses "Juerie" in a like signification. See Chaucer's account of the "Jewerie" in a Christian city in Asia; Prior. T. 13,419. Besides the Old Jewry in the metropolis, there is still the Jewry at Canterbury. Leland speaks of the street at Winchester, leading from the High Street to the North Gate, "caullyd the Jury, by cause Jues did echabite it, and had theyr synagoge th-re" Itin. iii. f. 71. and says of Warwick, "The suburbe without the East Gate is callid the Smithes streete; I hard ther that the Jues some tyme dwellyd in it." Itin. iv. f. 165, a. In ancient deeds relating to Warwick "the Jurye" is mentioned, and the Jury street still exists. At Lynn, where the Promptorium was compiled, the Jews had formed a numerous settlement at an early period, and there is still the Jews' street. Blomf. Norf. iv. 578. In low Latin the part of a city reserved for the Jews was called Judaaria, Juderia, Jubaria, or Jubari, in French Jalerie, Jairie, or Juterie; wherein, in some countries, they were compelled exclusively to dwell. See further of the early settlements of the Jews in England in Dr. Tovey's Anglia Judaica, and Caley's Observations, Archaeol. viii. 389.

<sup>1</sup> Dieta, according to the Catholicon, signifies a day's journey: the term occurs in this sense in Bracton and Fleta, where it is said that "annis rationabilis dicta constat ex xxi. miliaribus." Chaucer uses the word in this sense, Knight's T. 2,740; Chaucer's Dream, 1945; and also in that of a day's work, Rom. of Rose, 575. Journey had also the signification of a day's conflict, in like manner as the expression "the day" is used at present. Thus in the Paston Letters it is said of the Battle of St. Alban's, 1455, that "alle the Lordes that dyed at the jorney are beryed at Seynt Albaues;" and the engagement is termed "the nale journey" of St. Alban's, meaning, apparently, the disastrous battle. Vol. i. 108, 110. See Jamieson, v. Jorneye. In Norfolk, Journey implies the time a man is at plough, about six hours; if he works nine, two Journeys are taken.

"Take mynd bred and eyren þou swyng
To hom to-gedur wyth out lettyng;
Take fresshe broth of gode befe,
Coloure hyt wyth safron þat is me lefe;
Boyle hyt sotly, and in þo boyleng

<sup>3</sup> See CAMPYN'. In ancient deeds cited in the Hist. of Hengrave, p. 11, mention occurs of "le camping close," near Fornham St. Genevieve, where Montfort, Earl of Leicester, was defeated in 1173; and the name has been supposed to have some connection with that occurrence, but more probably was given to a close appropriated to camping, the favourite game of the Eastern counties. Sir Thos. Brown gives to kamp in his list of Norfolk words. Tusser speaks of the game, in December's Husbandry, as beneficial to grass land. In a publication by M. Stevenson, 1673, entitled "Norfolk drollery," is a poem in reference to this ancient game, and it is fully described by Forby.

<sup>4</sup> Loramentum is explained in the Catholicon to mean boarding or frame-work compacted together, as in the construction of a ceiling. Stathe, which here is found only in the King's Coll. MS. occurs hereafter, as follows, STATHE, waterys syde. Statio. It signifies a landing-place for merchandise, or quay, and several instances are found at Lynn and Hull. Ducange, v. Coga, rejects Spelman's derivation of this word; "Kaia, area in litore, e compactis tabulis trabibusque, clauium iustor, firmata. Sax. caꝥ, "clavis, which, however, here appears to be the correct etymology. "Key to knytte walles toguyler, clif." PALSG.

<sup>5</sup> KEKYNS', MS. Compare WAYTYN', or a-spyñ. Obscreo. Chaucer uses the verb to kyke in the sense of gazing with a fixed look. Nicholas is thus described, when, to deceive the carpenter, he pretended to be distraught, or in amazement:

<sup>1</sup> "Reticula, a lytell nette or kalle. Reticellum, a kalle." ORT. "A kelle, reticulum, reticellum. A kelle knytter, reticularies." CATH. ANG. The fashion of confining the hair in an ornamental network, which occasionally was jewelled, seems to have obtained in England from the time of Hen. III. until that of Elizabeth, and an endless variety of examples are afforded by illuminated MSS. and monumental effigies. It was termed calle or kelle, a term directly taken, perhaps, from the French calle, Latin calantica or callus; and it had also the appellation "crespen," crespine, still retained in Southern Enrope to denote the picture-sque head-dresses of the females, formed with net-work of coloured silk, and which still present many of the fashions of ancient times. The head-attire of the lovely lady who led in Sir Galran to the court of King Arthur is thus described (Anturs of Arther, ed. Robson, p. 14):

"Her fax in fyne perrè was frettut and fold,
Her counter-felit and hur kelle were colurt ful clene," St. 29.

See Kynge of Tars, 365; the Grene Knight, 291; Cant. Tales, 6660; Troil. iii. 775; Townl. Myst. p. 312, &c. In the minute description of the attire of Elizabeth, Queen of Hen. VII. as she appeared before her coronation, 1487, it is said that she wore "her faire yelow hair hanging down pleyne tyhynd her bak, with a calle of pipes over it." Lel. Coll. iv. 220. Hall mentions the "kall" worn by Anne of Cleves at her first interview with Henry VIII. 1547. "Call for maydens, retz de soye," PALSG. Amongst the occupations of the ancient ladies of the court of Elizabeth, Harrison mentions "caulworke." Descr. of Eng. Holinsh. Chron. i. 196. The term caul is applied likewise in other significations. Amongst the partinencia piscatorum, Harl. MS. 1002, f. 153, is given "Calle or pu(r)snett, reticulum." The ornament of a slaughtered beast is called in Norfolk the kell. "Kell in a woman's belly, tagge," PALSG. The superstition respecting the membrane which sometimes covers the head of a new-born infant, termed the caul, and in the North the silly-hew, noticed by Grose and Brand, has been mentioned in the note on the word HOWE, p. 250. "Ang.-Sax. cylla, etc." SKINNER.

<sup>2</sup> The signification of KEMPE, as applied to fish, is very obscure. Kemp, from Ang.-Sax. compa, mihes, signifies a knight or champion, and thence implies excellence or superiority, as in strength, or unusual size. See the remarks of Hre on Su. G. kaempe, athleta. "A kempe, ubi a grande." CATH. ANG. Kempe may therefore here denote an eel of the largest size, called otherwise a fausen eel, or a spitcheek. In the version of Junius' Nomenclator, v. Aequilla, Higins observes, "paupradis, a fausen eele, minica, a grizze, uclia, a scuffling dicita." See Gesn. de Aquat. lib. iv. Palsgrave gives "Kempe eele," without any French word.

<sup>1</sup> The kenet is mentioned in the "Maystere of the Game; c. xij. of rennyng houndis. There ben also rennyng houndes, some lasse and some moor; and þe lasse byn clepid kenettis, and þes houndes rennen wel to al maner game, and þei servene for al game; men clepin hem heirers, and euery hounde þat hæþ þat corage wil falle to be an heirere of nature with litel makyng," &c. Vesp. B. XII. f. 65. From this passage it might be supposed that harriers were originally so termed as being well adapted for close pursuit, and not from their being specially used in hunting the hare. Roquefort gives "harier; presser, harceler, poursaier." In "Dame Julyans Bernes doctryne," in her Boke of Hunteynge, it is said, "Thyse ben the names of houndes. Fyrste there is a Grehoun(de), a Bastard, a Mengrell, a Mastif, a Lemor, a Spanyol, Raches, Kenettys, Teroures, Butchers houndes, dunghyll dogges, Tryndeltaylles, and pryckeryd currys; and smalle ladyes popees that bere awaye the flees, and dyuers smale fawtes." Sign. e. ij. vº. ed. 1496. Roquefort gives "chienet, chenet; en bas Lat. chenetus," as signifying a little dog; and the term occurs in the satirical Anglo-Norman poem, descriptive of the lady of the XIVth cent. and her dogs, who, as it is said, "plus ad cher un kenet ke nul roche hou tor." Rel. Antiqu. i. 155.

In the ancient romances the kenet is mentioned as used in the chase of the deer, and the wild-boar. See the descriptions of the hunting parties of King Arthur and his knights, in the Anturs of Arther, st. iv.; Avowyng of King Arther, st. vi. ed. Robson, pp. 2, 60. They here appear to have been led in couples, and used with the bounds called raches, and berselettes, besides greyhounds. It seems, therefore, that they were the smaller dogs, which served to find the beast of chase, and on that account kenet is here rendered reperarius. Venaticus is rendered in the Ortus "a spaniel." "A kenit, caniculus." CATH. ANG. See also Syr Gawayn and the Grene Knyzt, line 1701, ed. Madden. Palsgrave gives "kenet coloure, ventré." and it appears from Leland that 20 miles was accounted as a kenning, probably, as the extreme distance within ordinary sight. In the North, according to Brockett, half a bushel is called a kenning.

<sup>1</sup> In the Mayster of Game it is said of the Roe, "They haunte in strange hattes of wood, or in stronge hellys, and sometyne in earres, and comonly in hie contrées." Vesp. B. xii. f. 32, b. John Crane, of Norton Subcoars, Norwich, bequeathed to his wife, in 1484, "all the londs, meys, marysses, alderkars," &c. in Norton. Transcripts from Registers at Norwich, Harl. MS. 10, f. 195, b. Camden, in his Remains, under Surnames, explains ear as signifying "a low waterie place, where alders do grow, or a poole." Ear signifies in Norfolk, according to Forby, a wood or grove on a moist soil, generally of alders. Brockett gives ear, flat marshy land, or a small lake. So likewise Leland, in his description of the N. Riding, says, "there is a praty ear or pole in Bishop's Dale." Itin. v. f. 116. He speaks repeatedly of "low medowes, and morisch ground ful of earres." Itin. i. f. 40, 66, 74. In Lord North's Household Book, 1512, a warrant is given for taking swans from the earre of Arrom, in the lordship of Lekinfild, Yorkshire. See Jamieson v. Carse, and Kerss. Compare ALDYKKYR, in the Promptorium. Su. G. kaerr. Isl. kaer, palus.

"Wipouten kirtelle or kemse, saue kouerchief alle hare vis."

See Coer de Lion, 1031. Chaucer, in the Man of Law's Tale, calls it a "kercher," and alludes to the usage that the widow should conceal her face with the "coverchefe," as so frequently seen on sepulchral effigies. Wife of Bath's Prol. 6171. The kerchief was formed of silk, erape, or any thin tissue, which, when necessary, was rendered stiff by starch. See STANCHE for kyrcheys. The material termed "plytes" seems to have been imported from Flanders or Germany. Isabella Belgrafe bequeaths, in 1401, "iij. peces plait, videlicet ij. de serico, et j. de kryspe;" and in 1402 the wife of a tanner at York mentions her "placola de threde; ij. placola de eipres, et j. lampas volit." In the will of Isabella de Wyleby, 1415, she devises "flamenclene de kryspa; j. plait, de baroud; j. flamenclene de Purpura; flamenclene de Rouges," &c. and to the nursery women of Baby Castle, where she died, "rotulum de placola de caton." Testam. Ebor. i. 20, 29, 383. The material called plites is named in the Comptotes for the collection of the subsidy on importations to Hull, 1400: "Miiij. plamuel cor"

<sup>1</sup> "Cironomon (a keruere) mensis, lectis assistit aleptis (a surgyone, or a chamber-leyne)." Distignus, Harl. MS. 1602, f. 113. The functions of the trencheator, or éuyer trenchant, at the table of the sovereign or noble, were regarded as of an honourable nature, and regulated by prescribed ceremonial. The details thereof may be learned from the Household Ordinances of the English Court, published by the Ant. Soc.; the ceremonial of the inthronization of Abp. Neville, 1466, Leland, Coll. vi.; the order for the government of a nobleman's house, 1605, Archæol. xiii. 315, and similar documents. At the coronation of Henry IV. the office of carver was claimed by the Earl of Somerset, half-brother to the King, in right of his earldom of Lincoln; and on ordinary occasions the office was discharged by Bannerets, or Knights bachelors, who were called Knights of chamber, or, in their absence, by the Knights of household. See Liber Niger Edw. IV. Househ. Ord. 32. The Lords Henry Neville and Clinton were the chief carvers at the court of Henry VIII. 1526; and at all times the office seems to have been held by men of rank, and was conferred by patent. See the Treatise de scissurâ ciborum, et servicio dominorum diversis temporibus, Sloane MS. 1986, t. Hen. VI. especially the chapter de cultellis domini, in the Treatise de officiariis in curiis dominorum, which has been edited by Mr. Halliwell for the Percy Society, Boke of Curtasye, p. 28. The minor details of the craft are given in the Boke of Kerving, W. de Worde, 1508. "Karuer afore a Prince, Escoier trenchant. I kerue as lordes karuer dothe at his table, le trenché. I put the towel aboute a karuer or a seruer's necke, that shall serue a greate man at his table, le encolle la touaille." PALSG. The proceeding to which allusion is here made was conducted with ceremony, and was termed arming the carver; see Lel. Coll. vi. 7; Archæol. xiii. 332. At certain times both the carver and sewer performed their services kneeling on one knee, as represented in the illumination which exhibits the death of Earl Godwin at the table of Edward the Confessor, Vitell. A. xiii. engraved in Strutt's Regal Antiquities, plate 2.

<sup>2</sup> Pelliris appears to have been a helm of leather, which was called also a palet, a word occurring in the Promptorium. By Ugutio it is explained to have been "galea ex corio vel pelle," to which, in the Ortus, is added, "Anglice, a helme of lether. Galerus, a coiffe of lether." Ib. Sir W. Langford, in 1411, bequeaths to his son a "haberton," and a "ketill hatte," which is considered by Sir S. Meyrick to have been identical with the visored capeline, or steel hat, represented in Crit. Enquiry, ii. pl. 48. It would appear from the Promptorium that the kettle hat was exclusively formed of leather; it is, however, probable that the name was likewise given to the chapel de fer, or capellus ferreus, used from the time of Edw. II. until the XVIIth cent. the form being at all times nearly the same, and from the wide projecting brim bearing much resemblance to a caldron. It is, however, certain that armour of leather was silvered over to give it the appearance of metal, and it is highly probable that coir-bouilli, which supplied defences of a very serviceable nature, and more commodious than plate armour, was extensively used. The form of the kettle hat, at the period when the Promptorium was compiled, may be seen in the drawings in Rous' Life of Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, Julius, E. iv. Strutt's Horda, vol. ii.

<sup>3</sup> "A kidde, ubi fagott." CATH. ANG. "Kyldde, a fagotte, fulorale," PALSGr. Ray gives kid, a faggot, among North-country words; it is likewise noticed in the Craven and Salopian Dialects. Gouldman gives it as synonymous with taggot; and Skinner as a word in use in Lincolnshire, as it were "fasciculus ligni cadui."

<sup>4</sup> Kedge, brisk, budge, hale and lively. Suff. Ray and Moore. Kedgie, Caigie; Jamieson. Forby gives kick, signifying in Norfolk a novelty or a dash; and kicky, showy. Both words are given in a like sense by Jamieson. "He's in high kick," is a proverb in the Craven Dialect. Compare Su. G. kaeck. Germ. keck, Isl. kjaekr, audax, animosus.

The expression "genimina viperarum," Vulg. Luke iii. 7, is in the Wicliffe version rendered "kindelyngis of edbris." In the Mayster of Game, Vesp. B. "The hare shall kendllyll on the harth-stone, My dere son, than byld thy hows of lyne and of stone."

In the St. Alban's Book mention is made of "a kyndyll of yonge cattes." Palsgrave gives the verb to "kyndyll as a she hare or cony dothe, whan they bring forthe yonge. A conny kyndylleth every moneth in the yere, porte des p̄tis." Skinner gives the word as used in relation to rabbits, and derives it from Ang.-Sax. cennan, parcere. See Craven Gloss. v. Forby states that kernel signifies, in Norfolk, a grain, as "a kernel of wheat, a kernel of salt." The archaic use of the word, as denoting grain, appears in the Ortus: "Granum, Anglice corne, a kurnel. Granellum, graynes, or a lytel kurnel. Granino, to borionne or kurnell. Grano, i. gravis implere, to kurnell." <sup>1</sup> It would be scarcely possible to define the garments, varied according to the fashion of the day, from the Ang.-Sax. cyrtel, tunica, to the kirtle of crimson velvet provided amongst the Parliament robes of Edward VI., to which this appellation was successively applied. It denoted garments worn by both sexes; R. Brunne speaks of the Empress Maud as taking flight from Oxford "withouten kirtelle or kemse," p. 122; Chaucer describes the "kirtell of a light waget" as part of the smart attire of Absolon, the parish clerk; Miller's T. 3322. Walter de Bruge, canon of York, bequeathed in 1396, "j. gownam, cum j. curtill, et j. capucio." Test. Ebor. i. 210. The kirtle, as female attire, seems to have been a close-fitting garment, as appears in the description in Sir Launfal of the two "gentyll maydenes—ilasced smalle, jolyf, and welle;" and Rob. Henrysoun, l. Hen. VI. says, in the Garment of good Ladies,

" Her kirtle should be of clean constance, Lacit with lesum love."

John Payn relates in his letter to his master, John Paston, that in Cade's rebellion his wife's dwelling was attacked, and the mob "lefte her no more gode but her kyrtyll and her smook." Paston Lett. i. 62. As worn by men, the kirtle seems generally to have been a short garment, and closely girt; but the "kirtell de rouge tartarin," which formed part of the state robes of the Knights of the Bath, was full and long-skirted. "A kirtelle, ubi a cote. A cote, tunica, tunicella." CATH. ANG. "Kyrteill, a garment, corpsset, surcot, cotelette." PALSG. "Kyrteill, cottron." Boke to lerne French, Pynson. See Strutt's Dresses, ii. 238, ed. 1842; Douce's Illust. of Shakespeare, Hen. IV. part ii.; and Nares.

<sup>2</sup> In the Wicliffite version this word is written "cos, cosse," Luke xxii. 48. R. Brunne uses the verb "cussed;" see also R. Glouc. p. 15. In the North it is still pronounced cus, or kuss; see Craven Dial. and Brockett. A.-Sax. cos, osculum. Compare cus, p. 111.

In the earlier Wicliffite version, Deut. xxxiii. 22, is thus rendered: "To Dan he seith, Dan, keetlyng of a lyon (catulus leonis, Vulg.) shal flowe largely fro Basan." Palsgrave gives the verb to "kyttell as a catte dothe, chattonner. Gossyppe, whan your catte kytelleth, I praye you let me haue a kytlynge (chatton)," "Chattonner, to kittle, or bring forth young cats. Catler, to kittle as a cat. Faire ses petits, to whelp, kittle, kindle, farrow," &c. cote. In an Herbal, the date of which is perhaps contemporary with the Promptorium, it is said that there are two species of hemlock, "tame and wilde. The 2 spice is cowh ynowh, to mykel, saf fore pore mennys eldyng, and childus pleyng; þey callen it þe grete homeloc; the stalkes stonden whit and ser euerygere. In some contre it is called kex, in some contre wodewhistel." Arund. MS. 42, f. 23. Eldyng here signifies fuel; see EYLDYNGE, above, p. 136. GOULDEN. Holland, in his version of Pliny, B. xxv. c. 7, says that the stem of gentian "is hollow as a kex," and void within; and of line or flax, B. xix. c. 1, that "the long buns of the stalkes—will serve very well to maintaine fire under kills and leads." Shakespeare speaks of "hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, lurs; the proverb, as dry as a kex, as hollow as a gun or as a kex, are common; and the word is still used provincially. See Brockett, Craven, Hallamshire, Salopian, Wiltshire Glossaries, &c. "Kexes, kaxes, or kixes, a Fr. G. cigue, utrumque a Lat. cicuta." SKINNER. Bunne, given here as synonymous with kyx, is so given likewise previously, p. 55; where BUNKYDE, the reading of the MS., appears to be erroneous: the King's Coll. MS. gives Bunne, kyx, but possibly a kid or faggot of buns may be intended. This word occurs in the later Wicliffite version, Isai. i. 31. "And þoure strengthe schal be as a deed sparcle of bonys (either of herdis of flex);" in another MS. "bones (eifer of herdis)," where three of the MSS. give "stobil," and the earlier Version "sparke of a flax top (facilla stopa," Vulg.) Ang.-Sax. bune, pistula.

MS. by the first hand, Isai. i. 31 is thus rendered: "And þoure strengthe schal ben as a gnast of a flax top (facilla stopæ, Vulg.) and þoure werk as a sparcle (scintilla)," where the corrected reading of the ordinary copies, instead of "gnast," is "deed sparke," in the later version "deed sparcle." "Lichinum, gnaiste or knast of a candell. Lichinus, gnast of þe candyl." MED. "Lichinus, candell weyke." ORTUS. In the Winch. MS. this word not only occurs in its proper place, but is repeated at the end of the letter K after the word KUNY, as follows: "KNASTE, or gnaiste off a candel. Moco. Versus: Est nasi moco, candelæ sit tibi moco." This was perhaps a marginal addition, misplaced by the transcriber. Compare Dan. gnist. Swed. gnista. Icel. gneisti, scintilla.

<sup>2</sup> In W. Thorpe's recital of his examination by Abp. Arundel, 1407, he states that when charged with having preached heresy at St. Chad's, Shrewsbury, he made answer, "As I stood there in the pulpit, busying me to teach the commandment of God, there knilled a saering bell, and therefore mickle people turned away hastily, and with noise ran fro towards me;" this circumstance called forth the expression which had been construed into heresy. "I knolle a belle, le frappe du batant." PALSG. Ang.-Sax. enyllan, campana signum dare. Bp. Kennett remarks that in Yorkshire a passing bell is called "a sawl-knill, from Ang.-Sax. sawl, anima, and enyll, campane pulsatio." Lansd. MS. 1033.

<sup>3</sup> Tyro is explained in the Catholicon to be novus miles, noviter electus ad militium; but implied, perhaps, more properly, the novice in arms, who sought occasions for warlike exercise at home and abroad, until his approved prowess should entitle him to the honour of knighthood. See Ducange, the Memoirs of St. Palaye, and other writers on chivalry. Scarcely any of the ancient Romances afford a more graphic and stirring picture of the education and adventure of the Tyro than the life of le petit Jehan de Saintrè, written about the period when the Promptorium was compiled. The practice of wandering on the uncertain quest of adventure was by no means laid aside when the novice had won his spurs. "Knight of adventures, chevalier errant." PALSG.

be derived from Ang.-Sax. cnepp, gegum, and denotes any protuberance, as a button, a bud, or the head of a sore. "Knoppe of a payre of beedes, kepppe. Knoppe of a cuppe,

The term seems here to signify a little cook. In the vision of P. Ploughman, line 4371, it had been supposed to have this meaning; but Mr. Wright, in his Glossary, suggests that it implies some kind of meagre food, as a small cock, which, by comparison with Turnam. of Tottenham, Anc. Poet. ii. 24, and Heywood's Prov. pt. i. c. xi. seems highly probable. "Coquine, a cockney, simperdecockit, nice thing." COŶ. "A cockney, niais, mignol, caillette. A waspish cockney dame, guespine." SHERW. "A cockney, or child tenderly brought up: mammothreptus, vinciolus, pedagogum, delitiæ pueri," &c. GOULDM. Tusser uses the word in this last sense, as given in the Promptorium: speaking of the nursery, and defects of early training, he says, in his Points of Huswifery,

"Some cockneys, with cocking, are made very fools, Fit neither for 'prentice, for plough, nor for schools."

See the note on the word COKNAY, p. 86; and Fuller's Worthies, London.

<sup>4</sup> See the note on CUKSTOKE, p. 107, where the reading cukstolle, according to the other three MSS. is probably more correct. The following observation occurs amongst Bp. Kennett's Coll. Lansd. MS. 1033: "A gonging stool, a ducking stool, or cucking stool, called in Domesday cathedra stercoris, properly a gonging stool, gong stool, or gang stool. Sax. gong stole, sella familiaris, a close stool." That such was sometimes its form is proved by the engraving in Boys' Hist. of Sandwich, which exhibits the cucking-stool and wooden mortar used there for the punishment of scolds; see pp. 500, 785. In a satire on the evil government of the times of Edw. II. it is said, in reference to the corrupt dealings of the assisours, (Polit. Songs, ed. Wright, 315.)

“The pilory and the cucking-stol beth i-mad for noht.”

It seems also to have been called thewe, as in the Plac. in Ilia, apud Cestriam, 14 Hen. VII. cited by Blount, it is recorded that George Grey, Earl of Kent, claimed in his manors of Bushton and Ayton, to punish offenders against the assize of bread and ale, “per tres vices per amerciamenta, et quartâ vice pistores per pilloriam, bracia-tores per tumbrellum, et rixatrices per thewe, hoc est ponere eas super scabellum vocatam a cucking stool.” In cases where fine was substituted for the cucking-stool, as a punishment, the lord became liable to the forfeiture of his manorial liberties, as in the case of the Dean of Lincoln, in 1384, who fined transgressors of the assize of bread and ale, in certain of his manors in Derbyshire, whereas “puniendi sunt per pilloriam et tumbrellum, et non per amerciamenta;” for that offence, and the deficiency of pillory and tumbrel, his liberties were seized, and forfeited into the King’s hands. Pat. 8 Ric. II. The tumbrel seems to be occasionally mentioned as distinct from the stool, and sometimes as the same mode of punishment, and from the examination of the stool and its carriage still preserved at Warwick, it is obvious that the two might be used either singly or together, according to local usage, and the nature of the offence. An extent of the manor of Marham, in Norfolk, taken about the commencement of the XVth cent. states that W. Beleth, who held the chief manor, claimed “habere libertatem in furch, tumbrell, thewe, emendacionem forisfacture pistorum, brasiatorum, mensur, galone, weyf, et stray;” and that the Abbess of Marham enjoyed the like liberties. Orig. Roll, in the possession of Sir Thomas Hare, Bart. In the XVth cent. the punishment of the cucking stool was still fully in use: by the statute 3 Hen. VIII. c. 6, as the penalty of fraudulent practices by carders or spinners of wool, the offender was to be “sett upon the pillorie or the cuckyngstole, man or woman, as the case shall require.” Stat. of Realm, iii. 23. In Mr. Beesley’s Hist. of Banbury will be found several notices regarding the pillory, “kockestoll,” and tumbrell, in use at that place as late as the reign of Elizabeth. Harrison, who wrote his description of England about 1579, says in the chapter of sundry kinds of punishments, “scolds are ducked vpon cucking stooles in the water.” “Cucke stole, selle à ribaudes.” PALSG.

“Quod tho this sely man, I am no labbe, Ne, though I say it, I n’am not lefe to gabbe.” Miller’s T. 3506.

Compare the Dutch labben. Belg. lapperen, to blab, or gossip. Labb, Dialect of Exmoor.

“The lord, of hus lachesse, and hus luther sleuthe,
By nom hym al that he hadde.”

See also line 4973. Chaucer says in the Persone's Tale, “Then cometh lachesse, that is, he that whan he beginneth any good werk, anon he wol forlete and stint it;” and uses the adjective “lache,” sluggish or dull; Boec. B. iv. Gower observes that the first and chief point of sloth is “lachesse,” which has this property, to leave all things in arrear. Conf. Am. B. IV. See Jamieson, v. Lasche. Palsgrave gives the verb “I latche, I lagge, I tary behynde my company, Je tarde, and Je targe.”

<sup>2</sup> To latch, signifying to seize or catch, is a verb the use of which occurs in R. Brunne, p. 120; the Vision of P. Ploughman, 1279; Crede, 934; Cov. Myst. p. 29, &c. Chaucer speaks of a “nette or latch,” set by Love to snare birds. In Will, and the Werwolf it is used in the sense of embracing:

“Certes Sire þat is soþ, sede Will'm þanne,
And lepes liȝtli him to, and lacches him in armes.” p. 163.

See also p. 25. In Arund. MS. 42, f. 17. b, it is related how the wood of aloes is obtained, which grows on the mountain tops, near a lake beyond Babylon, and falling into the water, either from age and decay, or blown by the wind, the “folk þat dwellen in þat countre, or nere, casten nettys, or oþer sleyȝtes, and lacceyn it, and so it is had.” Palsgrave gives the verb “I latche, I catche a thyng that is throwen to me in my handes or it fall to the grounde, Je happe. If I had latched the potte betyme, it had nat fallen to the grounde.” Forby gives to latch as used in Norfolk in this sense; and Brockett states that it is still retained in the Northern dialect. Ang.-Sax. læccan, prehendere.

<sup>3</sup> Cithara is rendered, in the Medulla, “a harpe,” in the Ortus “a lewte;” and in the latter occurs “cithariso, to syng with a harpe.” LAY HARPE seems here to denote the instrument in its use as an accompaniment to the voice. Thus Chaucer says,

“Thise old gentil Britons in hir dayes
Of diuers auentures maden layes,
Rimeyed in hire firste Breton tonge
Which layes with her instrumentys they songe.” Cant. T. 11,622.

See Tyrwhitt's observations on the derivation of the word lay. Ang.-Sax. ley, canticum. As, however, sambuca is defined by Papias, and other glossarists, to have the sense of “cithara rusticæ,” lay harp may, possibly, imply the instrument used by the vulgar. The instrument called symphonia, according to Uguccio, was a tamburine.

<sup>1</sup> Laking, signifying a child's toy, is a word still used in the North, as Brockett observes. In the Towneley Mysteries, Mak tells the shepherds that his wife brings him every year "a lakan," and some years twins. The verb to layke, Ang.-Sax. lakan, ludere, and the substantive layke, disport, occur frequently in the old writers. See Sir F. Madden's Glossaries to William and the Werwolf, and Gawayn; SeuyŃ Sages, 3310; Minot, p. 10; Vision of P. Ploughm. line 341; Towneley Myst. pp. 96, 102, 141. The local use of the verb is noticed in the Cheshire and Craven Glossaries, as likewise by Brockett. Skinner remarks that it is commonly heard throughout the North, a circumstance which he is disposed to attribute to the Danish occupation. Dan. leeger, ludo. Bp. Kennett gives "Leikin, a sweet-heart, Northumb. ab Ang.-Sax. leian, placere." Lansd. MS. 1033.

In the poem entitled the Huntynge of the Hare, it is related how the hare escaped, "and feyr toke up a falow ley," no more to be seen by her pursuers. Ed. Weber, 152. Layland, according to Bailey, is fallow or unploughed land, and there are many places which have thence derived the name. Ang.-Sax. ley, terra incultus, novale. Forby observes that in central Suffolk a coarse old pasture is called a lay. Compare SOMYR layland. Novale.

<sup>3</sup> Compare DYSPREYSYŃ, or lackyŃ'. "Vituperium, blame or lacke." ORT. To lakk, depravare, dc. ubi to blame." CATH. ANG. In the Vision of P. Ploughman, Envy says that when his neighbour met with a customer, whilst he sold nothing, he was ever ready "To lye and to loure on my neghebore,

And to lakke his chaffare." 2736.

Chaucer uses the word precisely in the same sense, in Romance of the Rose. Pabyan, in "Lenuoy" of his viith part, excuses himself as unable to adapt his Chronicle to the liking of every reader,

"And speccially to suche as haue theyr delyghtynge
Ener wyth dyselaunder moste wryters to lakke,
And barke whyle they maye, to sette good wryters a backe."

"I lakke a thyng, I fynde faute at it, Je trouve à redire. I lakke, I wante a thyng, J'ay faulte. I lakke a penne." PALSG. Compare Dutch laecken, minuere, deterere. Lydgate uses the substantive lack in the sense of dispraise. See his poem to put in remembrance of virtue and vice, of the diligent and the indolent. (Minor Poems, p. 84.)

Gigging of shields, with laniers lacing." Knight's Tale.

In Norfolk the lash of a whip is called the lanner, or lanyer, which in Suffolk denotes only the leather lash. See Forby, and Moore, v. Lanna.

<sup>4</sup> In the North to langel signifies to hopple, or fasten the legs with a thong. "Lanyels, side-lanyels, hopples for horses. Yorksh. Dial. p. 44." Bp. Kennett, Lansd. MS. 1033. See Grose, Craven dialect, and Jamieson. To langle, in Norfolk, implies to saunter slowly, as if it were difficult to advance one foot before the other.

<sup>1</sup> The word lap, according to many ancient writers, signified the skirt of a garment. Thus G. de Biblesworth says,

"Car par devant avez eskours (lappes), Et d'en costé sont vos giroons (sidgoren.)"

It denoted likewise the hinder skirt, as in Seuyn Sages, 899, where the herdsman is described as picking haws, and filling with them first his "barm," and afterwards "his other lappe." In Emare also, v. 652, Egayre, being cruelly exposed with her child, conceals her face "with the hynther lappes" of her large and wide sureote. See moreover Amis and Amiloun, 988; Chaucer, Clerk's Tale, 8461. In the Life of St. Dominic, in the Golden Legend, it is related that on a certain occasion, when the friars had little bread, there came two young men, "whiche entred into the refectorye or fraytour, and the lappes of theyr mantells y<sup>t</sup> henge on theyr necke were full of breed," which they gave to the Saint. "Lappe, or skyrt, gyron." PALSG. "Gubinus, a garment with two lappes, wherof the one cast backward," &c. ELYOT. Ang.-Sax. lappa, jumbria. The word is also used, by analogy, to denote the lower part of the ear: "A lappe of y<sup>e</sup> ere, cartilagio, legia." CATH. ANG. Norman says that "yf the lappe of the eare wax redde, there is somewhat amysse. Labo rubescere aliquot peccatum est."

"To lappe, volvere, conuolvere. To lapp in, intricare, involvere. A lappyng in," &c. CATH. ANG. This verb is used most commonly in the sense of wrapping, as a garment. See Cheuelere Assigne, p. 101; Wiel. version, Math. xxvii. 59; Gower, Conf. Am.; Cov. Myst. p. 125. In the Wicliffite version it is written repeatedly "wlappe," as in Isaiah xxxvii. 1, "Whanne Kyng Ezechie hadde herd, he to rent hise clopis, and he was wlappid in a sak (obvolutus est sacco." Vulg.) See also Job, iii. 5; Mark, xv. 46. John Paston writes to his wife, about 1490, for a plaster of her "flos unguentorum," to be applied to the knee of the Attorney-general, to whom he was under obligation: and bids her write "whethyr he must lape eny more clothys aboute the playster to kepe it warme, or nought." Paston Letters, v. 346. To bi-lappe signifies to surround, or close in. Sir Amiloun in a dream saw his brother Amis "bilappid among his fon." Amis and Amiloun, 1014. Hampole uses the compounded word "umbilape" (Ang.-Sax. umbe, ymb, circum), as in the Prick of Conscience, where he says amongst the pains of hell, that the "vermyne salle ymbelape baim all abowte." Harl. MS. 6923, f. 94. Latimer, in his Vth sermon on the Lord's Prayer, says, "Note here that our Saviour biddeth us to say, us; this us lappeth in all other men with my prayer." Palsgrave gives the following phrases: "Lappe this chyld well, for the weather is colde, envelopes bien, &c. Lappe this hoode aboute your head, affablez vous de ce chapeau." "Plisser, to plait, fould, lap up, or one within another, whence also to plash." COTE. To lap is still used in the sense of wrapping, in Warwickshire. Compare WAPPYŃ, or hyllyn wythe clothys: Tego; and WAPPYN, or wyndyn a-bowte yn clothys: Involco.

<sup>2</sup> "Horreum est locus ubi reponitur annona, a barn, a lathe. Grangia, lathe or grange." ORTUS. "Orreum, granarium, lathe." Vocab. Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. "A lathe, apotheca, horreum." CATH. ANG. This word is used by Chaucer, Reve's Tale, 4086. Harrison, speaking of the partition of England into shires and lathes, says, "Some as it were roming or rouing at the name Lath, do saie that it is derived of a barn, which is called in Old English a lath, as they conjecture. From which speeche in like sort some deriue the word Laistow, as if it should be trulie written Lathistow, a place wherein to laie vp or laie on things." Description of England, Holinshed's Chronicle, i, 153. Skinner gives Lath as most commonly used in Lincolnshire, and derives it from to lade, because it is loaded with the fruits of the earth. Bishop Kennett notices it also as a Lincolnshire word, and gives the derivation Ang.-Sax. gelaðian, congregare fruges. Lansd. MS. 1033. It is retained in the dialect of the North. See Hallamshire Glossary.

<sup>4</sup> The verb to lete of, signifying to take account of or esteem, is used by R. Branne, as in the phrases, "þer of wel he lete—þei lete of him so lite." Langt. Chronicle, p. 45. In the Vision of P. Ploughman to lete occurs repeatedly in the same sense, as in Ang.-Sax. letan, putare, admittere. Compare the provincial use of the verb to lete, or leeten, to pretend or make a show of, given by Junius and Mr. Wilbraham as retained in Cheshire. See also Jamieson, v. Lait and Leet.

<sup>1</sup> Compare HALY, or behatyð, Ecosus. "Huly, peevisch, fretfull. When a man is not easily pleased, or seems captious and froward, he is said to be huly, and a huly man; Dandelum" Bp. Kennett, Lands. MS. 1033.

<sup>2</sup> Selden remarks that acquaintance with the Latin tongue was considered such an attainment that Latinista, Latinator, or Latinarius, became significant of an interpreter in general. Hugo Latinarius is mentioned in Domesday. Latinier, as Roquefort explains it, signified commonly an interpreter, truchement, or dragoman. He cites the Roman de Garin, where mention occurs of a Latinier, whose attainments extended to speaking "Roman, Englois, Gallois, et Breton, et Norman." Sir John Maundevile, speaking of the routes to the Holy Land, says of the one by way of Babylon, "And alle weys fynden men Latyneres to go with hem in the contrees and fetherre beyonde, in to tyme that men conne the langage." Voyage, p. 71. In R. Coer de Lion, 2473, 2491, K. Alis. 7089, the words latymer, latimeris, as printed by Weber, have the same sense.

<sup>3</sup> Latten, a hard mixed metal much resembling brass, was largely used in former times, especially in the formation of sepulchral memorials. The precise nature of its composition does not appear to have been accurately ascertained. It is repeatedly mentioned as a metal of a bright and golden colour; Chaucer uses the comparison that Phœbus "hewed like latoun." Gower speaks of it as distinct from brass, as it seems properly to have been, although occasionally confounded therewith, and even with copper. "Auricalem, i. fex auri, laten or eoper." ORTUS. "Auricalem, Anglice goldefome; Electrum, latyne." Harl. MS. 1002, f. 149. "Latyn metall, lata." PALSG. Latten was probably obtained from Germany. In the covenants for the workmanship of the effigy of Richard Beauchamp, 1454, by Thos. Stevyns, copper-smith of London, the metal is described as "latten," or "Cullen plate," (Cologne?) the value of which was 10d. a pound. The remote derivation of the word is very obscure: it was probably adopted in England from the German Letton, or French laiton. Compare Dutch latteen, Isl. laaton, Ital. ottone, lattice, Span. latón, laton. Plate tin had also the appellation latten. See Forby and Brockett, and the remarks of Nares and Jamieson.

Caxton says, in the Boke for Travellers, "Beatrice the laundre shall come lethir after diner, so gyue her the lynnyn clothis." W. Thomas, in his Rules of Ital. Grammar, gives "lauandaia, a launder that wassheth cloathes." See Jamieson, v. Layndar.

<sup>2</sup> The precise nature of this weapon, as likewise the etymology of its name, is still questionable; it was probably adopted in this country from the French, but the derivation from the name of an Eastern or Moorish weapon, called zagaye, arzégaye, or assugay, seems more reasonable than that which has been proposed, lance aiguë. That it was a missile weapon is apparent from Guill. de St. André, who wrote about the middle of the XIVth cent. and speaks of throwing "dardes, juvelots, lances-gayes;" but Guiart seems to mention the "archegaie" as a thrusting weapon, rather than a missile. Carré gives a comparison of the Lance-guaye, or archegaie, of the Franks, with the Oriental zagaye, and considers them as missiles. Armes des Français, p. 198. From "the Rime of Sire Thopas," which describes him as going forth to ride with "a launcegay" in his hand and long sword at his side, it appears to have been a weapon carried for occasional defence, rather than a proper part of equipment for war or the tournament." Cant. T. 13,682. The stat. 7 Ric. III. c. 13, confirming the stat. of Northampton, 2 Edw. III. c. 3, against riding, or appearing in public assemblies, with force and arms, ordains "que desormais nulle homme chevache deinz el Roialme armee—ne oversque longeay deinz mesme de Roialme; les queux longeayes soient de tout oustez deinz le dit Roialme, come chose defendue par nostre seigneur le Roi, sur peine de forfaiture de dix lancegaies, armures, et autres hermes quelconques." Compare stat. 20 Ric. II. c. 1; Stat. of Realm, ii. 35, 92. In the Rolls of Parl. V. 212, there is a petition for vengeance by the widow of a person who had been murdered in 1450 by a gang of men "arraied in fourme of werre, with jakkes, salettez, longe swerdes, long-debleofs, boresperes, and other unmerciable forbodon wepons," one of whom "smote him with a launcegay thorough the body, a fote and more." In 1459 there were found in the Great Hall of Sir John Fastolfe, at Caistor, Norfolk, cross-bows, a boarspear, a target, "xxj. speris: Item, j. launcegay." Archeol. xxi. 272. <sup>1</sup> Camden, in his Remains, explains laund as signifying a plain among trees. Thus in the account of the hunting expedition, Ipomydon, 353, the Queen's pavillion was pitched at a "laund on hight," whence she might command a view of all the game of the forest. Compare Vision of P. Ploughm. 5028, 10, 218; Chaucer, Compl. of Black Knyght; Shakespeare, Hen. VI. pt. i. III. 1. In Cullum's Hawsted a rental dated 1509 makes mention of "9 acres in campo vocato le lawnde." "Ladugo, a parke, a huntyng place, or a lawnde." ORTUS. "A lawnde, salus." CATH. ANG. <sup>3</sup> "A lese, laxa." CATH. ANG. "Lesshe for a grehounde, lais, lesse." PALSG. In the note on the word FUTE, p. 183, it was suggested that the term feuterer might thence be derived; Sir F. Madden likewise, in his Glossary to Gawayn, had explained "Vewter," Gawayn and Grene Knyzt, 1146, as denoting the huntsman who tracked the deer by the fewte or odour. It seems probable, however, that the derivation given by Blount, Bp. Kennett, and other glossarists, is more correct. The Gaulish hounds, of which Martial and Ovid speak, termed vertugi, or veltres, appear to have been greyhounds, and hence the appellations veltro, Ital. vautre, vaultre, Fr. Welter, Germ. The Promptorium gives GREYHOUNDE, veltres, p. 209; and from the practice of leading these dogs in couples, the leash appears to have received the name veltra, here given, a word unnoticed by Ducange. The "ministerium de Veltraria" is mentioned in Rot. Pip. 5 Steph. In the Household Constitutions of Hen. II. Liber Niger Seace. i. 356, amongst the stipends assigned to the different officers connected with the chase, is the statement, "Feltrarii, unusquisque iij d. in die, et ijd. hominibus suis; et unicuique leporario ob. in die." Blount has cited the Tenure of Setene, in Kent, by the service of providing one veltrarius, to lead three greyhounds, when the King should go into Gascony, as appears by Esch. 34 Edw. I. and Rot. Fin. 2 Edw. II. where the word is written vautrarius. Various details regarding the duties of the "foutreres," and their fee, or share of the produce of the chase, will be found in the Mayster of Game, Vesp. B. XII. f. 99, 104, b. Of the dogs termed veltres, veltrahi, vertugi, &c. see further in Ducange, v. Canis. At a later time the vaultre was a mongrel hound, used in hunting bears and boars, as Nicot observes, "C'est une espèce de chien entre allant et mastin, dont on chasse aux ours et sangliers." The feuterers appear to have been at a later period termed "children of the lesh;" they were four in number in the household of Henry VIII. 1526, as appears by the Ordinances of Eltham.

The appellation was used to denote those who professed any branch of the healing art, as well as the ladies, who frequently supplied the place of the regular practitioners. Amongst the innumerable treatises of the ancient herbalists few afford a more curious insight into the practices of leech-craft, about the period when the Promptorium was compiled, than Arund. MS. 42. The author, who had a herb-garden at Stepney, states that he "knew a lady, þe lady Sowche, þe beste Godys leche of Brythlond, in women," and recounts her practice in preparing a nostrum, termed "nerual." f. 22. The fourth, or ring finger, was called the leech finger, from the pulsation therein found, and supposed to be in more direct communication with the heart, as in the tract attributed to Joh. de Garlandiâ, under the title of Distigius. Harl. MS. 1062, f. 115, it is said, "Stat medius (medyle fyngeure) medlio, medicus (leche fyngeure) jam convenit (accordyt) cyro." In another line the fingers are thus enumerated: "Pollex, index, medius, medicus, auricularis." CATH. ANG. See Brand's Popular Antiquities.

<sup>1</sup> The term leche, which occurs frequently in connection with ancient cookery, had two distinct significations. It denoted such viands as it was usual to serve in slices, probably for the sake of convenience, before the general use of forks. "Lesche, a long slice, or shive of bread, &c." COTE. The nature and variety of dishes thus to be served may be learned from Harl. MS. 279, where recipes are given for 64 different "Leche vyaundys;" and where the meaning of the verb to leche is evident from such directions as the following: "Brawn in comyte—leche it fayre wyth a knyff, but not to Jinne, and þan gif þou wolt þou mygt take þe ryblys of þe bore al bare, and chete hem enlongys þow þe lechys, an so serue forth a leche or to in every dysse." f. 27, b. Compare the use of the verb to "leshe," Forme of Cury, pp. 36, 56, 57; "yleshed," p. 18. Compare the "leyched beefe" as ordered for supper in the dietary of the Princess Cecill, with the item "beefe sliced," in the Ordinances of Eltham, Househ. Ord. pp. *38, 181. R. Holme gives this signification, iii. p. 78, and another sense, namely, "a kind of jelly, made of cream, isinglass, sugar, and almonds," p. 83. "White leach, gelatina amigdalorum." BARET. "Leche made of flesshe, gélée." FALSG. One lechemeat appears to have formed an ordinary portion of every course, as may be gathered from the bills of fare at various great festivities, Harl. MS. 279, f. 44, and from the accounts of the installation feasts of Abp. Nevill, 1466, Lel. Coll. vi. 6; of Abp. Merton, 1478, Arnold's Chron. 239; and the coronation banquet of Elizabeth, Queen of Hen. VII. 1487, Lel. Coll. iv. 226. The various kinds of "leche" named in these documents appear to have ranged with "suttleties," such as "leche Lumbart gylt, partie gelly, leche porpul, damaske, reiall, ciprus, rube, Florentine," &c. See further the Roll of Cookery appended to the Household Ordinances; the Liber cure cocorum, Sloane MS. 1986; and Cott. MS. Jul. D. viii. Skinner interprets brawn lechyd, which is mentioned in the St. Alban's Book, as signifying "aper medicatus, aromatis conditus;" as if the term had some connection with Aug.-Sax. kece, medicus.

LECHERY (lecherye, K. lechchery,

<sup>1</sup> An instance of this use of the verb to lead has been already given in the note on CARTYN', p. 62. Sir John Maundevile uses it in the sense of carrying, generally, as in the following passage: "That arke or hueche, with the reliques, Tytus ledde with hym to Rome, whan he had seomfyted alle the Jewes." Voiage, p. 102. In the Liber Niger Regis Edw. IV. an ordinance is given that no seller of wheat for the use of the King's house "be compelled to lede or carrie his wheete, pourveyed for this household, towards the Kinges garner," more than the distance of 10 miles at his own cost. Household Ordin. p. 68. A municipal regulation, cited in Beesley's Hist. of Banbury, p. 233, prescribed in 1564, "that no maner of person shall feche, lede, or cary any donge or mucke furthe of the towne, but betwene the fyrst day of May and the feest of Seint Michell th' Arekangell." Among the trades enumerated in the order of the pageants of the play of Corpus Christi at York, 1415, occur "water leders." Drake's Hist. App. "I lede a man or thyng aboute a towne vpon a hardell, or after a horse, le traque." PALSG.

<sup>2</sup> The marked distinction made by the author, in this and several other instances, between the Saxon character þ and the equivalent expression th, is deserving of notice. It is probable that the reading of the MS. HERTYS LETHYR, or lethyr, as it has been printed, p. 233, is faulty, and the following correction may be suggested,—lepyr, or lethyr. Ang.-Sax. leðer, corium. Bp. Kennett gives "leer, leather, hence Bandaleers. Leer, corium." Kilian. Lansd. MS. 1033.

<sup>2</sup> Lixivium, ms. and s. Ugutio gives lixen, aqua, whence "Lixivium, quia sit ex aqua et cinere." Arund MS. 508. The early romances and Chaucer's poems afford evidence that yellow or light-coloured hair was in especial esteem. The fashion prevailed at a very early period, as appears from the writings of Tertullian, who reproaches Christian women with an affectation of seeking to resemble in this respect those of Germany and Gaul. The art of producing this colour artificially was termed crocophanta, and is condemned by St. Cyprian and St. Jerome as a sinful vanity, and by Galen as prejudicial to health. At the time when the Promptorium was compiled this fashion continued in full force, and numerous artificial expedients had been devised for supplying the defect of nature, by means of some vegetable decoction or lie, whereby, with subsequent exposure to the sun, the hair might be made to assume the desired colour. The herbals and medicinal treatises of the XVth cent. indicate a great variety of processes which were adopted for colouring or preserving the hair. In Arundel MS. 42, f. 82, the decoction of madder is recommended to make it red, and the juice of sage applied in the hot sun to make it black; f. 77, b. The virtues of the lily are commended for making hair to grow again, and the oil of hazel nuts as infallible against "mowtyng of here," f. 59; and an effectual depilatory "for-doyng here" is given at f. 35. The strangest substances were in request for such purposes: thus in Jul. D. viii. f. 79, b. "Lixivium de cinere fini columbi" is recommended as an approved remedy against the falling of hair. The extent to which such artificial aids were made available at a later period appears from the numberless prescriptions given by Gerarde, Parkinson, Langham, in his Garden of Health, 1579, and similar writers. See the satirical observations of Bulwer on this subject, in the Artificial Changeling, 1653. Horman, who wrote at the commencement of the reign of Hen. VIII, says that "maydens were sylken callis, with the whiche they keepe in ordre theyr heare made yelow with lye; comas lixicio rufatas sive rubulatas. Women change the naturall colour of theyr heare with crafty colour and sonnyng. Some cherisse theyr lussis of heare with moche kymbeyng and wesshyng in lye. He maketh his heare yelow because he wolde seme lusty; ratilat capillos ut vegetus appareat. His heare was lyght ambre." Vulgaria, 1519. To such practices allusion is perhaps made in the Promptorium by the word NEED WASCHYNGE, which will be found above, p. 232. "Lee, lixivium, lorium." CATH. ANG. Palsgrave gives only "lye to wasshe with, lessine." Aug.-Sax. leah, lixivium.

<sup>2</sup> It has been affirmed that leprosy was brought into Europe by the erusaders; in the Anglo-Saxon vocabulary, however, which has been attributed to Ælfrie, occurs the word "leprosus, hreotlig, oððe licðrowera." Jul. A. ii. f. 123. In the Assisa de Foresta, which is of uncertain date, but is assigned by Manwood to 6 Edward I. it is enacted that if any beast of chase be found wounded or dead, "cara mittitur ad domum leprosi, si qua prope fuerit," or otherwise given to the infirm and poor. Statutes of Realm, i. 241. In Lynn, where the Promptorium was compiled, there were several spital houses, or hospitals of lepers. The most ancient, the hospital of St. Mary Magdalen, was founded in the reign of Stephen by Petrus Capellanus for a prior and twelve brethren, of whom three were to be lepers. See Parkins' account of Lynn, Blomf. Norf. iv. 608. Mæckarell, in his History of that town, p. 255, mentions a bequest to the leprous men and women in 1408; and Parkins records the devise of Stephen Guybon to every house of lepers about Lynn, in 1432, namely at West Lynn, Cowgate, Herdwyk, Setchelithe, Mawdelyn, and Geywode. The number of these charitable institutions in England was considerable; permission had been granted by Pope Alexander III. in 1179, that leprous persons, being excluded from all communion with their fellow-men, might, wherever

<sup>1</sup> The double signification of the verb to lere occurs in most of the old writers; R. Glouc., R. Brunne, and Minot use it in both senses; Chaucer uses it in that of learning, Frankel. <sup>3</sup> The lectern is not named amongst the appliances of sacred use enumerated by Ælfric, Cottonian MS. Julius, A. ii. f. 126, b.; in the Regula Bened. mention, however, occurs of the reeding-seamol. The various uses of the lectern in cathedral or collegiate establishments may be gathered from the ancient rites of Durham, in which it appears that there was a pelican "lectern" of brass at the north side of the high altar, where the Epistle and Gospel were sung; a second lower down in the choir, in the form of an eagle of brass, used at mattins, or other times when the legends were read; and there was also a "letterne" of wood, like a pulpit, standing and adjoining to the organ over the door of the choir. It seems highly probable, as Mr. Rudge supposes, that the white marble desk discovered in 1813 near the site of the abbey church of Evesham, formed part of the lectern that was erected about 1218 by Thomas de Marlberg, at that time sacrist, and subsequently Abbot, according to the following record: "Picit lectricium

This lectern is represented in the Archæologia, xvii. pl. 23. A lectern of marble, resembling such as is quarried in Derbyshire, exists at Crowle in Worcestershire; it appears to be a work of the XIIth century. Another beautifully-sculptured specimen is preserved in the ancient abbatial house at Wenlock, Salop. In the former instance alone, the arrangement whereby the desk was supported on small columns may be ascertained. Of the moveable lecterns of a later period, numerous specimens have escaped the ravages of the XVIth and XVIIth centuries. Carved lecterns of wood exist at Bury, Huntingdonshire, date about 1300; at Ramsey; Swancombe and Lenham in Kent; Hawsted in Suffolk; and in many other churches. Those of brass are mostly of the XVth century, or later date. At Rouen Cathedral an ancient lectern of iron may be seen, which, being hinged together like a faldistorium, and furnished with a socket for a candle on one side, might be folded up when not in use, and laid aside, so as not to encumber the area of the choir. The lectern was adorned with a covering, frequently termed the "des-cloth," of rich material conformable to the suit, or complete vestment, of which it formed a part. In the Inventory of the Church of St. Faith, in the crypt at St. Paul's, 1298, is mentioned "pavens de pal ad lectricum." In the Wardrobe Book, 27 Edw. I. amongst the furniture and ornaments of the royal chapel, occurs "unum mantergium cartum, satum de auro et serico, pro lectrone." p. 352. John of Gaunt bequeathed, 1399, a richly-embroidered vestment of white satin to the high altar at St. Paul's, the "couverture pour la lettrure" forming an item in the description, as likewise in that of a vestment of red cloth of gold, wrought with gold falcons, devised by him to the "Moustier de N. Dame de Nichol." Testamenta Eboracensia, i. 227, 228. "Letricum, lectrum, et legium pro eodem, scilicet pro pulpito; et dicuntur a lego, a pulpyt, or a lectrone." ORTUS. <sup>1</sup> The etymology and precise meaning of this word are exceedingly obscure; it is used by Chaucer in the tale of the Cambridge scholars who came to the Miller of Trumpington to have their grain ground, and left their horse under a pent-house or outbuilding, instead of putting him into the "la'he;" the miller, to play them a shrewd trick, slipped off the bridle, and let the horse run.

"He looked up and doune, till he had yfound

The clerkes horse, there as he stood ybound,

Behind the mill, under a lessel."

Reve's Tale, 4059.

Tyrwhitt prints the word "levesell," and its meaning here is less obscure than in a passage in the Person's Tale, where it again occurs. Chaucer defines the difference between pride in the heart of man, and pride shown in external show and costly array: "But nathelesse, that one of these spices of pride is signe of that other, right as the gawe leuesell at the tavernne is signe of the wine that is in the seller." Speght, who had here consulted the Promptorium, explains the word as signifying a bush, or a hovel, which is repeated by Skinner, with the suggestion that it may be derived from the French "lois, vepres, cingulto, additâ terminâ, ell." This derivation seems little to the purpose. According to Cotgrave lois, or lags, are trees left as marks in cutting a copse wood. Tyrwhitt in his notes says confidently that the word is derived from <sup>2</sup> The lightning, or any sudden gleam of light, is frequently termed by the old writers levene, a word which has been derived from Ang.-Sax. hlifan, rutilare. See Lye, and Jamieson, v. Levin. R. Brunne, describing the engines devised by Richard Cœur de Lion, to throw wild fire and stones, at the siege of Acre, says that "as leuen þe fire out sehete." Langt. Chron. p. 174. Compare Havelok, 2690; Ywaine and Gawain, Ritson, Metr. R. i. p. 17; Cant. Tales, 5858; Gower, Conf. Am.; Townel. Myst. pp. 39, 116; Cov. Myst. 156. Fabyan relates that in 7 Hen. 1, "was sene an vneouth starre, whyche nyghtly appered at one howre, and continued so by the space of xxv. days; and fore agaynst that, oute of the Eest parte, appered a great leuyn or heme of bryghtnes, whyche stretched towarde the sayde starre." In the Vocabulary, Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. are given "Fulgor, fulmen, lewenynges. Fulgurat, (it) lewnes." Palsgrave gives the verb "it leueneth as the lyghtenyng dothe, it esclere. <sup>3</sup> The verb to leve is used in this sense by R. Glouc. p. 30; it occurs repeatedly in the Vision of P. Ploughman. See also Chaucer, Tale of Melib.; Gower, Conf. Am. iii. Ang.-Sax. lyfan, concedere, leafnes, venia.

<sup>4</sup> Clergy, as it has been remarked in the note, p. 81, signifies erudition, precisely according to the sense of the French clergie; and the word is thus to be understood in the term "benefit of clergy." See Barrington's observations on statute 4 Hen. VII. The use of the word in this acceptance is, however, a striking evidence of the general ignorance that prevailed amongst all classes, churchmen alone excepted, so that the community might be classed under two great divisions, clerks and "lewde," R. Glouc. p. 471; or "iered and lewed," R. Brunne, p. 8. It is needless to cite instances of the frequent use of the word lewd in its primitive signification by the old writers. <sup>2</sup> Culusus is given only in the Harl. and Winch. MSS. The word is not noticed by

Harl. MS. 1002, f. 131, "lentesco, to wax lethy." "Lethi" occurs in the Vision of P. Ploughm. 5979, and is explained by Mr. Wright as signifying hateful, but its precise meaning is not obvious. In a Treatise on Obstetrics, of the later part of XVth cent.
Add. MS. 12.195, particular instructions are given "at what age a maydyn may vse of drwery," and it sets forth the evils arising from the anticipation of the age of puberty,
"for trewly and sche vs þat deduyt or þat tyme, on of þes iij. thynges, or elles alle schalle ones lymmes, souple." PALSG. Lathy is given by Moore as a Suffolk epithet, signifying thin in person. ANG.-SAX. liN, tenor. Compare LYTIE, hereafter.

<sup>4</sup> Leik, Havelok, 2793, and liehe, Vision of P. Ploughm. signify a living body, as in line 5599, where Dame Studie is described as "lene of here, and of liehe both;" it is so used likewise in K. Alis. 3482. This is perfectly in accordance with the signification of the ANG.-SAX. etymon lice, corpus, a body, either living or dead. The latter seems, however, to have been the more usual sense of the word. Chaucer, in the Knight's Tale, 2960, speaks of the "liche-wake" at the burning of the corpse of Arcite. In the North the custom of watching the corpse, termed lyke-wake, is not entirely laid aside: see Brockett, v. Lake-wake, and Jamieson, v. Lyk-waik. It is by corruption termed late-wake; Pennant, Tour in Scotl. i. 112. The term is evidently derived from ANG.-SAX. lic, cadaver, and wacece, vigilia. A full account of the usages and abuses customary on these occasions will be found in Brand's Popular Antiqu. and Ducange, v. Vigilia. In the Invent. taken 1421, church of St. John Baptist, Glastonbury, printed by Warner, are mentioned "iij. lyche bells;" in the Invent. of St. Dunstan's Canterbury, 1500, termed "bells for mortuaries." G. Mag. vol. viii. N.S. In the ordinance of Abp. Peckham, 1280, which sets forth the articles to be provided by the parishioners, these bells are designated as "campane manuales pro mortuis." Wilk. Conc. ii. 49. Of the local use of the term lich-gate, signifying the outer gate of the cemetery, beneath which the corpse is placed, whilst awaiting the officiating minister, see the Glossary of Architecture, Cheshire and Shropshire Glossaries. In the West, the path by which the corpse is carried to the grave is known as the leach-way; in Cheshire it is called the lich-road. Coles gives "lich fowles, carcass bird, scritch-owls, night-ravens."

<sup>2</sup> LEDER, MS. Lither, or lidder, has in the North the signification of idle or sluggish. In the Vis. of P. Ploughman the expression "luther sleuthe" occurs; and "lithere" in King Estmere. One of the evils of the times enumerated in the curious lines, Roy. MS. 7 A. VI. f. 38, b, is that "Lex is layde, and lethyrly lukes." Tusser speaks of the unprofitableness of the "litherly lubber." Lyndsay uses the word "lidder" in the sense of backward or shy, which approaches more nearly to that assigned to it in the Promptorium. "Desidieux, idle, lazie, lither, slouthfull. Ignave, lazy, lither," &c. cotg. "Lither, figurd, festard, faineant, nice, oisif, paresseux." SHREW. See Brockett, v. Lither, and Jamieson, v. Lidder.

<sup>3</sup> In the description of the march of Alexander's army the poet describes the various classes of which the host was composed, high and low, knight and knave,

"Mony baroun, ful wel y-thewed, Mony ledron, mony schrewe." K. Alis. 3210.

Weber explains the word ledron as signifying here a leper, or a mean person. Skelton uses the word, in the poem entitled Slaunder, and false detractions.

"But my learning is of an other degree,
 To taunt them like lyddrons, lewde as they be."

"Laideron, somewhat ugly, pretty and foule." cotg. It must, however, be observed that as Lidorus has not been found in the Latin glossarists, it cannot be asserted positively that LYDERŌN is to be taken in this sense in the Promptorium.

<sup>4</sup> The term "lithes," occurring in Havelok, 2163, is explained by Sir F. Madden as

It is still retained in the North, according to Brockett; but Jamieson states that in Scotland various species of grass growing in mossy ground are called ling. In Arund. Brockett gives liniel as a word still in use in the North. Compare Lingan and Lingel, which have the like meaning; Jamieson. "Lyngell that souters sowe with, chayfros, lignier. Lynger to sowe with, poulcier." PALSG. This term denotes also a theng or strap. <sup>2</sup> Forby gives "link, a sausage; we call two together a lach of links. In some counties a far more correct expression is used, a link of sausages." Links have the same meaning in Suffolk, and Ray speaks of black-puddings, or links, as a term used in the South. See ROPS, North C. words.  With crotchettes and loupys sett on lyour." Sloane MS. 1986.

That is, with hooks and eyes sown to the binding of the bed-furniture. Exp. in England, presented to the Roxburghe Club by B. Botfield, Esq. p. 486. In the Wardrobe accounts of Edw. IV. edited by Sir H. Nicolas, a delivery appears in 1480, for the office of the beds, of 55lb. "corde, and liour for liring and louping" of certain hangings of arras. Walsingham relates that the Commons made a rising in the Eastern Counties, in 1380, at the time of Jack Straw's rebellion, their leader in Norfolk being "quodam tinctore de Norwico, cujus nomen erat Johannes Litterestere," who called himself King of the Commons, and was beheaded by the Bp. of Norwich: ed. Camd. 263. In the Paston Letters, iii. 424, mention occurs of another Norwich "lyster." The word occurs also in the Towneley Mysteries. At Lynn, where the Promptorium was compiled, the continuation of Broad Street, otherwise Websters' Row, is called Lister Gate Street. See Jamieson.

<sup>2</sup> The reader, who occupied the second place in the holy orders of the Church, is probably here intended. In the Vision of P. Ploughman mention is made of "lymitours and listres," 2747. Mr. Wright, however, supposes that the word signifies deceivers.

<sup>3</sup> The term "liser" occurs in the Vision of P. Ploughman, 2891, in connection with the "drapiers," or weavers of cloth. "Lisière, the list of cloth, or of stuffe; the edge, or hem of a garment." COTG. Palsgrave gives also "Lyste of clothe, lisière. I lyste a garment, or border it rounde aboute with a lyst, ie beude d'une lisière. I have lysted my cote within to make it laste better, am nat I a good housebande? Lyste on a horse backe, raye. Lyste of the eare, mol de l'oreille." Compare SCHREDE, and STEMNYNE, or stodul, or stothie yn a webbyshonde (in a webbys eend, s.) Forago.

<sup>5</sup> In the other MSS. the words from LYTHE to LYHTESUMNESSE, given above, pp. 333, 304, are placed here. They are not, however, in all cases written in conformity with this position in the alphabetical arrangement, being mostly in the King's Coll. MS. written Liht, Lihtsum, &c.; in Sir Thos. Phillipps' MS. Lyth3, or bryghtnesse, &c.; and in the Winch. MS. Lyth, Ly3th, Lyth, Lyhtsum. These irregularities are to be attributed to the second hand, who, writing by ear, vitiated the spelling of the original MS.

<sup>5</sup> A livery denoted whatever was dispensed by the lord to his officials or domestics annually, or at certain seasons; whether money, victuals, or garments. Even in the Saxon times there appears to have been a distribution of this nature, the gafol-hwitel, saga veltigalis, of the Laws of Ina, which was, as Spelman observes, a kind of livery. The term chiefly denoted external marks of distinction, such as the roba estivalis, and hiemalis, given to the officers and retainers of the Court, as appears by the Wardrobe Book, 28 Edw. I. p. 310, and the Household Ordinances. The practice of distributing such tokens of general adherence to the service or interests of the individual who granted them, for the maintenance of any private quarrel, was carried to an injurious extent during the reigns of Edw. III. and Rich. II. and was forbidden by several statutes, which allowed liveries to be borne only by menials, or the members of gilds, &c. See Stat. of Realm, ii. pp. 3, 74, 93, 156, 167. The "livrée des chapelains," often mentioned in these documents, was an hood or tippet, which, being of a colour strongly contrasted to that of the garment, was a kind of livery much in fashion, and well adapted to serve as a distinctive mark. This, in later times, assumed the form of a round cap, to which was appended the long tripipium, which might be rolled around the head, but more commonly was worn hanging over the arm, and vestiges of it may still be traced in the dress of civic livery-men. The statute 7 Henry IV. expressly permits the adoption of such distinctive dress by fraternities, and "les gentz de mesters," the trades of the cities of the realm, being ordained with good intent; and to this prevalent usage Chaucer alludes where he describes five artificers of various callings, who joined the pilgrimage, clothed all "in o livere of a solempne and grete fraternite." Prof. v. 365. By the same statute, lords, knights, and esquires were allowed, in time of war, to distinguish their retainers by similar external marks, the prototypes of military uniforms. In the metrical paraphrase of Vegetius, entitled "Of knyghthode and Batayle," Cott. MS. Titus, A. xxiii. f. 22, it is said that ancient usage had ordained three kinds of signs in an army, vocal, semivocal, as trumpet or clarion, and a third which is noiseless,

"And mute it hight, or dombe, as is dragoun,
Or th'egil, or th'y mage, or the penoun,
Baner, pensel, plesaunce, or tufte, or creste,
Or lyuereys on shilder, arm, or breste."

In this passage the collar is evidently one of the liveries to which allusion is made. It was much in fashion at the time when the Promptorium was compiled. See COLLER, or lyuerey, p. 87; and the curious dissertations on collars of the royal livery, by Mr. J. G. Nichols, Gent. Mag. 1842. Much information respecting external distinctions, as the original of uniforms, will be found in the Traité des marques nationales, by Beneton de Peyrins. Thus in the Custumal of Evesham it is directed that for a whole year after the decease of an abbot or monk, his entire "conredium" should be allowed, to be given to the poor, for the good of his soul." Mon. Ang. i. 149. The term "livere—liueray" occurs in this sense of a daily pittance for food, Amis and Amiloun, 1640, 1659; in the Household Ordinances the daily allowance of meat and drink received by each individual is commonly termed his livery, and the livery cupboard was the buffet appointed in apartments of greater state to receive this provision at certain times. The term corrody implied also more particularly a kind of pension, either for life or in reversion, with which a monastery was charged, granted by the founder to a kinsman or retainer, or by the house for service rendered, or some valuable consideration. The Sovereign instituted corrodies in favour of royal dependants, and Spelman observes that 119 monasteries, charged with one, and in some cases two such corrodies, were, as it may thence be supposed, of royal foundation. The injurious practice by heads of monasteries, who made traffic in such pensions for their own advantage, was restricted by the Constitutions of the Legate Othoboni, in 1267, which forbade them to sell and charge their establishments with "liberationes seu corrodia," especially when granted in perpetuity. See further the notes of Joh. de Aithona, Constit. Legatini. p. 150, ed. 1679, and Ducange, v. Conradium.

"The wynde stode as her lust wore,
The wether was lythe on le." S33; Ritson, Metr. R. ii.

In the Seuyñ Sages, 2517, when the caldron, which was discovered boiling with seven "walmes," had been stilled by the directions of Merlin, it is said that the water "becom faire and lithe." In the sense of soft to the touch lythe is used by Chaucer, Dream, 953; House of Fame, i. 119. "Lyth, or sotylle, agilis, levis, efflexus." Vocab. Roy, MS. 17 C. xvii. "Letle, delyner of ones lymmes, suppl. Lythenesse, delyuernesse, suppl." PALSg. "Mol, soft, supple, tender, lithe, limber." corg. Bishop Kennett gives lithe as used in the North in the sense of soft or flexible; see likewise the Craven Dialect, and Jamieson. The compound word lith-wake is also used there; Ang.-Sax. liðwace; Gloss. Ælfr. Jul. A. ii. Bishop Kennett cites Davies' Rites of Durham, 105, where it is related that the body of St. Cuthbert was found uncorrupted, flexible, and "leath-wake;" and remarks "potius lith-wake, a Sax. lið, membrum, et wace, flexibilis. A lith-wake man, a clever, nimble fellow. Durham." Lansdowne Manuscript, 1033. Compare the Craven Dialect. "Lith wayke, flexibilis." CATH. ANG. The word occurs in the Hymn to the Holy Ghost, by W. The verb to lithen, Ang.-Sax. liðian, lenire, is used by Chaucer, Troil. iv. 754; in Arund. MS. 42, f. 42, b. one of the virtues of bardana is stated to be that "it lyþyn nayles, þat ben scabble and sore;" and of "sqylle—if it ben etyn with hony, it lythþ wombe," f. 53, b.

preferred, as expressive of the burden conveyed by him. Lodesman generally signifies the leader of a ship,—a pilot, as the term is used by Chaucer, Legend of Hipsiphile, and by Gower. In the Wardrobe Book 28 Edward I. p. 273, a payment appears "pro vadis unius lodemanni conducti pro nave guidandâ," apparently bringing supplies to Karlaverok. "Lodesman of a shippe, pilote." FALSG. "Lodesman, a guide, perductor." GOULDM. See Jamieson, v. Ledisman. In the statute 31 Edward III. c. 2, a fishing vessel is named, termed a "lode ship."

<sup>1</sup> An evident distinction is here made between LOKE, meaning apparently the leaf of a door, or shutter, and lock of a door, in its ordinary sense. In both cases the term is taken from Ang.-Sax. loc, claustrum, sera. In the Register of W. Curteys, Abbot of Bury, now in the possession of Edm. Woodhouse, Esq. an Indenture is preserved, dated 1438, for the performance of certain carpenter's work in the chapel of St. John at Hille, Bury, by John Heywod, of Ditton, Camb. in which the following clause occurs: "And to eythir dore of the same chapel he shal do maken a louke of estriche borde competent." It seems here to denote what is commonly called the wicket, or hatch of a door; valva is rendered in the Medulla "a wyket;" and this signification is more clearly defined in the Ortus: "Valva est ostium, vel porta parva in majori existens." In the Promptorium wicket is given as synonymous with a little window.

<sup>2</sup> In the Latin-English Vocabulary, Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. under Nomina vermium, f. 55, b, is given "Multipes, lugdorre." Jamieson states that the Lumbricus murinus, Linn. a worm which is dug out of the sand, and used for bait, is called a lug. The name dor denoted a beetle or chafer, but more properly a drone. Ang.-Sax. dora, facus.

<sup>3</sup> "Apostaticus, i. perversus, a renegade or a Lollarde. Hereticus, errans in fide, an heretyke, or Lollarde." ORTUS. "Lollar, heretique." The sect of Lollards appears to have arisen in Germany as early as 1309, according to Hoeseuius, and the rise of Lollardy in this country during the reign of Richard II. was probably due to the influence of his alliance with Anne of Bohemia. Knyghton states that the "Wycliviani, qui et Lollardi dicti sunt," flourished and increased about 1387; and gives a summary of their peculiar opinions. Ed. Twysden, col. 2706. The derivation of the name has been much discussed; some with Chancer, Lyndwode, and Fox tracing it to lolium, as comparing them to the darnel among the wheat—others to the name of an early promoter of the heresy. The suggestion, however, of Dueange, that it was taken from Lollaerd, massitator, seems most reasonable. Gower speaks in his Prologue of "this newe secte of Lollardyde."

<sup>1</sup> In the Harl. MS. this word seems to denote only a sudden or boisterous noise; but the King's Coll. MS. gives Dynche, and Pynson's edition Dunchinge, or lunchinge, as signifying tuccio, percussio. In Norfolk, according to Forby, to lunge signifies to lean forward, to throw one's whole weight on anything, to thrust with full force, possibly from the French allonger. Mr. Wilbrham gives lungeous, ill-tempered, disposed to do some bodily harm by a blow or otherwise. Cheshire Glossary. See also Grose; Herefordshire and Shropshire Glossaries. A violent kick of a horse is termed a lunge. Dunsh, signifying a shove or punch, is a word used in Suffolk and North Britain. See Moore and Jamieson. <sup>1</sup> Compare LURCARE, lurco; and see the note on LURDEYNE, p. 317. Verstegan defines a losel to be "one that hath lost, neglected, or cast off his own good, and so is become lewde, and careless of credit and honesty." Names of Contempt, p. 262. Lorel has been derived from Ang.-Sax. leoran, as likewise losel from leosan, perdere. Both occur repeatedly in the Vis. of P. Ploughman; Chaucer, in his version of Boethius, B. i. renders "perditissimum—lorell," and uses the word in the Wife of Bath's Prolog. 5855, and Plowman's Tale, ed. Speght, 1601, f. 91. See also Ly beaus disconus, 259, "lorell and kaytyf." In Rich. C. de Lion, 1864, 1875, the French King speaks of the English as cowards and "losards." In the Boke of Curtesy, t. Hen. VI. the youth sitting at the table of a great man is admonished thus:

"Ne spit not lorely for no kyn mede,
Before no mon of god, for drede." Sloane MS. 1986, p. 21.

Holinshed terms Wat Tyler "a naughtie and lewd lozzell." Chron. iii. 432. Skelton uses the word "loselry," and both "lorrell" and "lozell" occur in Spenser, and other later writers. "Lorrell or losell, fétart, loricart." PALSG. "Loricard, a luske, lowt, lorell, slow-backe. Maschefouyn, a chuffe, bore, lobcock, lozell; one that's fitter to feed with cattle, then to converse with men. Vastibousier, a lusk, lubber, loggarhead, lozell, hoiden, lobcock. Aufourd'hay Seigneur, demain singe ord, Prov. To day a goodly lord, to morow an ouglie lozell." COTG. "Lorel, or lossel, i. elown; also fraudulent." GOULDEN.

<sup>2</sup> Tooke considers this word as derived evidently from the past part. of Ang.-Sax. hlisan, celebrare: it is, however, more probable that it was taken from the French, los, loz, which seems to be always used in a good sense, whereas the English word signifies either praise or dispraise,—renown on account of vice, as well as of virtue. In the sense of praise it occurs, R. Glouc. p. 189; R. Brunne, p. 25; Vis. of P. Ploughm. 7164; Cant. T. 16,836; Gower, Conf. Am. In the Tale of Sir Gowghter, 186, it is said that, in consequence of his outrageous and sacrilegious acts, "his lose sprong ful wide;" see also the tale of the King of Calabria, Seuyn Sages, 1586; and Ritson, Met. Rom. ii. 2. Sir John Maundevile uses the word in the like secondary sense, "3e schulle undirstonde that in that time there weren iij. Herodes of gret name and loos for here crueltee." Voiage, 108. Chaucer uses the expression "name of badde loos," Test. of Love, i. 278. "Defamo, to mislose. Fama, a loos. Infamia, wikkud loos. Infamis, losud." MED. "Fama, good lose, or fame." ORTUS. Compare FAME, or loos of name, p. 148.

<sup>3</sup> Compare SPANGLE, or losangle (sic). Lorale. In the Ortus Lorale is rendered "a lorayne, a brydell," but lorum implies any strap or band of leather; and as at the period when the Promptorium was compiled the fashion of attaching pendant ornaments to the girdle and the baldrick, the reins and the trappings of horses, was singularly prevalent, it may perhaps be concluded that LOSANGE, or spangle, here denotes these decorations, which were occasionally, but not invariably, of a lozenge form.

<sup>2</sup> Brito observes that laxo signifies "licitari, imponere precium rei que venditur:—ponitur pro licitari, quia licitatores in foro venalia considerantes dicunt, hoc valet tantum." Summa Britonis, Add. Kennett gives "to lothe, to offer in sale, or allow a thing at such a price, as, I'le lothe it you for so much money; Cheshire. A.-S. laðian, invitare." Lansd. MS. 1033. Jamieson states that to low has the signification of to higgie about a price; according to the Craven Glossary it is used as an abbreviation of to allow, to grant or give. In the Townl. In the Paston Letters, V. 346, the following passage is found: "My lord Skalyſ hath made a lofeday with the p'or and Heydon, in alle materys except the matere of Snoryng," &c. "He is more redy to make a fraye, than a loue daye." HORM. "Loureday to make frendes, appointment." PALSg.

<sup>2</sup> The received derivation of this term is that suggested by Minsheu, from the French l'ouvert, the open turret or lantern on the roof of an house which permitted the escape of smoke. In the article on dialects in the Quart. Rev. lv. 373, the Icelandic lióri, foramen pinnaculi domus, is proposed as an etymon; the sort of cupola with a trap-door which, in the Northern countries, serves the double purpose of a chimney and a sky-light, is called in Norway liore, in W. Gothland liura. Lodium, a word unnoticed by Ducange, who gives only lucanar in the same sense, is explained in the Ortus as signifying "a louter; dicitur de luc et do, quasi dans lucem." In the Latin-English Vocab. Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. are given "Lodium lucare, impluviare, lower;" f. 27. "Fumarium, a chymney or a lovyre. Imbricium, a gotyre, or a lovyre." MED. MS. CANT. In the edition of the Ortus in Mr. Wilbraham's library, lucanar is thus rendered, "A sloghe, a potte, a louter." "A luvere, fumarium, fumerale, lucar, lodium." CATH. ANG. In a roll of purchases for works in the Royal palaces, 2—5 Edw. I. amongst the miscellaneous records of the Queen's Remembrancer, the item occurs repeatedly, "pro bordis ad louere cum corantis," &c. In the Treatise entitled Femina, MS. Trin. Coll. Cant. B. 14, 40, it is said in the chapter ad edificandum domos, that it is fitting to make a "good louter (lamueire) and wyndow:"

"Louer (amueire) and almarye (amcire) me haþ,
At þe louter fume goþ out.
þat en Fraunce ys amueyre namede, þat here louter ys apelyt, i. nominatus."

Horman says, "Moche of the showre fell into the louter (impluvium), but moche more into the barton (cavedium)." "Louer of a hall, esclère." PALSg. <sup>1</sup> Fabyan, in his Chron. part vi. c. 197, suggests the fanciful etymology of this term, which is likewise given by Boethius, in his Hist. Scot. published in 1526, lib. x. s. 20, and adopted by Verstegan, in his remarks on names of contempt, e. x. namely, that a Dane being quartered as a spy in every family in England, was, from his tyranny, called Lord Dane, "quhilk is now tane for ane ydyll lymmer that seikis his luyeng on other mennis laubouris," as Bellenden expresses it in his version. The immediate derivation is, however, evidently from the French; "Lourdin, lourdayne; blunt, somewhat blockish; a little clownish, lumpish, rude; smelling of the churle, or lobeoeck." COG. "Lourlein: idiot, lourdant, maladroit, sot; en bas Lat. Lurdus." ROQUEF. R. Brunne says that Sibriht, King of Wessex, when driven from his realm, "as a lordan gan lusk;" p. 9. The word occurs in the Vision of P. Ploughman, lines 12,278, 14,302; Townl. Myst. pp. 60, and 308. "A lurdane, ubi a thefe." CATH. ANG. "Lurdayne, lourdant. It is a goodly syght to se a yonge lourdayne play the lorell (loricarder) on this faycon." PALSG. "A lourdon, or sot, lurdus." GOULD. It denotes a vile person, a sot or blockhead, a clownish churl, or a sluggard. Andrew Boorde, in the Breviary of Health, 1573, quaintly observes at the close of his directions regarding fevers, "The 151 chapiter doth shew of an eyll feuer the which doth comber yonge persons, named the feuer lurden," with which many are sore affected now a days, from bad education, or natural habit. In the last case he pronounces it incurable, but offers the following nostrum: "There is nothing so good for the feuer lurden as unguentum barulinum, that is to saye, Take a stieke or wan of a yeard of length and more, and let it be as great as a man's fynger, and with it anoint the backe and the shoulders well morning and evening, and doo this xxj. dayes; and if this fever will not be holpen in that time, let them beware of wagging in the galowes; and whiles they do take their medicine, put no Lubberwort into their potage, and be(w)are of knauering about their heart; and if this will not help, send them to Newgate, for if you wyll not, they wyll bryng them selfe thether at length." In c. 262 he speaks also of "luskeshnes, brother to the feuer lurden." See Brockett and Jamieson.

Lutsenborgh, or Luxemburgh, a fact sufficiently evident from the word LVCEMBOR., LVSENBOR., or LYSEBYRGENSIS, forming part of the legend which occurs on many of these pieces. H. Knyghton thus records their importation in 1347: "Eodem anno defertur in Angliam per alienigenas et indigenas mercatores falsi moneta que lussheburue appellata est; unde apud Londonias multi mercatores et alii plures tracti sunt et suspensi, et quidam magno precio vitam redemerunt." Chron. Cott. MSS. Claud. E. iii. f. 253; Tib. C. vii. f. 152, v<sup>o</sup>. In the margin is written "moneta loysburnes." It appears by the Rolls of Parliament, vol. ii. 160, that early in that year (20 Edw. III.) a petition had been presented by the Commons, which set forth that merchants and others exported the good sterling coin, and "de jour en autre reportent diverses fauzes monnoies appellez Lusshebourues, dont la lievre poct estre achate par dela pur oyl souldz, ou pur meyns," with which the country was filled. The King's pleasure was that such offenders should be judged according to law, as "faux moncoeurs." In the year following the Commons again petitioned "pur ce qe la fauze monnoie de Lusshebourues encrest de jour en autre," an evil attributed to the infrequency and short duration of the sittings of the judges of assize, praying for "plus aspre remedie." Rolls of Parl. ii. 167. In 1351 these false sterlings are again mentioned in the petition that declaration should be made by the King as to what offences should be adjudged treason, of which one was the importation of false coin, "sicome la monnoie appellee Lusseburghe," or other resembling the coin of the realm, as fully declared in the Stat. 25 Edw. III. c. 2, where the word is written "Lucynburgh." Compare Rolls of Parl. ii. 239, and Stat. of Realm, i. 320. These fallacious monies are named in the Vision of P. Ploughman, which was composed, as it is conjectured, about 1362.

"As in lussheburwes is a luther alay,
And yet loketh he lik a sterlyng,
The merk of that monee is good,
Ac the metal is feble." v. 10,322.

In the Cant. Tales, which, according to Tyrwhitt, were written subsequently to 1382, allusion occurs to "Lusheburghes," as coins of base alloy; Monks Tale, v. 13,968: as likewise in Piers of Fulham, p. 128, ed. Hartshorne,

"No lusshebourues, but money of fyne assay."

It must be observed, that in Twysden's edition of Knyghton, as likewise in the printed text of the Rolls of Parliament, the term has been given as Lussheburne, apparently in consequence of its origin having been forgotten; it seems, however, evident that the true reading should be Lussheburue, which is merely a variation from Lussheburwe, or Lucynburgh. See further on this subject Ruding, i. 222; Snelling's Plates of counterfeit Sterlings, and the Blätter für Münzkunde, 1839. The import of the word Papirus in relation to base coin is obscure. It is found in the Winchester MS. only. The coins of the Byzantine emperors, called perpuri, and the Italian paparii, were monies of considerable value, but there was a base coinage in France during the XIVth cent. of pieces of bad alloy, called parpilloles. See Charpentier.

This is done either when bail has been refused, or when the cause of commitment is not properly bailable. Of the distinction between manucapere and balliare, see further in Spelman.

Les aracez de vn besagu (twybel.)*”

In the Vocabulary of names of plants, Sloane MS. 5, is given “Amarusca calida, Gall. aneroche, Ang. maithe;” in another list, Sloane MS. 56, “cheleye, i. mathe.” The camomile is still known by the appellation Mayweed; Anthemis cotula, Linn. Gerarde describes the “May weed, wild cammomill, stinking mathes, or mautthen,” Cotula fetida, and observes that the red kind grows in the west parts of England amongst the corn, as Mayweed does elsewhere, and is called “red maythes, our London women do call it Rose-a-rubie.” Ang.-Sax. magede, maȝða, chamemelum.

<sup>2</sup> “Collega, a make, or a yomanne.” MED. In the edition of the Ortus in Mr. Wilbraham’s library collega is rendered “a make, or a felowe.” This term, as used by Chaucer and other writers, has the signification of a mate, or fellow, a spouse, either husband or wife. It is said of the turtle dove in the Golden Legend, “When she hath lost her make, she wyll neuer haue other make.” See Jamieson. A.-S. maca, consors.

<sup>3</sup> The substantive a-cethe has occurred previously, p. 5, where the word has been printed A-CETHEN, a contraction appearing in the Harl. MS. over the final E, which, however, is probably erroneous. The word is thus used in the earlier Wicliffite version: “Now than ryse, and go forth, and spekyng do asethe to thi seruauantis;” in the later, “make satisfaccioun (satisfac servis tuis,” Vulg.) ii. Kings, xix. 7. In the later version it occurs in i. Kings, iii. 14: “Therefore y swore to the hows of Ieli that the wickidnes of hys hows shal not be doon a-seeth before with slayn sacrifices and gytis;” in the earlier, “schal not be clensid (expietur,” Vulg.) See also Mark xv. 15. “Asethe, satisfaccio. To make asethe, satisfacere.” CATH. ANG. “Satisfactio, (sic) to make a-sethe.” ORTUS. Chaucer, in the Rom. of Rose, 5600, rendered “assez —asseth;” and in the passage previously cited from the Vis. of P. P. the line is printed by Mr. Wright, “if it suffise noght for assetz,” where he explains the word as synonymous with the common law term, assets. Compare FULFYLLYN, or make a-cethe in thyng þat wantythe; p. 182.

Jamieson cites Douglas, who uses the word in the sense of evenly, or equally. Compare Ang.-Sax. macalic, opportunus; Belg. maklyk, easy. Sir Thomas Brown gives matchly as a Norfolk word; it is likewise given by Forby, and signifies exactly alike, fitting nicely; the modern pronunciation being, as stated by the latter, mackly. <sup>1</sup> This term denotes most commonly the disease in the legs of horses, as causing them mal andare, to go ill, according to Skinner's observation. Malandria, however, in mediæval Latin, as in French, malandrie, denoted generally an ulcer, a disease difficult of cure, as leprosy. See Ducange. "Malandrie, sickenesse, malandre, malandre, serot." PALSG. In a veterinary treatise, Julius, D. VIII. f. 114, the following remedy is given "for the Malaundres. Tac parroures of chese, and tac hony, and tempre hem to gedre, and ley hit on be sore as hot as þou may."

<sup>2</sup> "A male, mantica, involnerum." CATH. ANG. "Male, or wallet to putte geare or stuffe in, malle." PALSG. Horman says, "Undo my male, or boudget (bulga, hippopera, bulgula.)" The horse by which it was carried was termed a somer, or sompter horse, sommier. See SOMER HORSE, hereafter. In Norfolk the cushion to carry luggage upon, behind a servant attending his master on a journey, is still called a male-pillion.

<sup>3</sup> "Fornaculum, Fornacale, instrumentum ad opus fornacis, a malkyne, or a malott." MED. MS. CANT. "A malyne (sic), tersorium." CATH. ANG. "Malkyn for an ouyn, frorgon." PALSG. Holliband renders "Waudrée, the clout wherewith they clense, or sweepe the oven, called a maukin. Escouillon, an oven sweeper, a dafin." "A malkin, vide Scoven (sic). A Scovel or mauken, ligaculum, scopula. Penicillum, a bull's tail, a wisp, a shoo-clout, a maukin, or drag to sweep an oven." GOULDM. This term is still used in Somersetshire. It would appear from the Medulla that this word was also used as an opprobrious appellation: "Gallinacius, i. homo debilis, a malkyn, and a capoun." Forby gives maukin, as signifying either a dirty wench, or a scarecrow of shreds and patches.

<sup>4</sup> Compare BOWDE, malte-worme; p. 46, and BUDDE, flye; p. 54. In the Eastern counties weevils that breed in malt are termed bowds, according to Ray, Forby and Moore; the word is repeatedly used by Tusser. R. Holme says that "the Wievell eateth and devoureth corn in the garners: they are of some people called bowds." Acad. of Arm. B. ii. p. 467. The appellation is applied to other coleopterous insects. Gower compares the envious to the "sharnbudes kynde," which, flying in the hot sun of May, has no liking for fair flowers, but loves to alight on the filth of any beast, wherein alone is its delight. "Crabro, quedam musca, a gnat, or a sharnebode. Scarabeus, a sharne budde." MED. R. Holme mentions the "Blatta, or shorn bud, or painted beetle." Ang.-Sax. scearn, stercus. In Arund. MS. 42, f. 64, an insect is described which devours the young shoots of trees. "Bruk is a maner of flye, short and brodissh, and in a sad huse, blak hed, in shap mykel toward a golde bowde, and mykhede of twyis and þryis atte moste of a gold bowde, a chouere, oþer vulgar can y non þerfore." The name gold bowde probably denotes a species of Chrysomela, Linn.

<sup>1</sup> "Germinatus, commyn as malte." ORTUS. Harrison, in his Description of England, speaking of the making of malt, says that the grain is steeped, and the water drained from it; it is then laid on the floor in a heap, "until it be readie to shoote at the root end, which maltsters call commyng. When it beginneth therefore to shoot in this maner, they saie it is come, and then forthwith they spread it abroad, first thicke, and afterward thinner and thinner vpon the said floore (as it commeth), and there it lieth by the space of one and twentie dayes at the least." B. ii. c. 6. Holinsh. i. 169. R. Holme, among terms used by malt-makers, says that "the coming of barley, or malt, is the spritting of it, as if it cast out a root." Acad. of Arm. B. iii. p. 105. The little sprouts and roots of malted barley, when dry, and separated by the screen, are still called in Norfolk malt-cumbs, according to Forby. Bp. Kennett gives "Malt comes, or malt comings, the little beards or shoots, when malt begins to run, or come; Yorkshire." Lansd. MS. 1033. See Craven Glossary and Jamieson. Compare Isl. keima, Germ. keimen, germinare.

<sup>2</sup> The strange and superstitious notions that obtained in olden times regarding the mandrake, its virtues, and the precautions requisite in removing it from the soil, are recorded by numerous writers. In an Anglo-Saxon Herbal of the Xth cent. Vitell. C. iii. f. 53, v<sup>o</sup>, a representation will be found of the plant, at the side of which appears the dog, whose services were used in dragging it up. The account there given of the herb has been printed by Mr. Thorpe in his Analecta. Alex. Neccham, who died 1227, mentions it as if it had been commonly cultivated in gardens, which should be decked, as he observes in his treatise de naturis rerum, "rosis et liliis, solsequiis, molis et mandragaris." Roy. MS. 12 G. XI. f. 77. The author, however, of the treatise on the qualities of herbs, written early in XVth cent., who appears to have cultivated in his herbar at Stepney many botanical rarities, speaks of the "mandrage" as a plant that he had seen once only. He admits that as to any sexual distinction in the roots, "kynde neuere ȝaf to erbe þe forme and þe kynde of man: some takyn seere rootys, and keruyn swuche formys, as we han leryd of vpelonders;" Arund. MS. 42, f. 31, v<sup>o</sup>. The curious relation that he gives of his detection of an aged man, who kept in a strong chest a mandrake root, which brought him daily "a fayre peny," is a remarkable illustration of the credulity of the age. See further on this subject Roy. MS. 12 A. VI. f. 83, v<sup>o</sup>; Trevisa's version of Barthol. de Propr. B. xvij. c. 104; Bulleine's Bulwarke of Defence, p. 41; Browne's Vulgar Errors, and Philip's Flora Historica, i. 324. Singular representations of the "mandragolo" and "mandragola," executed by an Italian designer in the earlier part of the XVth cent., are preserved in the Add. MS. 5221, f. 125 and 129, v<sup>o</sup>. The dog drags up the moustrous root by a chain attached to its ancles, whilst his master stops his ears, to escape the maddening effects of the mandrake's screams.

in French, marches; and in Britain the terms "marches of Wales—the Northern marches," were still in use at no very remote period. Ang.-Sax. meorce, fines. See Kilian and Wachter. The verb to march, to border upon, is used by Gower; Sir John Maundevile also describes one course for the pilgrim to the Holy Land "thorgh the Almanyne, and thorghe the kyngdom of Hungarye, that marchethe to the lond of Polayne (quod continerunt est)." See Voiage, pp. 2, 50.

<sup>1</sup> It has been affirmed that the Mara was revered as a deity by the Northern tribes; in Britain it appears only to have been regarded as a supernatural being, the visits of which were to be averted by physical charms, such as the hag-stone, called in the North the mare-stane. Of the popular belief respecting the Epiattes see the curious passages printed by Mr. Wright in the Introduction to the Trial of Alice Kyteler; and Keysler, Ant. Sept. p. 497. Chaucer gives in the Miller's Tale, v. 3421, a singular night spell, to preserve the house from the approach of spirits, and "the nightes mare." "Night mare, goublin." FALSG. It was termed in French godemare, according to Cotgrave. Ang.-Sax. mara, incubus.

<sup>2</sup> "A margaryte stone, margarita." CATH. ANG. "Margery perle, nacle." FALSG. In Trevisa's version of Higden's Polych. B. i. c. 41, amongst the productions of Britain, are mentioned "muscles, that haue within hem margery perles of alle maner of colour and hewe, of rody, and reed purple, and of blewe, and specially and moost of white." Chaucer speaks of the precious "margarite perle," formed in a blue muscle shell on the sea coast of "the More Britaine;" Test. of Love, B. iii. In Arund. MS. 42, f. 12, v<sup>o</sup>, allusion is made to the supposed cause of the formation of "margery perle—produced in muscle, or cokle, from dew of heaven." In the Wicliffite version pearls are called "margaritis," Matt. vii. 6; xiii. 46. Horman observes that "margaritis be called pearles, of a mountayne in the see of Ynde, called Perimula, where is plentye of them."

<sup>2</sup> The martyrologium was, in the earlier times, the register of names of saints and martyrs, which served to bring each successively to the memory of the faithful, on the anniversary of his Passion. At a later period the term denoted, in monastic establishments especially, the register more properly called necrologium, or obituary, wherein were inscribed the obits and benefactions of those who had been received into the fraternity of the congregation, and whose names were thus in due course brought to mind, being recited day by day in the chapter, and suitable prayers said. The martyrology was termed also liber vitæ, and the memorial inscribed annotatio Regule, because it was generally annexed to the Rule, and connected therewith was the obituary, wherein the deaths of abbots, priors, and members of the congregation in general, were recorded. The martyrologium occurs next to the regula canonicorum, among the gifts of Bp. Leofric to Exeter, in 1050. The nature of the entries made may be seen by Leland's "thingges excerptid out of the martyrologe booke at Saresbyri," and at Hereford. Itin. iii. f. 64; viii. f. 79. A remarkable specimen of such a register is supplied by the Liber Vitæ of Durham, commencing from Xth century; CORR. MS. DOM. A. VII. See Kennett's Glossary to Par. Ant. In the version of Vegetius attributed to Trevisa, Roy. MS. 12 A. XII. it is said that the Roman legions, "with her chosen horsemen i-rolled in the constables martiloge (matricule), were euer-more myghty i-nowe to kepe her wardes," without auxiliaries. B. ii. c. 2. It is here put for the muster-roll, termed album, or pittacium.

<sup>3</sup> The martinet or martlet is the Hirundo urbica, Linn. and both appellations appear to have been taken from the French. Skinner considers it to be a diminutive of the proper name, comparing the usage of calling a parrot or a starling Richard, or a ram Robert, and rejects as fanciful the conjecture of Minshew that the name martinet was given in allusion to its arrival at the end of March, and migration before St. Martin's day. "Martynet, a byrde, martinet." PALS. G.

<sup>2</sup> "A maser, cantarus, murra, murreus: hec murpis arbor est." CATH. ANG. "Masar of woode, masière, hanap." FALSG. There can be little doubt that the maser, the favourite drinking vessel used by every class of society in former times, was called murrus, from a supposed resemblance to the famed Myrrhene vases of antiquity. The maser was, however, formed of wood, especially the knotty-grained maple, and esteemed in proportion to the quality of the veined and mottled material, but especially the value of the bands and rings of precious metals, enamelled, chased, or graven, with which the wood was mounted. In Latin this kind of vessel was called mazerinus, maderinus, madelinus, masdrinum, &c. in French madre, maselin, or mazerin; and it seems probable that the name mether, applied to the ancient cups of wood preserved in Ireland, may be of cognate derivation. Amongst innumerable instances where mention occurs of the cyphus murreus, or maser, in wills and other documents, may be cited the Inventories taken at St. Paul's, 1295, printed by Dugdale, and at Canterbury, 1322, given by Dart from Cott. MS. Galba, E. iv. f. 125. In the Register of benefactors of St. Albans, Nero, D. viii. f. 27, Thos. de Hatfelde, Bp. of Durham, 1345, is represented holding his gift in his hands, namely, a covered maser, "cyphum suum murreum, quem Wesheyl nostris temporibus appellamus." A maser very similar in form, but without a cover, was in the possession of the late John Gage Rokewode, Esq. It is of knotty, dark-coloured wood, mounted with metal: on the small plate, termed crusta, attached to the bottom, is graven the monogram IHC. and around the brim the following couplet:

and let þowre neyȝbore sitte in rest:
Hoe so lustyþe god to plesse, let hys neyȝbore lyue in ese."

Similar instances of masers bearing inscriptions may be found in Testam. Ebor. i. 209, and Richard's Hist. of Lynn, i. 479. Doublet, in his Hist. of St. Denis, describes the richly-ornamented "hanap de bois de mardre," which had been used by St. Louis, and presented to that church. "Vermiculatus, cariatius ad modum vermis, distinctus, rubens, maderde." MED. "Madre, of wood whose grain is full of crooked and speckled streaks, or veins." COTG. Plantin, in the Flemish Diet. 1573, gives "Maser, un neud ou bosse à un arbre nommée erable. Maseren hout, acernum lignum." In Syre Gawene and the Carle a lady's harp is described, formed "of masere fyne," v. 433, which Sir F. Madden explains to be the wood of the maple. See on the manufacture of "hanas de madre" the Reglements sur les métiers de Paris au XIII. siècle; Documents inédits sur l'histoire de France, p. 112 edited by Depping. It appears that, though this term was frequently used as synonymous with leprosy, they were sometimes considered as distinct. See Roquefort, v. Mesel. R. Brunne calls the leprous Baldwin, King of Jerusalem, "he meselle," and states that for "foule meselrie he comond with no man." Langt. Chron. p. 140. In the earlier Wicliffite version the Syrian Naaman, iv. Kings, c. 5, and the four lepers in Samaria, c. 7, are called "mesels." In the Synonymia of herbs, Sloane MS. 5, is given "Jacea nigra, Gall. madfeloun, Ang. snaywort." Gerard mentions the English names knap-weed, bull-weed, and matfelon; also materfillon, or matrefillen. It is the Centaurea nigra, Linn. Parkinson affirms that this plant is called "matrefillon very corruptly from Aphyllanthes," because the flowers are leafless; and Skinner suggests that from its scabrous nature it is suited to scourge felons withal. "The Thrush replies, the Mavis descendant playes." Epithal. 81.

<sup>2</sup> It is evident that the name of Mahomet became, as in old French, a term denoting any idol; as also mahomerie, in low Latin mahomeria, was used to signify the worship of any false deity. Amongst the charges brought by the King of France against Pope Boniface VIII. one was that he "haunted maumetrie." Langt. Chron. p. 320. In the version of the Manuel des Peccches, R. Bruune uses the word, speaking of a "prest of Sarasyne," who lived in "maumetry." HARL. MS. 1701, f. 2. See also R. Glouc. p. 14; Chaucer, Cant. T. 4656; Persone's T. p. 25: the Wicliffite version. i. Cor. xii. 2; i. John, v. 21; and the relation of the conversion of King Lucius in Hardyng's Chron. Hall calls Perkin Warbeck the Duchess of Burgundy's "newly-invented mawmet," and speaks of him as the "feyned duke—but a peynted image." The circumstance that this name was applied to him is shown likewise by the passage in Pat. 14 Hen. VII. 1492, regarding the punishment of those persons in Devon and Cornwall who "Michaeli Joseph rebelli et proditori nostro, aut cuidam idolo, sive simulacro, nomine Petro Warbek, infami status viro, adhaserint." Rymer, xii. 696. So also Fabian, relating the insurrections at Paris and Rouen in 1455, says that the men of Rouen "made theym a mamet fatte and vaweldy, as a vylayne of the cytye, and caryed him about the towne in a carte, and named hym, in dyrtysyon of theyr prynce, theyr kyngye." <sup>3</sup> "Mawnde, abi mete vesselle (escale)." CATH. ANG. Caxton says, in the Book for Travellers, "Ghyselin the mande maker (corbillier) hath sold his vannes, his mandes (corbilles) or corffes." "Manne, maude, a maunde, flasket, open basket, or pannier having handles." COTg. This word is given by Ray, as used in the North, and noticed likewise in the Craven Dialect. It is commonly used in Devon: see Palmer's Glossary. Ang.-Sax. mand, corbis. It seems, as Spelman has suggested, that the Maunday, or dole distributed on Holy Thursday, derived its name from the baskets wherein it was given, and not from the Latin mandatum, in allusion to the command of Christ, or from the French mendier. See a full account of the customs on this occasion in Brand's Popular Antiquities. "Maundy thursday, ievuedy absolte." PALSg.

<sup>1</sup> From the alphabetical position, it appears that MAYE should here be read MAÏE. In the Treatise of fishing with an Angle, in the St. Alban's Book, the following are given as baits for roach in July: "The not worme, and mathewes, and maggotes, tyll Myghelmas." Sign. i. ij. Ang.-Sax. maða, vermis. In the Northern Dialect a maggot is called a mauk; see Brockett, Craven Glossary, and Jamieson. "A mawke, cimex, lendex, tarmus. Mawky, cinicosus, tarmosus." CATH. ANG. "Tarmus, simax, a mawke." Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. "Tarna, vermis bladi, a mawke." ORTUS.

<sup>2</sup> It is not clear whether this is to be considered as an obsolete and local name for the mackarel, megarus having been previously given as the Latin name for that fish; see p. 321. The Maigre, Sciæna aquila, Cuv. Umbra Rondeletii, Willughby, the celebrated delicacy of the Mediterranean, is a wandering fish, which occasionally has been taken on the coasts of Britain; but the name here seems to be rather a corruption of the Latin, than derived from the French maigre. <sup>1</sup> This term, derived from the French maisnie or magpie, a family, troop, or the suite of a great personage, in low Latin maisnada, or mansionata, is very frequently used by the old writers. Thus in the Wicliffite version, Job i. 3 is thus rendered: "His possessionoun was seuen thousand of shep—and ful meche meyne" (familia multa nimis, Vulg.) See also R. Glouc. pp. 167, 120; Tyrwhitt's Glossary appended to Chancer, and his curious observations on "Hurlewaynes meyne." Sir John Maundevile relates how the Great Chan, Changyus, riding "with a fewe meynce," was assailed by a multitude of his foes, and unhorsed, but saved by means of an owl. Voiage, p. 271. The term is used also to signify the set of chess-men, called in Latin familia, as in the Wardrobe Book 22 Edw. I. p. 351: "una familia pro scaccario de jaspide et cristallo." R. Brunne, in his version of Wace's description of the Coronation of Arthur, says that some of the courtiers "drew forth meyné of the chequer." Caxton, in the Book of Travellers, says, "Grete me the lady or the damyselle of your hous, or of your herborough, your wyf, and all your meyne (rostre maisnye.)" "A mençe, domus, domicilium, familia." CATH. ANG. Hornman says, "I dare not cople with myn ennemyes, for my meyny (turma) be sycke and wounded. A great meny of men can nat ones wagge this stone. Here cometh a great meny (turba.)" Palsgrave gives "Meny, a housholde, menye. Meny of plantes, plantaige. After a great shower of rayne you shal se the water slyde downe from the hylles, as though there were a meny of brokes (rag tas de ruisseaux) had their spring; there."

Pynson, 1514. The minnow is still called pink in Warwickshire, and some other parts of England; see also Plot's Hist. Oxf. and Isaac Walton. Gouldman gives "pisciculi minuti, small fishes called menews or peers."

<sup>3</sup> In Norfolk, according to Forby, a Mara-balk, or mere, is a narrow slip of unploughed land, which separates properties in a common field. "Limes est callis et finis dividens agros, a meere. Bifinium, locus inter duos fines, a mere, or a hedlande." MED. MS. CANT. "A meyre stane, bifinium, limes." CATH. ANG. In a decree, t. Hen. VI. relating to Broadway, Worcestershire, printed by Sir Thomas Phillipps, part of the boundaries of Pershore Abbey is described as the "mere dyche." In the curious herbal, Arund. MS. 42, f. 55, it is said that "Carui—groweþ mykel in merys in þe feld, and in drye placy of gode erþe." In Sir Thos. Wharton's Letter to Hen. VIII. in 1543, regarding the preservation of peace in the North country, is the recommendation "that all the meir grounddes of England and Scotland to bee certainly knowne to the marchers, the inhabitants of the same." State Papers, v. 309. The verb to mere, to have a common boundary, occurs in another document, printed in the same collection; see the Glossary in vol. ii. Leland relates, Itin. vi. p. 62, that "Sir John Dicons told me that yn digging of a balke or mere yn a felde longgyng to the parochie of Keninghaul in Northfolk there were founde a great many yerthen pottes yn order, cum cineribus mortuorum." Elyot gives "terminalis lapis, a mere stone, laide or pyghte at the ende of sundry mens landes. Cardo, mere, or boundes which passeth through <sup>3</sup> See the note on the word MAST HOG, or mastid swyne, according to the reading of the Cambridge MS. In the Catholicon maialis is explained to be "porcus domesticus et pinguis, carens testiculis;" to which is added in the Ortus, "a barge hogge." The Winchester MS. agrees here in the reading MESTYF, otherwise it might have been conjectured that it should have been written MESTYD hogge; the derivation in either case being apparently from the Ang.-Sax. mæstan, saginare. Skinner supposes that the word mastiff, denoting a dog of unusual size, is also thence derived; but it seems more probable that it was taken from the old French mestif, which, according to Cotgrave, signified a mongrel. In the Craven Dialect a great dog is still called a masty.

<sup>4</sup> Meslin-bread, made with a mixture of equal parts of wheat and rye, was, according to Forby, formerly considered as a delicacy in the Eastern counties, the household loaf being composed of rye alone. The mixed grain termed maslin is commended by Tusser. It was used in France in the concoction of beer, as appears by the regulations for the brewers of Paris, 1254, who were to use "grains, c'est à savoir, d'orge, de mestuel, et de dragée." Reglements, t. Louis IX. ed. Depping, p. 29. In 1327, it appears by the almoner's accounts at Ely that five quarters of mesling cost 20s. and two quarters of corn 9s. 4d. Stevenson's Supp. to Bentham, p. 53. monastery, mysken, xij. strykes." At the dinner given in 1561 to the Duke of Norfolk by the Mayor of Norwich, there were provided "xvj. loves white bread, iv. d. xvij. loves wheaten bread, ix. d. iij. loves mislin bread, iij. d." Leland, Itin. vi. xvij. Caxton says, in the Book for Travellers, that "Paulyn the meter of corne hath so moche moten of corne and of mestelyn (mestelon) that he may no more for age." Plot states that the Oxfordshire land termed sour is good for wheat and "miscellan," namely, wheat and rye mixed. Hist. Oxf. p. 242. In the Ortus, mixtilio is rendered "medcled corne;" in Harl. MS. 1587, "masteleyne." "Mastilzone, bigermen, mixtilio." CATH. ANG. Palsgrave gives "mestlyon corne," and "masclyne corne;" and Cotgrave "Tramois, meslin of oats and barlie mixed. Meteil, messling, or misslin, wheat and rie mingled, sowed, and used together." See DRAGGE, menglyd corne, p. 130.

"A meate-wand, verge par le moyen de laquelle on mesure quelque longueur ou distance." SHERWOOD. In Levit. xix. 35, mensura, Vulg. is rendered, in Coverdale's Bible, a "meteyarde." Ang.-Sax. met-geard. Palsgrave gives the verb, "I measure clothe with a yerde, or mette yerde."

"With couetise yet I finde
Which stelh is hote, and micherie
With hym is euer in company."

See also Towneley Myst. pp. 216, 302, and the Hye way to the Sypttell house.

"Mychers, hedge creepers, fylloks and luskes,
That all the somer kepe dyches and buskes." Ed. Utterson, ii. 11.

It signifies also one who commits any sneaking, mean, or miserly act: and, according to Nares, a truant. Horman says, "He strake hym through the syde with a dager, and ranne away like a mycher (latibundus aufugit)." He is a mychar (vagus, non discolor;) a rennar away or a mychar (fugitivus.)" "Micher, a lytell thefe, larronceau. Michar, brissonnier." PALSG. COTG. "To mich in a corner, deliteo. A micher, ride Truant." GOULDM. Tusser uses the term micher, which is not given in the East-Anglian Glossaries.

<sup>3</sup> Chaucer uses the term mitche, R. of Rose, 5585, where it is explained by Tyrwhitt as signifying a manchet, a loaf of fine bread. The old French word miche, and Latin mica, or micchia, signify, according to Roquefort and Ducange, a small loaf. "Mica ponitur pro pane modico qui fit in curtiis magnatorum vel in monasteriis." CATH. Hearne gives in the notes to the Liber Niger, p. 654, a quotation from the Register of Oseney, 52 Hen. III, wherein mention occurs of magne michie, of the bisa and sala michia; and Spelman cites a document which describes "albos panes, vocatos michis." In 1351 Robert, Abbot of Lilleshall, granted "viiij. magnas micas majoris ponderis de pane conventus" to Adam de Kaukbury; and a corrody is enregistered in the Leiger Book of Shrewsbury Abbey, by which Abbot Lye granted, in 1502, to his sister, "viiij. panes conventuales vulgariter myches vocatos," &c. Blakeway's Hist. ii. 129. MYCHEKYNE seems to be merely a diminutive. "Pastilla, a cake, craknell, or wyg." ORTUS.

Alem. meinta, intentio." See BROCKETT'S Glossary, and JAMIESON, v. mint, signifying to aim at, to have a mind to do something. Ang.-Sax. myntan, disponere.

"What eileth you? some gay girle, God it wote, Hath brought you thus on the merytote." Cant. T. 3762.

Tyrwhitt prints this line—"upon the viretote." Speght, in his Glossary, explains the word as signifying a swing, oscillum, suspended from a beam for the amusement of children. Strutt mentions the meritot, or merry trotter, in his Sports and Pastimes, p. 226, and in the Orbis Sensualium of Comenius it is given under the sports of boys, who are represented "swinging themselves upon a merry-totter, super petaurum se agitantes et oscillantes." Ed. Hoole, c. cxxxvj. Skinner gives this word on the authority of the Diction. Angl. 1652, and supposes it to be of French derivation, from viver and tost, quickly. In the Cath. Ang. the word is twice given, under the letter M. "A Merytotyr, oscillum, petaurus;" and again under the letter T. "A mery Totyr, petaurus, etc. ubi a mere totyr." Palsgrave gives "Tyttertotter, a play for chyldre, balenchoeres." See the Craven Glossary, v. Merry-totter, and Brand's Popular Antiqu. See hereafter TOTYR, or myry totyr, and the verb WAVYÑ, or waueryn yn a myry totyr, oscillo. According to Forby to titter, or titter-cum-totter, signifies in Norfolk to ride on each end of a balanced plank.

<sup>1</sup> Merry is not infrequently used by the old writers in the sense of pleasant. Ang.-Sax. myrið, jucundus. In the version of Vegetius, attributed to Trevisa, Roy. MS. 12 A. XII. it is observed that wise warriors in olden times used to "occupie their foot menne in dedes of armes in the felde in mery wedire, and vndre roof in housing in fowle wedre." B. III. c. 2. Again, precaution is recommended at sea against unsettled weather, and the diversity of places, "the whiche maketh ofte of mery wedre grete tempestes, and of grete tempestes mery weder and clere." B. IV. c. 30. The arms borne by the name of Merewether are to be classed with the armoiries parlantes; namely, Or, three martlets sable, on a chief azure a sun in splendour; the martlet being, as it was supposed, an omen of fair weather.

"Synne shal to endeles payne the lede
In helle, that is hidous and merke.—
Ther is styng, and smoke a-mong,
And merkenesse, more than euer was here."

"Mirke, ater, caliginosus, fuscus, obscurus, umbrosus. A mirknes, ablucinacio, i. lucis alienacio, chaos, &c. To make or to be mirke, tenebrare, nigrere." CATH. ANG.
"Myrke, or darke, brun, obscur. I myrke, I darke, or make darke (Lydgat), Ie obscureys." PALSG. See Brockett, Craven Glossary, and Jamieson. Ang.-Sax. mire, tenebræ. See TIERKE, hereafter.

<sup>3</sup> This term apparently denotes crumbs or grated particles of bread, called in French mies, or misches. "Mica, reliquie panis, vel quod cadit de pane dum frangitur et comeditur, &c. a crome of brede." ORRUS. In the Book of Cookery, written 1381, and printed by Pegge with the Forme of Cury, it is directed to take onions, "and myce hem riȝt smal," as also to "myse bred," &c. pp. 93, 95. The participle "myyd" occurs in Sloane MS. 1926, f. 25, and other passages, and signifies grated bread, which, as it has been observed in the note on the verb GRATE, p. 207, was much used in ancient cookery.

<sup>2</sup> The position of this word in the alphabetical arrangement would indicate that the reading of the Cambridge MS. is here to be preferred. Mynute was, however, used synonymously with mite, as appears by the passage in the Wieliffite version, Mark xii. 42, quoted in the note on cu, halfe a farthyng, p. 106. Gouldman gives "a minute, or q. which is half a farthing, minutum." It is said in the Ortus, "minutum est quoddam genus ponderis, scilicet media pars quadrantis;" and a distinction appears to be made in the following citation: "A myte, mita: a myte, quod est pondus, minutum." CATH. ANG. Palsgrave gives "myte, the leest coyne that is, pite," which was a little piece struck at Poitiers, Pictavina, and of the value of half an obole; and Sherwood renders "Mite (the smallest of weights, or of coine) Minute; aussi, une petite piece de monnoye non rsitée." There is no evidence that any coin of such value was ever struck in England, but small foreign pieces may have been circulated, such as the Poitervine, or the "dyner of Genoa," which also, according to R. Holme, was worth half a farthing. Acad. of Arm. B. III. c. 30. Roquefort explains mite as signifying a Flemish copper coin; but, according to Ducange, the value of the Flemish mita was four oboli. It is, however, possible that fractional parts of the silver penny or farthing might occasionally pass as mites: thus entries frequently occur in the Accounts of the Keeper of St. Cuthbert's Shrine, during the XVth cent. as cited by Raine, respecting "fracta pecunia;" and the petition of the Commons in 1444, 23 Hen. VI. complains of the great injury that arose from the division of coin, for want of small currency, and craves that the breaking of white money be forbidden under a heavy penalty. Rot. Parl. V. 109.

<sup>3</sup> "Mita est pilum frigidum, or a myttane. Mantus, a myteyn, or a mantell." ORTUS. "A myttane, mitta, mitana." CATH. ANG. In the curious dictionary of John de Garlandia it is said that "cirothecarii decipiunt scolares Parisius (sic) vendendo cirothecas simplices, et furratas pellibus agninis, caniculinis, vulpinis, et micis de corio factas." The following explanation is given in the gloss: "Mitas, Gallice mitanes (mitheines, al.) a mitos, quod est filum, quia primo fiebant de filo vel de panno laneo, et adhuc fiunt a culgo." MS. Bibl. Rothom. It is said in the Catholicon that "a manus dicitur mantus, quia manus tegat tantum, est enim brevis amictus," &c.

the primary sense of this Latin term being a short garment or mantle. In the minute description of the garb of the Ploughman are mentioned his "myteynes" made of cloutes, with the fingers "for-werd," or worn away; see Creed of Piers P. v. 851. Amongst the feigned miraculous gifts whereby the Pardoner in the Cant. Tales states that he turned to account the credulity of his hearers, one was a mitaine :

<sup>2</sup> The term mauther has been recognised as peculiarly East-Anglian by Sir Thos. Browne, Spelman, Forby, and Moor. It is used by B. Jonson. Tusser, in his list of husbandly furniture, includes "a sling for a mother (moether, al. ed.) a bow for a boy," intended for driving away birds, as he advises, in September's husbandry, to set "mother or boy" to scare away pigeons and rooks from the newly-sown land, with loud cries, sling, or bow. Nares gives it as a term of endearment to a girl, as moppet is used in Suffolk, according to Moor. "A little moppe, puellula." GOULDM. In the SevyŃ Sages, v. 1414, the foolish burgess who went from his home to seek a wife is said to have gone forth "as a moppe wild," where the word is explained by Weber as signifying a fool.

<sup>1</sup> This comparative frequently signifies large dimension, and not number. Thus in Kyng Alis. v. 6529, the rhinoceros is described as "more than an olifaunt;" and in the Wicliffite version it is used to express superior, by priority of birth; where it is said that Isaac knew not Jacob, "for þe heery hondis expressiden þe lincnesse of þe more son." Gen. xxvii. 23. In the Version of Vegecius, Roy. MS. XVIII. A. 12, the heavy-armed troops are said to have had two kinds of darts, "one of the more assise, the other of the lasse;" the "pile," which measured 5½ feet in length, and the "broche," which was shorter by two feet. So likewise in the Golden Legend the "more letanye," on St. Mark's day, is distinguished from the "less letanye, iij. days to fore the Ascension." It is occasionally retained in names of places, as More Critchill, Dorset, probably so called by way of distinction from Long Critchill, and other neighbouring hamlets. The rebus, or canting device of the Mortons of Bushbury, Herefordshire, repeatedly used amongst the ornaments of the chantry founded by one of that family on the south side of the church, is a tun inscribed with the initial of his Christian name, the syllable Mor being, as it would seem, expressed by the supposed dimension of the tun, or its proportion to the scutcheon whereon it is placed.

<sup>3</sup> Gower describes the glowing blush which restored beauty to the features of Lucrece, on meeting her husband, "so that it myght not be mored." Conf. Am. vii. In the curious metrical version of the most ancient grants to St. Edmund's Bury, preserved in the Register of Abbot Curteys, the following lines occur in the Charter of Canute:

"Bexample of whom (St. Edmund) I Knut am gretly mevyd,
 To the holy martyr I wyl that al men se,
 That his chirche be fraunchised and relevyd,
 Moryd and encresyd as fer as lyth in me."

Horman, amongst the passages from Terence, gives the following: "He dredith lest thy olde anyr or hardnes be mored or incresyd."

<sup>4</sup> Compare Ang.-Sax. morgan-gifu, dos nuptialis. In Lazamon "mørȝeue" occurs in this sense, ed. Madden, iii. 249, and "mørȝeue" ii. 175, which is in Wace's original "douaire." See Hicckes, Thes. i. p. ix. Pref. and Wachter, v. Morgengabe.

Remedies for the mortmal may be found in Arund. MS. 42, f. 105, vº; and in Sloane MS. 100, f. 52, vº, a compound is described of litharge of gold, oil of roses, white wine, old urine, &c. which formed "a plastre þat William Faryngdoun knyȝt lete a squyer þat was his prisoner go quyt of his raunsum fore. D. viii. and Sloane MS. 1926, seems to have been fish, or white meat ground small, and mixed with crumbs, rice flour, &c. See in the last mentioned compilation "mortrews de chare, blanchyd mortrews, and mortrews of fysshe," pp. 55, 60, 66, given under the head de potagis. The term is frequently written "morterel, mortrewys," &c. and is possibly derived from the mode of preparation, by braying the flesh in a mortar. "Mortesse meate." PALSG.

<sup>3</sup> Many instances might be cited of the use of the word morrow, signifying the morning, as Chaucer uses it, when he says of the Frankelein, "wel loved he by the morwe a sop in win." Cant. T. 335. Sir John Maundevile speaks of the idolatry of the natives of Chana, who worshipped a serpent, or whatever animal "that thei meten first at morwe." In the Version of Vegetius, Roy. MS. XVIII. A. 12, it is said that it is requisite to ascertain the custom of the enemy, "if they be wonede to assaile or falle vpon the nyghte, or in the morow." B. III. c. 6. In the curious translation of Macer's treatise on the virtues of plants, MS. in the possession of Hugh Diamond, Esq. it is observed that "he þat etip caule (brassica) first at morwe, vnnethe shal he fynde drunkenesse þat day." The day-star likewise is called the MOROW STERRE. In the Golden Legend it is said of the Assumption of our Lady that an angel brought her "a bowe of palme, whose leues shone lyke to the morowe sterre."

<sup>2</sup> In the Winch. MS. RERE is given hereafter as synonymous with MOTHE WOKE. This appears to be a compound word, the last syllable of which may be derived from Ang.-Sax. w  c, debilis, flexibilis, whence w  c-mod, pusillanimis. The former syllable may possibly be taken from Ang.-Sax. mete, Isl. mot, modus. Hence also "methfulle," moderate. See Jamieson, v. Meith. Songs, p. 339. Such scornful gestures were deemed a great breach of good manners; thus, in the Boke of Curtasye, the youth is instructed as to his demeanour at table, where he should especially avoid quarreling, making "mawes," and stuffing the mouth with food.

Chaucer speaks of "mouled," or grey hairs. In the relation of a miraculous occurrence given in the Golden Legend, f. 65, v<sup>o</sup>, it is said, "as the kyng sate at mete, all the brede waxed anone mowly, and hoor, y<sup>t</sup> no man myght ete of it." Palsgrave gives the verb to "mute, as a hauke or birde dothe his fethers, muer;" which is rendered by Cotgrave "to mue, to cast the head, coat, or skin." See Ducange, v. Muta. Hence the place where hawks were kept during the change of plumage was termed a mew; and mutare signified to keep them in a mew, as in a document dated 1425, edited by Bp. Kennett, Par. Antiqu.

Turner, in his letter to Gesner on British fish, prefixed to the second ed. of Gesner, lib. iv. states that the fish called keling in the North, and cod in the South, on the Western coasts is termed melwel. Spelman states that the mulrellus of the Northern seas is the green fish, called in the Book of Customs at Lynn Regis melvel, and haddock, and in Lancashire milwyn. <sup>1</sup> "A muskett, capus." CATH. ANG. "Musket, a lytell hauke, mouchet." PALSG. "Mouchet, espece d'oiseau de proie, c'est le tiercelet de l'espervier." NICOT. The most ancient names of fire-arms and artillery being derived either from monsters, as dragons or serpents, or from birds of prey, in allusion to velocity of movement, this little hawk supplied the appellation musket; as also at a much earlier period it had furnished a name for the missile termed muschetta, or mouchette, in the XIIIth cent.

<sup>2</sup> "Must, carenum, mustum." CATH. ANG. "Mustacium, i. mustum vinum, vel potus (qui) ex musto fit, et aliis polionibus." ORTUS. Mulsa, or mulsum, according to the Catholicon, was a drink compounded of wine, or water, and honey, commonly called meed; occasionally the term denotes new wine, which is the usual signification of must, as in the Wicliffite version, Dedis ii. 13; Cov. Myst. p. 382. "Must, newe wyne, moest." PALSG. In Ælfric's Glossary, Julius, A. ii. f. 127, are given "cervisa, vel celea, eale; medo, meodu; ydromellum, vel mulsum, beor." Horman says, "We shall drynke meth, or metheglin; mulsum vel hydromel, non medonem." According to the account given of Apomel, in Arund. MS. 42, f. 32, v<sup>o</sup>, mulsa, or mellicratium, is formed of eight parts water, and one of honey, boiled together; "idromellum, as oþer facultes vsen it; it is a lycur þat we callen wort, and it is seyd of ydor, water, and of hony, noȝt þat hony goþ þer to, for hony toȝcheþ it but for it is swete as hony. It is water of malt, mulsum."

<sup>3</sup> Previously to the existence of a standing stipendiary force, provision was made for the defence of the realm, in any sudden emergency, by the law that every householder should have in his dwelling a warlike equipment suitable to his means and station, and should at certain fixed seasons present himself before the constables, or appointed officers, with his accoutrements, for inspection. This was termed the monstre, monstrum, or armilustrum, in N. Britain the "weapon-schawynge," often mentioned in the Scotch acts, and in later times in England, the muster. The most curious and ancient ordinance to this effect is that passed at Winchester, 1285, 13 Edw. I. Stat. of Realm, i. 97; but the existence of a similar scrutiny at an earlier period appears by the documents printed by Wats, M. Paris, Auctarium, addit. p. 230. Spelman cites Rot. Parl. 5 Hen. IV. regarding the monstrum or monstratio of men-at-arms; see also the ordinance of Hen. V. in his statutes in time of war, "de monstribus publicis, seu ostenci-onibus." Upton. Mil. Off. 136. "Muster of men, bellicrepa." CATH. ANG. Palsgrave gives the verbs "I muster, as men do y<sup>t</sup> shall go to a felde, ie me monstre. I muster, I take the muster of men, as a capytayne doth, ie fais les monstres. What place will you sygne to muster your folkes in. Mustre of harnest men, monstre."

<sup>2</sup> This instrument of martial music appears to have been a sort of drum, of Oriental origin, and introduced into Europe by the Crusaders. Joinville speaks of the minstrels of the Soudan, "qui avoient cors Sarrazinois, et tabours, et nacaires;" the term being evidently identical with the naqarah, or drum of the Arabs and Moors. See Ducange, v. Nacara, Roquefort, and Wachter. Menage, and other writers, supposed the nacaire to be a kind of wind-instrument, but the observations of Ducange on Joinville, p. 59, and the remarks of Daniel, Milice Franc. i. p. 536, prove beyond question that it was a drum. Cotgrave, however, gives "Naquaire, a lowd instrument of musicke, somewhat resembling a hoboy." Nakerys are mentioned in Gawayn and the Grene Knyght, v. 112, 1016; and Chaucer's Knight's T. v. 2513. Froissart relates that Hugh Despenser the younger, being taken by the Queen's army in 1326, was led about "après le route de la Royne, par toutes les villes ou ils passoyent, à trompes et nacaires." Vol. i. c. xiii. Amongst the minstrels in the household of Edw. III. 1344, is named "makerers, j." which may be erroneously written for nakerer, but in the Gesta Ludov. VII. c. 2, it is said "tympanis et macariis, et aliis similibus instrumentis resonabant." See Household Ordin. p. 4, Harl. MS. 782, p. 63. Sir John Maundevile relates that near the River Phison is the Vale perilous, in which "heren men often tyme grete tempestes—and gret noyse, as it were sown of tabours, and of nakeres, and trompes, as though it were a gret feste." Voiage, p. 340. Trevisa, in his version of Barthol. de Propr. lib. xix. c. 141, says that "Armonia Rithmica is a sownynge melody—and diuers instrumentes serue to this maner armony, as tabour, and timbre, harpe, and sawtry, and nakyres." Palsgrave gives "nauquayre, a kynde of instrument, naquair." The precise period when the use of drums as martial music was adopted by the English is uncertain; R. Glouc. p. 396, alludes to their Saracenic origin, and describes the terror caused thereby, so that the horses of the Christians were "al astoned." Nakers were used at the battle of Halidown-Hill, 1332, as appears by the "Romance," or ballad on that victory, Harl. MS. 4690, f. 80; they are termed tabers in the prose account of the same, f. 79, v<sup>o</sup>. Minot says, in his poem on the alliance of Edw. III. with the Duke of Brabant, and other foreign powers, 1336, and their preparations for war with Philip de Valois,

Gert nakers strike, and trumpes blaw."

The NACORNE, or nacaire, was probably the small kettle-drum, used in pairs, as seen in the figures given by Strutt, Horda, vol. i. pl. vi. from the Liber Regalis, written during the reign of Rich. II. The most curious representation is that etched by Carter, in his Ancient Sculpture and Painting, from a carved miserere, of the close of Compare the extract from the original Chron. given by Mr. Wright, App. to Polit. Songs, p. 295. In Roy. MS. 20 A. XI. the word is written "nakid;" in Cott. MS. Julius, A. v. "nackened." In the curious poem entitled the Pilgrimage to Jerusalem, Cott. MS. Vitell. C. XIII. f. 172, v<sup>o</sup>, one of the characters introduced is the "Natte makere," who holds long discourse with the Pilgrim. NATTES are mentioned again under the word NEDYL, as "boystows ware," or coarse manufacture.

In the later Wicliffite version the word occurs as follows, ? Chron. xxiv. 27: "For þou herdist þe wordis of þe book, and þi herte is maad neische (emollitum est, Vulg.) and þou art mekid in þe sijt of the lord." See also R. Brunne; Octouian, v. 1210; Seuyng Sages, v. 732. Among recipes for the craft of limning books, MS. in the collection of Sir Thomas Philipps, 8186, f. 142, is the following: "To make coral. Take hertys hornes and mader, an handful or more, and sethe hit tyl hit be as neysche as glewe." One of the virtues of betony, as detailed in Cott. MS. Jul. D. viii. f. 121, is that with honey "hit is good for þe cozge, and hit makethe nesshe wombe." A marvellous recipe is preserved in Sloane MS. 73, f. 215, vº: "For to make glas nesche. Take þe gotes blode lewke, and þe iuyse of seneuey, and boile hem wel to-gederis; and wiþ þo tweye materes boyle wel þi glas; and þi glas schal bycome nesche as past, and if it be cast azeine a wal, it schal not breke." Sir John Maundevile, speaking of the form of the earth, says that the hills were formed by the deluge, that wasted the soft ground, "and the harde erthe and the rocke abyden mountaynes, whan the soft erthe, and tendre, wax nessche throghe the water, and felle, and becamen valeyes." Voiage, p. 368. Trevisa, in his version of Vegetius. Roy. MS. 8 A. <sup>2</sup> The leeches of former times highly esteemed sternutatory powders, as efficacious especially in disorders of the brain. The root of hellebore was most in request for this purpose, of which was formed "neeing powder," and the plant was called in England, as in Germany, "nieswoort," according to Gerarde, who mentions also the wild pellitory, Achillea Ptarmica, as called "sneesewoort, or neeing wort." Horman says that "two or iij. nesys be holsom, one is a shrowed token;" and Palsgrave gives the observation, "the physicians saye whan one neseth it is a good sygne, but an yuell cause;" as likewise And. Boorde, in the Breviary of Health, c. 333, says, "in English it is named sternutacion, or knesing, the which is a good signe of an enyll cause." He seems, however, to approve of the moderate use of sneezing by means of the powder of Eleborus albus, called "knesing powder." In Brand's Popular Antiqu. may be found many curious details regarding superstitions connected with sneezing. The following curious passage in the Golden Legend has not been noticed; it thereby appears that a similar superstition existed in regard to yawning. The "more Letanye," it is stated, was instituted by Pope Gregory during the pestilence called the botch, which afflicted the people of Rome with sudden death. "In this maner somme snesyng they deyed: soo whan any persone was herde snesinge, anone they y<sup>t</sup> were by sayd to him, God helpe you, or Cryst helpe you; and yet endureth y<sup>e</sup> custome. And also whan he snesyth or gapeth he maketh tofore his face the sygne of the crosse, and blyseth hym, and yet endureth this custome." f. xxiiij. v°. "Nesyng with the nose, esternement." PALSG. <sup>1</sup> It appears that the term nephew was used in reproach, as nepos had been by Cicero, Horace, and other classical writers. In the Ortus nepos is explained as signifying luxuriosus: "neptatio dicitur luxuria, et tunc dicitur a nepa, quod est valde ardens in luxuria."

<sup>2</sup> WYKYR, MS. niky, K. nykyr, H. nykir, P. Compare Mermaidyn, p. 334. A.-Sax. nicor, monstrum fluviale. "Nicerax," Beowulf, v. 238. Kilian gives Teut. "necker, Dæmon aquaticus, Neptunus, ennosigeus." The Deity of the Sea, according to the Northern mythology, was called Neckur, a name which was taken, as Wachter supposes, from nack, equus, and nack, cymba, equus fluvialis. See Keysler, Antiq. Sept. p. 262. Boucher's Gl. v. Auld-Nick; and Sir F. Madden's note on Lagamon, 1322. Of ancient tales regarding the mermaid see Gesner, lib. iv. Stowe gives in his Annals, A.D. 1187, a marvellous relation of a merman taken near Orford Castle, Suffolk, and kept there many months by Barth. de Glanville, as recorded by Rad. de Coggeshale, Cott. MS. Vesp. D. x. f. 88. The subject of Christian symbolism has been hitherto so neglected that no explanation has been suggested with regard to the frequent occurrence of the mermaid among decorations of a sacred character. It was likewise very frequently introduced, in medieval times, in the designs of embroidery, and ornaments of ordinary use.

<sup>3</sup> The Latin term given here seems to denote that NYLE signifies something of no weight or account; it may possibly denote the light flying particles, or flue, of wool. The white downy substance which arises when brass is exposed to strong heat is called nill. "Nill, the sparkles, or ashes that come of brass tried in the furnace, pompholyx, tucia, nil album, nihili, ceris et cadmiæ favilla." GOULDM. "Nill, les escailles d'airain." SHERW. Palsgrave gives only "nayle of woll," without any French word. Nails, according to Forby, signify, in Norfolk, coarse refuse locks of wool, fit for making mops. The reading of the Harl. MS. 2274 is "nyle, or wulle;" but the reading of the Winch. MS. would induce the supposition that the word had quite a different signification from that which has been suggested, and were derived from Ang.-Sax. nill, non velle.

<sup>4</sup> "Nemyll, cautus, etc. ubi wyse." CATH. ANG. It would appear that the sense in which the word occurs in the Promptorium were handy and skilful in taking or nyming anything. Compare the use of the adverb "neenly;" Townl. Myst. p. 105. MYCHARE, a pilferer, is rendered capax, p. 336. "Capax, i. assidue capiens, ofte holdynge, or tokyng." ORTUS. Palsgrave gives "nymble, delyuer, or quycke of ones lymmes, souple. Nymble, quycke, deliure."

<sup>5</sup> This old word is still in use in the North, according to Brockett, signifying to take up hastily, or steal privately. "To nim, accipere, furari, subducere, surripere." GOULDM. See Nares. Ang.-Sax. niman, capere. Compounded with the preposition be, or by, it occurs frequently, as used by Chaucer, in the sense of breaving. Douglas,

<sup>1</sup> In Herefordshire a little person is termed a nurpin, and in the North, according to Jamieson, a knurl, nirb, nirl, nurg, nurrit, or nauchle. Brockett gives nerled, ill-treated, pinched, as a child unkindly used by a step-mother. See NURVYLL, dwerfe.

<sup>2</sup> The verb to "noye," or hurt, occurs in R. Brunne; the Wicliffite version, i. Pet. iii. 13; Apoc. vii. 3; Vis. of P. P. &c. "To noye (or desese), adversari, anxari, gravare, molestare. PALSG. "Oche, a nick, nock, or notch; the cut of a tally. Coche, a nock, notch, nick, snip, or neb; and hence also, the nut-hole of a crosse-bow." COTG. Palsgrave gives the proverbial expression, "he commendeth hym by yonde the nocke, il le prise oultre bort, et oultre mesure."

<sup>4</sup> In the later Wicliffite version Isai. iii. 17 is thus rendered: "þe lord schal make ballid þe nol of the dougtris of Sion (decalvabit verticem," Vulg.) Tusser, in his abstract for February, gives the direction to strike off "the nowls of delving mowls," that is, of their hillocks. Ang.-Sax. cnoll, cacumen. <sup>3</sup> It might be at first sight concluded that this word was merely a variation of spelling, the final n. being taken from the article, and by prosthesis prefixed to the substantive ouche. It seems, however, probable that NOWCHE is a corruption of the Latin word nusca, or nuxa, a broach or fibula. See Ducange. In the Inventory of the Jewels of Blanche of Spain, 1299, Liber Gard. 28 Edw. I. p. 353, are mentioned with firmacula, broaches or clasps, "j. nouchia ad modum aquile aurea, cum rub' et ameraudis, precii d. li. turon' nigrorum. j. nouchia auri, cum imaginibus Regis et Regine, de armis Franc', cum petradii diversá, precii cc. xl. li. turon'." In the list of jewels taken 1310, preserved in the Wardrobe Book 2 Edw. In "Dame Julyans Bernes boke of huntynge" minute instructions are given "how ye shall breke an harte," sign. e. j. v<sup>o</sup>, ed. 1496. The skin having been stripped off, and the inwards removed, the nombles are to be cut according to particular directions, the "nerys" or kidneys belonging to them; and they are to be trussed up carefully in the skin, and carried home for the lord; whilst the inwards and other parts are otherwise distributed. In Sloane MS. 5, Oculus Christi is said to be the same as calendula and "solssequium," Gall. solsicle, Ang. Seynte Marie rode. Solsequium, Rodewort, oþer marygoldys." Cotgrave gives "Orvale sauvage, wild clary, double clary, ocle Christi."

<sup>4</sup> This verb very commonly occurs in the sense of to use. Horman says, "Some shipmen occupie saylis of lether, nat of lynen, nether of canuas. Women occupye pynnys to araye them." "This latton basen cankerith, for faulte of occuppyng, par faulte d'estre vsilé. I occupye, ie vsite, for ie vse is to weare. Hardyng says of the times of Edw. I. that great complaints were made of the "okoure and vsury" practised by the Jews abiding in the land. Chron. c. 150. The curious compilation, entitled Flos florum, Burney MS. 356, comprises the points and articles of "Corsyng or mansyng," to be shewn by each parson to his flock four times in the year, in the mother tongue; in which are named "alle vsureres, alle þat makeþ oþer writþ þat oker shal be payd; oþer yf hyt be payd, þat hyt ne be restored." p. 92. So likewise it is said in the ancient treatise cited in Becon's Reliques of Rome, 1563, p. 252, that "all okeris and usureris (ben accursed), that is to say, if a man or woman lend good to her neyghbour for to take aduantage for her lending." In the verses on the seventh commandment in the "Speculum Xpistiani" (by John Watton ?) it is said,

Ne nothing wyne thurgh trechery:
Okur nor symonye come thou not nere,
But conscience clere kepe ay truly."

See also Towneley Myst. p. 162; Reliqu. Ant. ii. 113; and the Castell of Labour, W. de Worde, 1506, sign. c. iij. where the companions of avarice are said to be usury, rapine, false swearing, and "okerye."

curious information may be found on the origin and custom of presenting gifts at Christmas and the New Year; but the particular usage to which allusion is made in the Promptorium has been insufficiently noticed. It seems that it was customary for inferiors to present gifts to their superiors at this season, as the dependants of the court to the Sovereign, the vassals to their lord, or the scholars to the pedagogue. M. Paris complains of the extortion of "primitiva, quæ vulgares nova dona novi anni superstitione solent appellare," from each of the wealthier citizens of London, in 1249. The precise period at which this became an established usage has not been ascertained: numerous evidences regarding it may be found in the Inquisitions which set forth the customs of manors, such as those printed in Clutterbuck's Hertfordshire, iii. pp. 614, 618, the Household Books, Privy Purse Expenses, and Nichols's Progresses of Queen Elizabeth and James the First.

Ke eles le fount pur bon aleyne* (god onde).” Ar. MS. 220, f. 297, v<sup>o</sup>.

In Arund. MS. 42, f. 42, Betonica is recommended as a specific “for cowh, and streyt onde: po(wder) of hym myȝt with clarefied hony noble for hem þat ben streyt ondyd, and han þe cowh, and for doþ haketyng, and swuch.” Botus Armenicus also is said to afford “noble helpe for hem þat han þe asme, as for elde folk þat arn streyt ondyd, if þey drynkyn it;” f. 50, v<sup>o</sup>. See also a remedy for “shorte onde,” f. 53, b.; and the virtues of thyme “for hem þat ben anelows, i. streyt ondyd,” f. 80. “Halo, to onde, or brethe, or raxulle. Alitus, oondynge, and norysshynge. Anelo, to oonde, or pantt. Anelitus, oonde.” MED. Andrew Boorde, in the Breviary of Health, 1575, c. 20, writes, “of a man’s breth, or ende, anelitus; in Englyshe it is named the breath, or ende of a man, the which other wyle doth stynk, or hath an euill savour.” See Aynd, Eynd, and End, in Jamieson. Gröse gives yane, the breath, in the Northern Dialect. Ang.-Sax. ond, spiritus. Compare Islandic, anda, spiro; önd, anima.

<sup>3</sup> Neither the adjective, nor the impersonal verb sitteth, it is becoming, occur hereafter in the Promptorium, but they are not unfrequently used by Chaucer, Gower, and other writers. In Trevisa's version of Vegetius, B. ii. c. 18, it is said that "it semed vnsitting that he þat shulde receyue of the Emperour lyverey, clothing, and sowde, shulde be occupied in eny oþer office but in the Emperours werres." "I ete there unthende fishe,

<sup>1</sup> Chaucer uses the verb to appose, signifying to object to, or put to the question; Cant. T. v. 7179, 15, 831. <sup>2</sup> This term seems to be directly taken from the French orfrais, or low Latin orfrea, the band or bordure of embroidery with which rich garments, and especially vestments of sacred use, were decorated. Menage supposes it to have been formed from aurum Phrygium, attributing to Phrygia the invention of such embroideries. The orfrey was originally, but not always, as the name expresses, a work broidered in gold. The most remarkable specimens existing in England are the relics of vestments discovered at Durham, in the tomb attributed to St. Cuthbert, and wrought by order of Queen Ælfleda for Frithelstan, Bp. Winchester, A.D. 905. See the note on the word FANYN', p. 149. The skill of the embroiderers and goldsmiths of England from an early period had extended their reputation over the Continent. The following statement occurs in the Gesta Gul. Ducis Norm. et Regis Angl. p. 211: "Anglice nationis femine multum acu et auri texturâ, egregie viri in omni valent artificio." In the Chronicle of Casino, it appears that the jewelled work termed Anglicum opus was, at the commencement of the XIth cent. in high esteem even in Italy (Murat. Script. Ital. iv. 360 :) and in the times of Boniface VIII. about the year 1300, are mentioned "v. aurifrigia, quorum ij. fiunt de opere Cyprensi nobilissimo, et unum est de opere Anglicano, et unum est ad smaltos." Lib. Anniv. Basilice Vatie. ap. Joan. Rubeus. Among the gifts of Thos. Langley, Bp. Durham, who died 1437, were a vestment of crimson velvet, "casulá, ij. tuniculis, et capá principali habente orfrays consimiles auri de Cyprys," and other vestments of baudkyn, with "orfrays de baudekyn rubeo, context' cum cervis et avibus auri de Cyprys," &c. Wills and Inv. Surtees Soc. i. 88. The orfrays seem to have been frequently separate, so as to be used at pleasure with the vestment of colour suitable to the day. Inventories and wills afford innumerable evidences of the extraordinary richness of these decorations, and curious information as to the perfection to which the arts were carried in England at a remote period.

<sup>1</sup> The precise period when the use of the organ was introduced into Britain has not been ascertained; it is supposed to have been first used in France in 757. Compare Ann. Fr. breres; Ann. Francorum; and Eginh. Ann. Pepini; which concur in naming that year as the date of the introduction. Eginhard also mentions the arrival in France of a priest from Venice, who was able to construct organs, in 826; but the instrument does not appear to have been generally used in Western Europe before the Xth cent. At that period Elphegus, Bp. Winchester, constructed an organ, the melodious sounds of which are highly commended in the verses of Wolstan. In the time of Edgar, St. Dunstan, who died 988, caused "organa" to be constructed for the church of Glastonbury, according to Joh. Glaston.; and in that of Malmesbury, where he bestowed "organa, ubi per ereas fistulas musicis mensuris elaboratas dudum conceptas follis vomit anxius auras." W. Malmesb. Life of Aldhelm, Bp. Shirburn, founder of Malmesbury Abbey. Numerous curious particulars are recorded respecting the use of organs in England, as at St. Alban's, in Cott. MS. Nero, D. vii.; and Croyland, where there were "organa solennia in introitu ecclesie superius situata," as well as smaller organs in the choir. Portable instruments, called frequently regals, were much in use, and representations occur in many illuminations and sculptures. A very curious representation of the organ exists in Eadwine's Psalter, Trin. Coll. Camb. R. 17, i. and has been copied in Strutt's Horda, i. pl. 33. Organs were imported from Flanders, as appears by the Louth accounts, about the year 1500, Archæol. x. 91; the price of a pair suitable to be set up in the roof-loft of that noble church being £13. 6s. 8d. It appears that the usual term, a pair of organs, has reference to the double bellows whereby continuous sound was produced; or, according to Douce, to their being formed with a double row of pipes. See O'Connor's curious observations on the early use of organs and psalmody in the Irish church, Hib. Script. iv. 153.

Dicitur et cancellus fenestra reticulata. Prov. vij. 6.*" CATH. Little can be added to Mr. Hamper's curious memoir on Oracles, Archæol. xxiii. in which he explains the varied uses of the term.

The alder is called in the North ellor, whence may be derived many names, as Ellerbeck, Allerthorpe, &c. "An ellyrtre, alnus." CATH. ANG. "Alnetum, an allur grounde." ORTUS. "Aulne, an aller, or alder-tree." COTG. Ang.-Sax. alr, alnus.

<sup>1</sup> Compare DYALE, or an horlege, p. 120; and PYNNE of an orlage, or other lyke schowynge the owrys. Scioltinus. Hence it seems that ORLAGE, implying generally an indicator of time, signifies here either a sun-dial or a clock. "An horlege, horologium. An horlege lokar, horuspex." CATH. ANG. "Horologium, an orologe, a clocke. Horoscopus, i. horarum inspector, an orologe maker, or a keeper of a clocke." ORTUS. "Oriloge, a clocke, horiloge." PALSg. In the sense of a dial the term occurs in the Wicliffite version, iv. Kings, xx. 11: "Isaye þe profete clepide ynwardy þe Lord, and browȝte aȝen backward by x. degrees þe schadewe bi lynes, bi whiche it hadde go doun þanne in þe orologie of Achaz." Daines Barrington has given observations on the earliest introduction of clocks, Archæol. v. 416, but could find no instance of an horologium, which, being described as striking the hours, was undeniably a clock, and not a dial, previously to the construction of the remarkable clock near Westminster Hall, supplied out of a fine imposed on Rad. de Hengham, Chief justice of the King's Bench, 1278. But there can be little question that clocks were in use at an earlier period. It may be doubted whether the "Orelogium insigne" given by William the Sacrist to Sherborn, in the XIIth cent., were of this nature (Sherborn Cartulary, in the possession of Sir Thos. Phillipps); and the horologium, or alarum, the fall of which before the hour of matins gave the alarm of the conflagration of the church of Bury, in 1196, as described by Jocelin de Brakelonda, p. 72, appears by the context to have been a kind of clepsydra. Numerous notices might be collected regarding the orloges of a later time, such as that in Canterbury Cathedral, which cost £30, in 1292; and the celebrated one given to the Church of St. Alban's in 1326, by Abbot Ric. de Wallingford, which, as it is stated, Cott. MS. Nero, D. vii. f. 196, surpassed any other in England, or even in Europe, according to Leland, Script. Brit. ii. 401. A remarkable clock still exists at Exeter, generally regarded as the gift of Bp. Courtenay, who was consecrated 1472, but it is highly probable that it is the same horologium which is named in Pat. 11 Edw. II. 1317. Frequent mention occurs of "horologii Regis infra palatium Westm.," as in Pat. 1 Hen. V. in favour of the keeper, Hen. Berton, "valectus camere Regis;" and in the Acts of Privy Council, especially in 6 Hen. VI. 1422, vol. iii. 222, where accounts of repairs done to the "orelege" may be found, which supply curious terms of the craft. Amongst the valuable effects of Hen. V. enumerated 1423, was "j. orlage, fait al manere d'un nief, l'argent preis par estimation, lxs." Rot. Parl. iv. 216. Fabyan relates, on the authority of Gaguin, that amongst the presents sent A.D. 207 to Charlemagne by the King of Persia "was an horologe of a clocke of laten of a wonder artysfeyvall making, that at every oure of the daye and nyghte, when the sayd clocke shuld stryke, images on horse backe apperyd out of sondry places, and aftir departid agayn by meane of certayne wyces." Part VI. c. 156. To such a device Horman seems to allude when he says, f. 231, v<sup>o</sup>, "Some for a tryfull pley the deuyll in the orlege; aliqui in nugis tragedias agunt." It seems, however, certain from the Chron. Turon. Martene, Coll. Ampl. V. 960. and Eginh. Ann. Fr. that Charlemagne's "horologe" was a clepsydra. Abp. Parker devised in 1575, to the Bp. of Ely, "baculum meum de canua Indica, qui horologium habet in summitate." See Professor Hamberger's curious dissertation on clocks in Beckman's Hist. of Inventions.

V. was sixpence; in 4 Hen. VI. the yearly reward to the clock-maker, besides incidental expenses, was 13s. 4d. Acts of Privy Council, vol. iii. The rapid advance of civilization and luxury during the reign of Edw. III. induced foreign artificers to settle in England, as appears by the Pat. 42 Edw. III. which grants safe conduct for three "orlagiers," natives of Delft, coming to exercise their craft in England. Rymer, vi. 590.

<sup>1</sup> Le Grand d'Aussy, Vie Privée des Français, i. 246, could not trace the introduction of the orange to an earlier period than 1333. It is said to have been brought from China by the Portuguese, but it is more probable that its introduction into Europe is due to the Arab conquerors of Spain. A document preserved in the Tower, and cited in the valuable Introduction to Household Expenses in England, presented to the Roxburgh Club by B. Botfield, Esq. records that in 1290 a large Spanish ship arrived at Portsmouth, from the cargo of which Queen Eleanor purchased a frail of Seville figs, dates, pomegranates, 15 citrons, and "vij. poma de Oreng." A full account of the properties of this fruit may be found in the curious compilation written early in the XVth cent. Arund. MS. 42, f. 33, v<sup>o</sup>. Oranges are mentioned as a present, Paston Letters, ii. 30; and repeatedly in the Privy Purse Expenses of Hen. VIII. Pynson, in the Boke to lerne French, gives "aples of orrenge, pommes d'orraingne."

Trevisa likewise, in his version of the Polychron. speaks of "an orped man, and stall-worth." The epithet is applied to hounds in the Master of Game, Cott. MS. Vesp. B. XII. f. 63, b. Dowglas, the monk of Glastonbury, in his Chronicle, Harl. MS. 4690, speaks of the conflict of Edw. III. with the Normans in 1347, "atte the brigge of Cadon, manly and orpedly strenghted and defended," f. 82; and again, in his relation of the hasty expedition of Edw. III. to Calais, 1350, says that "he towke wiþ him þe nobles, and þe gentelles, and oþer worþi and orpedde menne of armes," f. 83, v<sup>o</sup>. Gerarde gives haver as the common name for oats in Lancashire, and observes that it is "their chiefest bread corne for Iannocks, Hauer-cakes, Tharffe-cakes," &c. The Festuca Italica has, as he says, the common name "Hauer-grasse." "Aceneron (averson, or avoin folle) wild oats, barren oats, haver, or oat grass." CORG. In the North, oats are still called haver, according to Brockett and the Craven Glossary, but the name seems to be no longer known in the Eastern counties. Hence, however, appears to be derived Haver-croft Street, the name of a hamlet near Attleborough, Norfolk. Dan. havre, Dutch, haver, Swed. hafre, oats.

to Preface, p. xcviii. states that he had followed Wace's original more closely than Peter Langtoft had done;

“ For mayster Wace þe Latyn alle rymes, þat Pers ouerhippis many tymes.”

The verb “overhuppe,” to skip over, occurs in Vis. of Piers P. v. 2167, and 10.395. Gower uses “overhippeth” in a like sense; it occurs also in writers of the XVth Cent. See Fryth's Works, p. 17; Udal, Hebr. c. 11. “I overhuppe (or ouerskyp) a thyng in redyng, or suche lyke, ie trespassse. I overhuppe, ie trespassse, and ie passe. Loke you ouerhuppe (surpassez) nothyng, remember that the thyng that is well doone is twyse done, and the thyng that is yuell done muste be begon agayne.” PALSG. Howell, in the Grammar prefixed to Cotgrave's Dict. 1660, observes that “the reason why the French o're hips so many consonants is, to make the speech more easie and fluent.” To hip, signifying to hop, is still used in the North. See Brockett and Jamieson.

<sup>1</sup> This verb is used in Vis. of Piers P. v. 2001; and by Lydgate, Boccacc, v. 104, as quoted by Mr. Halliwell in his Glossary, Coventry Mysteries, in which it occurs also in the like sense of over-reaching, or over-bearing, p. 262. To lead, as it has been observed p. 293, was used in the sense of carrying, as by Rob. Glouc. p. 416, “lede and bryng,” where he speaks of loaded wains passing frozen streams during the severe winter, A.D. 1092. To over-lead appears to be taken in the same manner as to carry and to bear are used, denoting behaviour or demeanour. Palsgrave gives the verb “I overley, as a tyrāne, or myghty man ouerlayeth his subiectes, declared in I oppresse.”

thus rendered: "He þat offriþ to goddis, outakun to þe Lord aloone, be slayn (præterquam Domino," Vulg.) Chaucer uses "out take" in like manner, Rom. of Rose; and "out taken," excepted, Cant. T. v. 4697; as likewise does Sir John Maundevile, Voiage, p. 301. In the account of a scandalous assault which occurred in the reign of Hen. VI. Rot. Parl. V. 111. it is said, "He vilanously toke of all the attire of her hed, also her clothis of her body, otake her smokke." "I out take, I except. "Pade," a toad, Awntyrs of Arthure, ix. 10, is in one MS. written "tade." See also Syr Gaw. and Sir Gal. i. 9. In the later Wicliffite version the frogs that came up on the land of Egypt, Exod. viii. 6, are called "paddockis." See Cov. Myst. p. 164, and Glossary; Towneley Myst. p. 325. "Paddocke, crapart. This word has not been noticed by Forby; Moor gives Paddock and Pudduck, signifying a toad, in Suffolk, and Ray gives it as a word used in Essex. Brockett states that in the North it denotes a frog, and is never applied to a toad. See Jamieson, v. Pade, a toad. Hence is derived the old name for a toad-stool, still in use in the North, according to Brockett. "A padokstole, boletus, fungus, tuber, trusca, asperagus." CATH. ANG. Gerarde calls Fungi "paddock stooles." In the Vocabulary, Harl. MS. 1002, f. 144, vº, boletus is rendered "a padokchese," as likewise in a list of herbs, MS. Ant. Soc. 101. "Fungus, a stede stole." MED. Ang.-Sax. pada, bufu; Teut. padden-stoele, boletus.

<sup>1</sup> Skinner suggests that pageant may be derived from the Greek πάγω, πῆγμα, or "Belg. Waeghen, currus, q. d. currus pompaticus." Tooke considers it to be the pres. part. pæcand, of the Ang.-Sax. verb pæcan, decipere, to illude by simulated representations. The primary signification of the word appears to have been a stage or scaffold, which was called pagina, it may be supposed, from its construction, being a machine compaginata, framed and compacted together. The curious extracts from the Coventry records given by Mr. Sharp, in his Dissertation on the Pageants or Mysteries performed there, afford definite information on this subject. The term is variously written, and occasionally "pagyn, pagen," approaching closely to the Latin pagina. The various plays or pageants composing the Chester mysteries, each of which is appropriated to one of the trades, are entitled, "Pagina prima, de celi, angelorum, &c. creacion(e). The tanners' play. Incipit Pagina secunda, qualiter Deus creavit mundum, &c. The drapers' play;" and so forth. See Chester Plays, Wright's edition from Add. MS. 10,305. A curious contemporary account has been preserved of the construction of the pageants at Chester during the XVIth cent. "which pagiantys weare a high scaffold with 2 rowmes, a higher and a lower, upon 4 wheeles." Sharp, Cov. Myst. p. 17. The term denoting the stage whereon the play was exhibited subsequently denoted also the play itself; but the primary sense, clearly defined by the Coventry documents, is observed by several writers, as by Higins, in his version of Junius's Nomenclator, 1585. "Pegma, lignea machina in altum educta, tabulatis etiam in subline crescentibus compaginata, de loco in locum portatilis, aut que vehi potest, ut in pompis fieri solet: Eschaffaut, a pageant, or scaffold." "Pegma est machina super quam statue ponuntur." ORTUS. "A paiande, ludorium." CATH. ANG. "Pagiant in a playe, mystère." PALSG. "Fercules, the thing whereon images or Pageants are carried; also beers for dead men. Pegmate, a stage or frame, whereon Pageants be set or carried." CORG. Hormau says, "There were v. cours in the feest, and as many paiantis in the play. I wyll haue made v. staz (sic) or bouthis in this playe (scenas.) I wolde haue a place in the middyl of the pley (orchestra), that I myght se euery paiant. Of all the crafty and subtile paiantis and pecis of warke made by mannys wyt, to go or moue by them selfe, the clocke is one of the beste." In this passage the term seems to be taken as denoting stage machinery. Of the gorgeous pageants set up by the citizens of London on occasions such as the reception of the Emperor Charles V. 1522, detailed descriptions have been preserved by Hall, the Chronicler. See on this subject Collier's Hist. of Dram. Poetry, ii. 151, and the Appendix to Davies's Municipal Records of York, 8vo. 1843.

<sup>1</sup> Various conjectures have been made on the origin of this term, derived by Skinner from panis matutinus, by Tyrwhitt from Maine, the province where it might have been made, perhaps, in great perfection, and by Sibbald from pain d'amand, almond bread. Mr. Pinkerton explains it as signifying the chief bread, the bread of main, or strength. It is called "breid of mane," Dunbar, Maitl. Poems, p. 71; and "mayne bread" in Sir John Neville's accounts of the expenses of his daughter's wedding, 1526; Forme of Cury, p. 120, where the item also occurs "6 doz. Manchetts, 6s." It would hence appear that Jamieson's conjecture that bread of mane and manchet-bread are synonymous is questionable. Kilian gives Teut. "Maene, i. weggehe, libum lunatum. Weggehe, panis triticeus, libum oblongum." Compare WYGGE, brede, hereafter. The derivation is obscure, but the term clearly denotes bread of a superior quality; thus Chaucer uses the simile "white as paindemaine," Sire Thopas, Cant. T. v. 13,655; Gower also speaks of "paindemaine" as a delicacy fit for the rich alone. Conf. Am. vi. In the Anturs of Arther at the Tarnewathelan, it is said that

"Thre soppus of demayn
 Wos broȝte to Sir Gauan,
 For to comford his brayne." St. 37, ed. Robson.

The Harl. MS. 279, f. 10, supplies instructions for the preparation of such consolatory sops. "Lyode Soppes. Take mylke an boyle it, and þanne tak ȝolkys of eyroun, ytryd fro þe whyte, an draw hem þorwe a straynoure, and caste hem in to þe mylke, an sette it on þe fyre, an hete it, but let it nowt boyle, and stere it wyl tyl it be som what þikke; þenne cast þer to salt and sugre, an kytte fayre paynemayunys in round soppys, an caste þe soppys þer on, and serue it forth for a potage." In the Forme of Cury repeated mention occurs of "flour of payndemayn," probably the fine white flour of which it was made; see pp. 27, 30. The delicacy called "crysps" was composed thereof, p. 73; and "payndemayn" itself is mentioned, pp. 34, 65. The Issue Roll of Exch. 27 Hen. VI. 1449, records the payment of £10 to John Eton, baker of "paynman" for the King's table, in consideration of good services, and the great charge incurred by him in providing bread for the Sovereign. It appears also that in 1455, in the Household of Hen. VI. there were, in the Office of the Bakehouse, one "Yoman Pay(n)men-baker," and a groom. Household Ordin. published by Ant. Soc. p. *19. 17 C. XVII. f. 56, v<sup>o</sup>, is given "Cassis, palette." Charpentier likewise cites a Glossary, MS. Reg. Paris, which gives "pelluris, heaume de cuir ou de pel." Palet appears to have been a term adopted from the French: "palet: sorte d'armure de tête." ROQUEF. It is not evident whether there was any distinctive difference between the palet and the kettle-hat. Compare KETTYLE HAT, Pelliris, galerus, p. 273. Minot, alluding to the battle of Cressy, in a poem written about 1352, tells the Frenchman,

Knok thi palet or thou pas." Poems, p. 31.

Possibly the word may here, as Ritson and Jamieson explain it, imply the scull; it is so used by Skelton, who makes Elinour Rummung threaten her garrulous customers with broken "palettes," v. 348. In the Inventory of armour and effects of Sir Edw. de Appelby, 48 Edw. III. 1374, are these entries: "Item, j. basenet, cum aduentayle, prec' ij. marc'." Item, ij. ketelhattes, et ij. paletes, prec' vj. s. viij. d." Sloane charter, xxxi. 2. Charpentier cites a document, dated 1382, which describes a knight as "armé d'un hanbergeon d'acier, un palet eucamallié sur sa teste." In the curious Inventory, in the possession of Sir Thomas Phillipps, of the effects of Sir Simon Burley, beheaded 1382, occur, under the head "Armour pur la guerre. j. paller (sic) de asser: j. palet de quierboyllé, coueré de stakes blanc et vert." The Stat. 20 Ric. II. 1396, enacts that no person shall ride armed, by night or day, "ne porte palet, ne chapelle de ferre, n'autre armure," rendered in the English version "sallet, nor skull of iron." Stat. of Reha, ii. 93. In the Kalend. of Exch. iii. 309, the following remarkable example of the palet is mentioned, 22 Ric. II. 1392. "Une corone d'or d'Espagne, &c. j. palet d'or d'Espagne, qe poise en nobles, cccc. xxi. li. garn' ore gross' baleys, perles, &c. ij. Joces pur mesme le palet, garnis' ore saphirs, &c. j. gross' saphire, baleys et perles en le couver du d'ce' palet; xxxij. perles en ij. bolons, et ij. claspes pur mesme le palet." The entire value was estimated at £1702. It does not appear whether these costly items were royal gifts from Spain, or merely of Spanish workmanship. In the curious extract from the MS. version of Clariodes cited by Sir Walter Scott, notes to Sir Tristrem, fyfte 1, it is said that amongst the various fashions of head-pieces some will have "a pryckynge palet of plate the cover." The list of military stores at Hadleigh Castle, in the grant by Hen. IV. in 1405, to Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, comprises "doublettes, jakkes, basynettes, vysers, palettes, aventailles," &c. "A palet covered wyth rede velvet" is mentioned in the bequest of armour by Sir Wm. Langford, 1411. Sarum Registers. In 1450 the proclamation of Hen. VI. forbade all men to bear armour or arms, as "palettos, loricas," &c. Rymer, xi. 262.

<sup>1</sup> Compare BREN, or bryn, or paley, p. 49; and SYVEDYS, or brynne, or palyys. This word is to be traced to Lat. palea. "Paille, chaffe, the huske wherein corn lieth." COTG.

In the Customs of London, Arnold's Chron. p. 25, are given articles desired by the commons of the city, such as that the Mayor and council should enact that all barrells of ale and beer be filled quite full, "after thei be leyde on the gyst; for by reason that the vessels haue not been full afore tyme, the occupiers haue had gret losse, and also the ale and byere haue palled, and were nought, by cause such ale and biere hathe taken wynde in spurgyng." In the version of Beza's Sum of the Christian Faith, by R. Fyll, Lond. 1572, f. 134, it is observed of the usage of the Church of Rome, "It is meruaile that they doe not reserve—the wine as well as the breade, for the one is as precious as the other. It were out of order to saye they feare the wine will eger, or waxe palled, for they hold that it is no more wine."

<sup>1</sup> It is worthy of remark that Baltheus, which usually denotes a belt, or arming-girdle, seems to be taken in the Promptorium in the sense of a close-fitting or closely girt garment, such as was used first under armour of mail, or of plate, to bear off the weight, and preserve the skin from being chafed, and subsequently in the place of armour. Compare COTE ARMURE, p. 95; DOBBELET, p. 124; and IAKKE of defence, p. 256; all of these being rendered Baltheus. Sir Roger de Norwico bequeaths, in 1370, "unum paltoke de veluete cum armis meis; unum par de platis, coopertum cum rubeo veluet," &c. Harl. MS. 10; Transcripts from Norwich Registers. Mention occurs of the "paltok," in Vision of Piers P. v. 12, 122; 14, 362; in both passages as a garment of defence. Camden, in his Remains, in the chapter on apparel, cites a history called Eulogium, which seems to have been written about A.D. 1400, and mentions, amongst extravagant fashions used by the commons, "a weed of silk which they call a Paltooke: their hose are of two colours, or pied with more, which, with lachets which they call Herlots, they tie to their Paltokes without any breeches." Here the term apparently does not designate a military garment. The Ordinance of Peter, Duke of Brittany, to call the nobles and archers to arms in 1450, directs that "les nobles tenant au dessous de lx. li. de rente aient brigandines—ou à tout le moins bous patetocques, armez de nouvelle façon, sans manches, à laisches de fer, ou mailles sur le bras." Monstrelet states that the town of Neelle surrendered to the Comte de Charrolois, A.D. 1464, on condition that the men-at-arms should be at liberty to depart with their harness, "et les archiers s'en iroient en leurs pourpoints, ou paletoz, chacun une vergette en sa main." Chron. iii. c. 112. The term seems here to denote a military defence of an inferior description. According to Roquefort the paletot was a kind of pourpoint, or a sort of military cloak, so called from palla, or as Borel suggests, from peltum. "Acupicta, i. vestis acu texta, a paltoke, or a doublette." MED. "Bombicina, paltoke." Roy. MS. 17. C. XVII. f. 44, v<sup>o</sup>. "Paltooke of lether, pellice. Paltooke, a garment, halcret. COEG. Spanish, "Paletoque, a jerkin with short skirts." MINSH. Skelton uses this term to denote a patch, as given by Palsgrave, or some kind of head-gear, in a Poem against Master Garneshe, addressing him thus: "Ye cappyd Cayface copious, your paltoke on your pate." Ed. Dyce, i. p. 112.

Dugd. Mon. Ang. iii. Hall, speaking of the richly-decorated lodging of Hen. VIII. at Guisnes, 1520, says that from "the iawe pece of the selyng, whiche pece was gylt with fine golde, were woorkes in paan paled." The word is more frequently written panter, Fr. pannetier, Lat. panetarius, as by Rob. Glouc. p. 127, who says that Arthur gave "bat lond of Aungeo Kaxe ys panter." See the account of the "Office of the Panetry," and of the duties of the Serjeant thereof, "whiche is called Chief Panter of the King's mouthe." Liber Niger domus Edw. IV. Household Ordin. p. 70. This word is retained in the Devon dialect, signifying to strain in vomiting. See BRAKYNGE, p. 47. Compare Teut. braecken, Dan. brækkē sig, vomere.

<sup>3</sup> This term appears here to be taken as denoting the open screen, which serves in a convent to permit occasional intercourse with the external world, in the parlour, or locutorium, which also, in those monasteries where silence was enjoined at other times, was reserved as a place for occasional discourse. Pargulum appears to be the diminutive of pargus, a corruption of parcus, explained by Ducange as signifying "septum quo oves includuntur." These screens or gratings were also termed locutoria fenestra. "Parclos to parte two roumes, separation." PALSg. A.D. 1450, as regards "a parclose of tymber" to be constructed about an organ-loft, to stand over the west door. Dugdale, Hist. Warw. Walter, Lord Montjoy, gives directions in his will, A.D. 1474, for the embellishment of a chapel in Derbyshire "with a quire and perclose, and two altars without y<sup>e</sup> quire." Testam. <sup>1</sup> The pardoner was an ecclesiastic authorised by the head of the Roman Church to travel throughout Catholic Europe for the purpose of vending pardons or indulgences, with the intention of raising a sum for some special purpose. Chaucer, in his lively portraiture of the Pardoner, Cant. T. v. 710, shows the expedients and pretences to which such itinerants had recourse, in turning to profitable account the superstition or ignorance of the people, a practice to which a check was given by several councils. They were termed questores, or questionarii, in French questeurs. Frequent allusion is made in the Vision of Piers Ploughman to the abuse of the authority of the Church, which rendered the credulous a prey to crafty itinerants. By Stat. 22 Hen. VIII. c. 12, all proctors and pardoners travelling the country without sufficient authority were to be treated as vagabonds. "Pardonere, pardonnier." PALSG.

<sup>3</sup> This term is thus used in the later Wicliffite version, Eccl. xxii. 21: "As ournyng (eher pargeting) ful of grauel in a cleer wal, so and a ferdful herte in þe þouȝt of a fool: cementa sine impensā posita contra faciem venti non permanebunt," Vulg. In the Accounts of Sir John Howard, A.D. 1467, is the following entry: "Item, the vi. day of Apryll my mastyr made a comenaunt wyth Saunsam the tylere, that he schalle pergete, and whighte, and benefelle all the new byldynge; and he schal have fore his labore xiiij.s. iv.d." Housch. Exp. presented to the Roxburghe Club by B. Botfield, Esq. p. 395. Amongst the charges for building Little Saxham Hall, A.D. 1506, are payments "for lathing, pargetting, tiryng, and white casting all the roves, walles, partieyons, &c. for pargetments, and zelyng with mortre and here." Rokewode's Thingoe Hund. pp. 146, 148. Horman says, in the chapter de re Edificatoriā, "Some men wyll haue theyr wallys plastrod, some pergetted, and whytlymed; some roughe caste, some pricked, some wrought with playster of Paris. Quidam parietes amant loricatos, et tectorio vestitos; quidam gypsum inducunt; quidam albaria grummulis aspergunt; quidam puncturis distinguunt; quidam malthā eos conuestiunt." <sup>1</sup> PARROK of cowle, MS. or cowle, K. S. Compare COOWLE to closyn mennys fowlys, saginarium; p. 97. In the North a chicken coop is termed a hen-caul; and the synonymous term PARROK seems to denote a similar enclosure. Ang.-Sax. pearroc, septum ferarium, clausura. In N. Britain, according to Jamieson, a very small enclosure or apartment is called a parrock, and to parrach signifies to crowd together, like many sheep in a small fold. "Parrocke, a lytell parke, parquet." PALSG. A fenced enclosure of nine acres at Hawsted, in which deer were kept in pens for the course, was termed the Parrock. Cullum's Hawsted, p. 210. In Norfolk, according to Forby, an enclosed place for domestic animals, as calves, is called a par, and the farm-yard, containing pars for the various animals which inhabit it, is called a par-yard.

<sup>2</sup> Parura signifies, according to Ducange, opus Phrygium, embroidery of silver or gold, or an ORFREY; see p. 362, supra. Amongst the gifts to Peterborough by Abbot Akarius, who died A.D. 1210, occurs "alba brusdata—cujus paratura violeticum habet colorem, et amita et stola cum manipulo ejusdem coloris brusdata." Rob. Swapham, Sparke, p. 104. Descriptions of a similar kind occur without number in ancient inventories of sacred vestments. The ornaments of the alb, properly designated by the term PAROWRE, were square or oblong pieces of rich embroidered stuff attached to the vestment at each wrist, and at the feet, or lower part of the alb, one before and another behind, being, with the PAROWRE of the amice, five in number, and symbolical, as it is supposed, of the wounds on the hands and feet, and the crown of thorns, of the Saviour. Papebrochius, Acta SS. Propyl. Maii, giving the explanation of this usage, speaks of it as quite obsolete. The large PAROWRE, at the bottom of the alb in front, is exhibited in a profusion of instances on sepulchral brasses and effigies; that which decorated the amice, according to its ancient fashion, appears like a standing collar above the chasuble, with which it is sometimes erroneously supposed to have been connected. It must be observed that these ornaments were most commonly, if not

Their variety was remarkable: in the Lives of the Abbots of St. Albans we find "paruras auro et aurifrigio, et acu plumario decoratas." Occasionally they were set with gems: "Paruram positam cum perreid, et armis Anglie." Rymer, X. 346. Remarkable specimens of the PAROWRE of the amice supposed to have been worn by St. Thomas of Canterbury, and preserved in the Treasury at Sens, are represented in Shaw's Dresses and Decorations. Wyntown speaks of "albys wyth parurys." See Jamieson. The term was applied to similar ornamental work on other vestments, as "chirothece parate," &c. The term apparel is occasionally used in the same sense, as in the Inventory of Winch. Cath. 1535, where certain vestments are named, with the "parel of the albes of the same work, of my L. Cardinal Beauford's gift." Strype's Mem. of Crammer.

<sup>1</sup> The parvise, a term of Greek origin, which occurs in Chaucer's Rom. of R. v. 7152, is explained as being the portico of a church, called Paradisus, or pararisis, possibly on account of the trees which environed the entrances of the Greek churches. See Ducange, Tyrwhitt's Glossary to Chaucer, and Towneley Myst. p. 200. "Place nere a church to walke in, paruis." FALSG. p. 125. Pattens were used anciently by ecclesiastics, probably to protect the feet from the chill occasioned by the bare pavement of a church, an unbecoming practice which was condemned severely. In Hutton's Excerpta from the Registers of the Diocese of York, Harl. MS. 6971, it is stated in an archiepiscopal visitation, A.D. 1390, "Item, omnes ministri ecclesie pro maiore parte utuntur in ecclesiâ et in processione patens et clogges, contra honestatem ecclesie, et antiquam consuetudinem capituli." Ducange also cites an ordinance of the Chapter of Auxerre, "non portantur calopodia in choro, sub pœnâ distributionum unius diei;" and in the accounts of the Churchwardens of St. Mary-Hill, London, A.D. 1491, the item occurs, "for ij. pair of pattens for the priests." Pattens, at the period when the Promptorium was compiled, formed an ordinary part of the costume of a gentleman. In the Histoire du petit Saintré, written about 1459, his well-supplied wardrobe, as page of the court, comprised "souliers et patins, qui soient bien faicts," of each three pair. So also in 1464, the steward of Sir John Howard made these entries of expenses in London: "Payd fore a payre of patynys, iij.d. For a payre patynys for my master, iij.d." Household Exp. in Eng. In the same year the craft of "patyn" makers of London petitioned the crown that the Stat. 4 Hen. V. which forbade them to use the wood of the aspen-tree, as being that which was chiefly used by the fletchers, might be repealed, representing that it was the best "and lightest tymbre to make of patyns or clogges." Rot. Parl. iv. 567. A drawing which represents King John, Cott. MS. Julius, E. iv., affords a curious representation of the pattens of this period. See Shaw's Dresses. Horman, speaking of various dances, alludes to those which were performed on pattens, and rendered by him gyracula. "Let us daunce patende, or with styltis."

<sup>2</sup> This term denotes a kind of large shield of plain wood, or covered with skins, such as the parma described by Brito in the Philippidos, x. 216, called paresia, and in French parois. Th. Walsingham speaks of armed parisarii in the service of Edw. III. and in the rates of wages of the household of that king, A.D. 1344, are mentioned "pauwes, pauecos," and "peuecers," but in the Househ. Ordin. published by the Antiqu. Soc. these words have erroneously been printed with an n. The pavise was almost essential to the balistarius, affording him a protection whilst winding up the cross-bow, as mentioned in the Chron. B. du Guesclin, v. 3106, and represented in the Life of Richard Beauchamp, Cott. MS. Jul. E. iv. Stratt's Horda, ii. pl. 43. Frequently the parisarius was merely the attendant who carried that defence. In Talbot's ordinances for the army, A.D. 1419, it is directed that every "ij. yomen make them a good pavise of bordes, or of p'p', in the beste maner they cane best devise, that on may hold it, whiles

B. ii. c. 24. Again they are mentioned as wall-shields, of which kind a curious specimen formed of iron is preserved in the porter's lodge at Warwick castle. "It nedethe þat ther be good plentie of targes, payusses, and sheldes in þe citie, to keuer and to hille or stop the gappes of the enbatilmentes of þe walles fro shot." B. iv. c. 6. They are also mentioned as useful in sea-fights. In the passage of arms between Lord Scales and the Bastard of Burgundy, A.D. 1467, it is said, "We shalle don armes on foote—and shalle mowe bere a targe or a pavis, aftir the wille and pleasure of everich of us." The pavyce was retained in use after the adoption of fire-arms. Thus Hall, in his account of the battle at Flodden, 1513, describes the furious fire kept up by the artillery on both sides: "And after the shotte was done, which they (the Scotch?) defended with pavisches, they came to handestrokes." It appears very frequently on the Norfolk sepulchral brasses, which represent secular or mercantile persons. "Pautner, malette," FALSG.

<sup>1</sup> Of the usage in the service of the mass of kissing a small tablet of wood or metal, ornamented with some sacred figure or device, see Dr. Milner's observations, Archæol. xx. 534. The tabula pro pace, called in French portepaix, was formed of every possible and costly material, or in earlier and more simple times of wood, whence it was called "pax borde," as in the will of Sir Thos. Littleton, 1421, or PAX BREDE. Compare BREDE, or litille borde, p. 42. By the synod of Exeter, 1287, it was ordained that in every parish church there should be "asser ad pacem." Wilkins, ii. 139. The name was used, however, without any regard to the propriety of its application. In the will of Henry le Scrop, 1415, is mentioned "una Paxbrede argentea et deaurata." Rymer, ix. 273. In an Inventory of St. Dunstan's, Canterbury, 1500, occurs "a pax borde off latin, a crucefyx for a pax borde off coper and gylt." Amongst the gifts of Abp. Chichele to All Souls, Oxford, Invent. taken about 1460, are "vj. paxys de vitro." In the Inventory of St. Paul's, 1292, given by Dugdale, and that of St. George's, Windsor, 1324, splendid paxilla are described. "Paxillum, Anglice paxbrede." ORTUS. The use of the pax was one of those symbolic ceremonies which were not immediately abolished in the Reformed Church; it was enforced by the Ecclesiastical Commission of Edw. VI., and even rendered more conspicuous than before, as a token of joyful peace between God and man's conscience. See the Injunction for the Deanery of Doncaster, cited from Burnet by Dr. Milner.

"Et si ad le wenne (fex wex) au col derere."

"Le vendon, the fax wax." Harl. MS. 219, f. 150. In the curious treatise on vegetable remedies, Arund. MS. 42, f. 44, v<sup>o</sup>, it is said of "Bdellius, Delle—it resolueth blod þat is conglyed, i. cold slawyn, and cloddyd, and clumperyd, and helpeth for brusures of þe paxwax and of þe brawn, and for congelacyon of þe senewys." Again, f. 47, the virtues of capers are commended "for desese in þe pascwax, and in þe senewys;" and of Galbanum, f. 90, v<sup>o</sup>, "it is gode for alyzere, i. þe crompe, and for þe spasme, þe shote in þe lacertys, i. in þe paswaxis."

<sup>1</sup> The pectoral, as a sacred ornament used by the prelates of the Christian church, appears to have derived its origin from the jewelled breast-plate of the Jewish high-priest, the λογέιον των κρίσεων, or rationale judicii, according to the Vulgate, Exod. xxviii. 15, rendered in the earlier Wicliffite version "the breest broche of dom," in the later "the racional of doom." It was worn attached to the breast of the chasuble, and although never, as it appears, in general use, yet many examples present themselves in England. As regards the obscure subject of the early use of the rationale, much information may be gained from the authors cited by Ducange. It is minutely described in an ancient inventory of pontifical ornaments at Rheims, given by Marlot in the Hist. of that see, and appears to have closely resembled the Jewish breast-plate, being formed of 12 stones, whereon the names of the 12 sons of Israel were inscribed, fixed upon cloth of gold, and attached by means of chains over the shoulders, whereupon also there were two stones called "camayeur," in imitation of those which were worn by the high-priest. A second rationale for less solemn occasions is described in the same document, which resembled less closely the Jewish ornament: it was formed of one stone of unusual brilliancy and size, called "camayeu," around which were set 4 emeralds, and as many balais rubies. A representation of this remarkable ornament may be seen in the plate given by Du Bouchet, in the Hist. of the House of Courtenay, p. 174, which represents the sepulchral effigy of Robert de Courtenay, Archbishop of Rheims, who died 1323. The most remarkable representation which exists in England is afforded by the effigy placed under Prince Arthur's chantry in Worcester cathedral, and attributed to Bp. Godfrey Giffard, 1262—1301. The rationale here appears as a square plate upon the breast of the chasuble, with a quatrefoil in the centre, and set with eight gems. This ornament appears in England chiefly during the XIIIth cent. See the seals of Joceline, Bp. Bath, and John, Bp. Winch. 1205; of Eustace, Bp. Lond. 1222, Walter, Bp. Carlisle, 1223, Ralph, Bp. Heref. 1239, Sylvester, Bp. Carlisle, 1246, Henry, Bp. Lincoln, 1300; and the effigy of Bp. Laurence, at Rochester, who died 1274. In the Invent. of St. Paul's, 1295, given by Dugdale, several chasubles are described as furnished with the pectorale, formed of gold, or cloth of gold, set with gems. Its use was not entirely abandoned at a later period: it appears upon the seal of Richard, Bp. Lincoln, 1420, and in the Invent. taken at Winchester cathedral at the Dissolution, occur a pectoral of gold; another partly of gold, and six of silver gilt, all garnished with stones. Strype's Mem. of Cranmer, App. p. 25. The term pectoral occasionally designates an ornament of the cope, as in the Invent. taken at St. Paul's, and given by Dugdale, in which mention occurs of a "capa, cum Petro et Paulo in pectorali: Capa—cum rotundis pectoralibus aurifrigiis," &c.

<sup>2</sup> In the Eastern Counties, according to Forby and Moor, a pannier, such as serves to carry provisions to market, is termed a ped, the market in Norwich, where wares brought in from the country are exposed for sale, being known as the ped-market, and a dealer who transports his wares in such manner is termed a pedder. rived the name by which the ancient Roman line of road is known which leads from the great camp at Holme, on the N.W. Norfolk coast, towards Ixworth, in Suffolk, and seems to have fallen into the line leading from Thetford to Stow-market. The greater part of this road across the champaign parts of Norfolk is still called the Peddar Way, doubtless because, like the Welshman's Road in Warwickshire and the parts adjacent, the straight direction of its course caused it to be frequented by itinerant traders. The Peddar Way may be traced upon the Ordnance Survey through nearly its whole extent. It is also given in Woodward's Map of Roman Norfolk, Archæol. xxiii. 358. There is also a vicinal road leading from Ightham, Kent, to Farnham, Surrey, which is called the Pedlar's Way. The Norfolk term pack-way seems to be synonymous. Sir John Paston, writing A.D. 1473, says, "I most have myn instruments hyddur, whyche are in the chyst in my chambre at Norwyche, whyche I praye you and Berney togedre joynly, but nat senerally, to trusse in a pedde, and sende them hyddur in hast." Paston Letters, V. 54. Tusser, in his list of husbandly furniture, given under September's husbandry, enumerates "a pannell and wanty, pack-saddle, and ped." Ray speaks of dorsers as the kind of peds or panniers used by the fish-jobbers of Lyme to bring their fish to London. The original Glossary to Spenser, Sheph. Cal. Nov. V. 16, gives this explanation: "A haske is a wicker ped, wherein they use to carrie fish." It is owing to this use of peds that, in Pynson's edit. of the Promptorium, peddare is rendered piscarius. East Winch, in Norfolk, is called in old documents Pedder's Winch. "A pedder, revolus, negociator." CATH. ANG. See Jamieson, v. Peddir.

"When the yse melted and brake, the payse therof brake many a stronge brydge." Fabyan, Chron. 6 Will. Rufus. The adjective "paisand," heavy, occurs in Golagros and Gawane, 463; and Chaucer uses the verb to peise, to weigh. The PEYS of a well appears to designate the counter-poised beam, termed also KYPTRE, supra, p. 276, whereby in Southern Europe, as also in other countries, water is raised.

The term pellet, Fr. pelotte, designated the stone balls, or missiles which were projected by the mangonels, and warlike engines of early times, and by artillery, bullets of stone being disused only in the XVth cent. Missiles formed of indurated clay have also been found, the use of which is perhaps indicated in the Promptorium. In Golagros and Gawane, v. 463, are mentioned "pellokis paisand," with "gapand gunnis of brase;" and Chaucer uses the simile "swifte as a pellet out of a gonne." House of Fame, iii. Horman says, "The messenger was slayne with a pellet, glande," and Hall speaks of shooting "great pelletes, whiche made a greate noyse." Chron. 24 Hen. VIII. "A pelet of stone, or lede, glans." CATH. See also the passages cited in the Glossary to Syr Gawayn. Wicliffe, in the complaint to the King and Parliament, objects that the poor were constrained to provide a worldly priest in pride and gluttony "with fair hors and jolly, and gay saddles and bridles ringyng by the way, and himself in costly cloths and pelure," whilst they perished from cold and hunger. "Pendant of a gyrdell, pendant." PALS.G.

<sup>2</sup> PENNE is not unfrequently used by the old writers in the sense of feather; Fr. pennae. In the Vision of Piers Pl. mention occurs of the "pennes of the peecok." v. 7923. In the Golden Legend it is said that "the foule that—hathe but fewe pennes or fethers, may not well flee;" and again, "David sayth, he flew vpon the pennes of the wyndes."

<sup>3</sup> A pennon was a small flag attached to the lance, whereby the rank of the bearer was known. Wace appropriates it to the knight, and the gonfanon to the baron, but at a later time it appears to have designated the bachelor. Oliv. de la Marche describes the ceremony of the bachelor being made a banneret, when the "queue du pennon armoyé" was cut off, "et demoura quaré," was converted into a banner." L. vi. c. 25. Trevisa, in his version of Vegetius, Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. says that "horsmen ben cleped the wynges of the hoost—and thies ben cleped banarers, for they bere baners and pynons; velis, hoc est flammulis utuntur." B. ii. c. 1. In an Invent. of church ornaments, in the enumeration of banners, occurs "a pynon off St. Donston." Gent. Mag. viii. N.S. 571. "Pennon, a banner, pennon. Penon, a lytell baner in a felde, pennon." PALS.G. In Lansd. MS. 225, f. 431, is given the size of standards, banners, pennons, &c. as set down by the Constable and Marshal. "A guydon to be in length ij. yardes and a half, or iij. A pennon of armes round att the end, and to be in length ij. yardes." In Harl. MS. 358, f. 5, may be seen sketches of all these ensigns; the getone being swallow-tailed, the penon triangular, and charged with the armorial bearing, the former being appropriated to the esquire or gentleman, the latter to the knight.

<sup>4</sup> "A penytenciari, penitenciarus." CATH. ANG. The institution of this dignity in cathedral churches is usually dated from the Council of Trent, 1545; but it is certain that penitenciarii, persons authorised in certain cases to give absolution, in place of the bishop himself, existed from a much earlier period. See Ducange and Macer. Chaucer speaks of the penitencer in the Persones Tale as one empowered to give absolution in extraordinary cases. "Penytauncer, penitancier." PALS.G.

<sup>2</sup> "A perke, pertica." CATH. ANG. Amongst the ancient furniture of the chamber the perch appears to have answered the same purpose as the clothes-horse of later times. The falconer had likewise his perch, whereon the hawks were accustomed to sit. In the dictionary composed by Joh. de Gallandiâ it is said, "Supra perticam magistri Johannis diversa indumenta pendent: tunice, supertunicalia, pallia, scapularia, capa, coopertorium, lintheamina, renones, sarabarre, stragule, canisie, bruce, bumbicinia et tapeta." &c.; and it is added in the Gloss, "pertica, Gallice perche, unde versus: Pertica diversos pannos retinere solebat." Documens inédits: Paris sous Philippe le Bel, ed. Géraud, App. p. 603. Caxton says, in the Book for Travellers, amongst the appliances of the chamber, "On the perche hongen your clothes, mantelles, frockes, clokcs, cotes, dobles, furrer, wynter clothes and of somer," &c. In Norfolk a perch, or a wooden frame, against which sawn timber is set up to dry, is called, according to Forby, a perk.

<sup>3</sup> This term appears to designate a wax candle of certain dimensions, such as it was customary to place on the pertica or pergula, a small transverse beam or bar, whereon in churches or other places candles were affixed. Edw. Phillips, in the World of Words, states that perchers were the same as Paris candle, anciently used in England, also a bigger sort of candles, commonly set upon the altars. According to the ancient assise recorded in the Memoriale multorum of Henry, Prior of Canterbury, 1225—1331, Cott. MS. Galba. E. iv. f. 45, the Sacrist was bound to provide for the Prior's chamber cereos of the weight of half a lb. each, candelas, 24 to the pound, torticios, 2 ells in length, and weighing 5lb. each, with smaller ones of different weights, some of which had the appellation "prikette," being 12 in. long, and weighing 8 to the pound. "Item, candelae que vocantur perchers continent in longitudine xv. pollic'; unde avij. perchers pond' j.li. cere." These appear to have been used at the Prior's table. They are thus mentioned in the metrical treatise de Officiariis in curiis Dominorum, XVth cent. under the head "de candelario, of the chandler,"

It was accounted to have singular virtues in parturition, in augmenting wealth and affection, in keeping a man sober, and as a charm against poisoned food. See also the metrical Latin treatise on the virtues of gems, attributed to Marbodeus, Harl. MSS. 20, f. 100: 321, f. 62, v°. There was another red stone called perides, according to Glanville, which cast forth fiery sparks, and when held fast, burned the hand; possibly the same which is here designated as the PERDYCLE.

Archæol. xxi. 253. Horman says, "One maner of correction of the sowdiours was that they shulde stande forthe in the host in theyr pety cotis, tunicati." Amongst the Privy Purse Expenses of Henr. VIII. 1532, occurs a payment to a London tailor "for a doublet, and a pety cote for Sexten," the King's fool. "Petycote, corsent simple, cotte simple, chemise de blanchet." PALSg. Duwes, in his Introductorie to teach the Lady Mary the French tongue, gives, under women's attire, "the kyrtell, le corsel: the kyrtell, la cottelette: the petycoat, la cotte simple." In 1582, petticoats appear in the Custom-house rates as an article of import: "Peticotes, knit, of silk, the doz. £12, do. knit, of wul or cottin, the dosen, 30s." In the time of James I. petticoats of silk were still rated at 20s. each.

diminutive person is called in the North a picht, and the lower orders still designate by this term the supposed race of pigmies. Several remarkable relations illustrative of the ancient popular belief in such supernatural beings are given by the old historians, such as that of the priest Elidorus, recounted by Giraldus, Itin. Camb. i. c. 8; the account of the demons called in England Portuni, and in France Neptuni, according to Gerv. Tilbur. Ot. Imp. Dec. iii. c. 61; the extraordinary tale of Rad. de Coggeshale respecting the boy and girl discovered near Wolpit, in Suffolk, and kept for a long time by Sir Rich. de Calne, at Wikes, which are described as having had the human form, but wholly of a green colour, and as having been led by the sound of bells to emerge into the rays of the sun from their land beneath, where twilight reigned, and everything was green. Roy. MS. 13 A. XII. f. 73, v<sup>o</sup>. See Keightley's Fairy Mythology, and compare ELF, supra, p. 132.

<sup>2</sup> "A pyke of a schoo, or of a staffe, rostrum." CATH. ANG. Liripipium usually denotes the hood with a long appendage, which, as Knygton describes it, was twisted around the head; but here it seems to be synonymous with poleine, or cracowe, the proper appellation whereby the singular long-peaked shoe, which was in fashion during the early part of the XVth cent., was known. These terms are supposed to be derived from the fashion having been introduced from Poland, and Cracow, its metropolis, possibly by some of the suite of Anne of Bohemia, Queen of Ric. II. Will. Malmsh. however, states that among the effeminate habits of the times of Rufus, "usus calceorum cum arcuatis aculeis inventus:" the pouleines were also much in vogue in France during the reign of Charles V. and forbidden in 1340 and 1363. The monk of Evesham, in the Life of Rich. II. ed. Hearne, p. 53, relates the indignity that was shown in the diocese of Oxford to the messenger of Abp. Courtenay, in 1324, when he was compelled to eat the prelate's mandate, seal and all; but in retaliation the Archbishop's adherents "sciderunt cracowys de sotularibus aliquorum de familiâ Epi. Oxon. et ipsos cracowis edere cogrunt." In a treatise on the virtues of plants, written about the same time, the seed, or cod, of the Cassia fistula is described as of the "gretnesse of a saucestre, and shap most lyk þe pyk of a crakow sho." Arund. MS. 42, f. 60, v<sup>o</sup>. At the period when the Promptorium was compiled such peaked shoes were worn of an extravagant length, and the fashion was restricted by the statutes of apparel, during the reign of Edw. IV. when the length of "pykes of shoen or boteux" was cut down to two inches. See Parl. Rolls, V. 505, 566; Stat. of Realm. Although no early sumptuary statute is found whereby the use of such shoes was restricted to knights or persons of estate, they are mentioned repeatedly, as if accounted specially a part of knightly equipment. Thus in the description of the comely attire of Sir Degore, it is said, "His shone was croked as a knyghte." v. 700. This Romance is supposed to have been written early in the XIIIth cent. The young Torrent of Portugal is described as craving knighthood from the King of Provens, who bids him engage in a feat of arms, "and wyn the shone," v. 1117; having acquitted himself manfully, he comes at "myd-mete," and presents himself at the deis in his squire's habit, "withoute couped shone," to claim the guerdon; v. 1193. Compare this passage with Vis. of Piers Pl. v. 12,099, where a description occurs of one who comes, as if to a just, after

The verb to pick, as used by the old writers, has, amongst various significations, that of obtaining anything by mean, underhand proceedings, or pilfering. Thus Gaut. de Bibleworth says,

"Eschuuet flatour (losenieur) ke seet flater,
Trop seet ben espeluker (piken.)" Arund. MS. 220, f. 299.

Again he describes the gear of the five artificers, who were clad in the livery of a great fraternity, as "ful freshe, and newe—ypiked." Prol. v. 367. See Nares, v. Picked. Bullinger, in his 40th Sermon on the Apocalypse, inveighing against the Roman clergy, says, "They be commed, and piked, and very finely apparelled, delihtyng in wemens jewels, wearing costely garmentes." There is apparently an allusion to birds, which set the plumage with the bill. A.-S. pycan, eruere.

So likewise Shakspeare uses the epithet, 1 Hen. VI. 1. 3, "peel'd priest!" "Pyllad as one that wanteth heare, pellu. Pyllad as ones heed is, pellé. Pyllad scalled, tigneux." PALS. In this sense the following passages in the authorised version of the Scriptures are to be understood: "Go, ye swift messengers, to a nation scattered and peeled." Isai. xviii. 2, 7. The word in the original signifies deprived of hair, plucked, considered in Eastern countries the highest indignity. Compare Isai. l. 6. Again, in Ezek. xxix. 18, it is said, "Every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled." (depilatus, Vulg.) The term is likewise applied to velvet or napped stuffs which are worn threadbare, shorn, or cut. Hall, relating the treachery of Humphrey Banaster, in betraying the Duke of Buckingham to Rich. III. says that the sheriff, having apprehended the Duke, "in greate hast and euyl spede conueighed him appareled in a pillad blacke cloke to the cytie of Salsburie, where Kyng Richard then kepte his houshold." 3 Rich. III. Again, he describes the rich attire of the royal henxmen, who appeared in "coates of purple veluet pieled, and paned in riche cloth of siluer." 14 Hen. VIII.

<sup>1</sup> PYNTNENTE, MS. Pymment, K. H. S. P. Pigmentum, or pimentum, wine spiced, or mingled with honey, called in French piment, was anciently in high estimation. See Kyng Alis. v. 4178, and Weber's note. Chaucer speaks of it in Rom. of R. 6027, Boeth. ii. Gower says of Love,

"That neuer pyment ne vernage

Was halfe so swete for to drynke." Conf. Am. B. vi.

Under the head nomina pertinentia promptuario, Harl. MS. 1002, is given "Nectar, pigmentum, pyment." "Pyment, piment." PALS. Amongst the receipts of cookery in a MS. of the XIVth cent. in the collection of Sir Thomas Phillipps, No. 1470, there is one entitled "Pymte. Kennett gives the following remarks: "To pynd, to pound or impound cattle, Danelm. Sax. pyndan, includere. Hence in these midland parts the money that is given to the Heyward, or to any person who locks and unlocks the pound gate, is called Pinne lock" LANS. MS. 1034.

<sup>2</sup> The verb to pine is used not uncommonly in an active sense, as by Chaucer. R. of Rose, 3511. "To pine, punire, afficere, etc. ubi to punysche." CATH. ANG. Master Stanbridge renders calceolus "a pynson," and Elyot gives "Calceamen, a pynson showe, or socke;" to which Gouldman adds another synonym, "a pinson or pump, calceamen," &c. Duwes, in his Introductory, composed to teach the Princess Mary the French tongue, gives "women's raiments—the pynson showes, les eschapias." The derivation of this term is very obscure: it denotes, possibly, the pumps, or high unsoled shoes of thin leather, which were commonly worn with pattens about the time when the Promptorium was compiled. A large collection of these, recently discovered in London, are in the possession of C. R. Smith, Esq. F.S.A. Pinsons are mentioned in the Howard Household Book, p. 314.

tation of which was forbidden by Stat. 3 Edw. IV. 1463. Stat. of R. II. 397. "Pynsons of yrone, estricquoyers." PALSg. The term seems to be a diminutive of the Fr. pince.

<sup>2</sup> "þe pippe, pituita." CATH. ANG. "Pyppe, a sickensse, pepye." PALSg. In the version of Maer's treatise on the virtues of herbs, MS. in the possession of Hugh Diamond, Esq., it is said that "cerfoile y-dronke with malsa wole destroe þe pippe." So likewise is it stated in Arund. MS. 42, f. 66: "Chervel, y-dronkyn with muls, oityn for-dof þe pippe." "I pyppe a henne or a capon, I take the pyppe from them, ie prens la pepie dune geline. Your henness shall neuer waxe fatte tyll they be pypped." PALSg.

<sup>3</sup> In the earlier Wicliffite version Numb. vi. 4 is thus rendered: "Newe grapes and dried they shulen not eete, alle the daies in the which of auowe to the Lord thei ben sacryd; what thing may be of vyn, of grape dried vnto the popyn (pepyn, at.) thei shulen not eete;" in the later version "grape dried til to the draf" (ura passa usque ad acinum, Vulg.) The marginal gloss is added, "in Ebrey it is, fro the rynde til to the lital greynes that ben in the myddis of the grape." "A pepyn or a grafte, acinus, fecinum, granum." CATH. ANG. "Pepin, a pippin, or kernell, the seed of frute, the stones of grapes." COTg.

<sup>4</sup> Gaut. de Bibelesworth says, in the chapter "de naturele noyse des bestes—craupaud koaille, reine gaille, tadde croukeþ, frogge pypeþ." "To pype as a bryde (sic) pipiare." CATH. ANG. "Pepier, to peep, to cheep, or pule, as a young bird in the neast. Pepie-ment, the cheeping, or peeping of young birds, any such puling noise." COTg. Hence, perhaps, the phrase "at daye pype, à la pipe du jour." PALSg.

<sup>5</sup> "Pyrry, a storme of wynde, orage, borffée de vent." PALSg. Hall, at the commencement of his Chronicle of 17 Hen. VI. says, "What should I relieue the great tempestes, the sharpe blastes, the sodain piries, the vnumeasurable wyndes, the continuall raynes, whiche fell and chaunced this yere in England." W. Harrison, in the description of Britain prefixed to Holinshed's Chron. i. p. 45, observes, speaking of islands on the Eastern coast, "Forasmuch as a perrie of wind—caught hold of our sailes, and caried us forth the right waie toward London, I could not tarie to see what things were hereabouts." Cotgrave renders "Tourbillon, a gust, flaw, berrie, sudden blast or boisterous tempest of wind. Vent, a gale, flaw, or berrie of wiind." See Nares, v. Pirrie, and Jamieson, *v. <sup>1</sup> In the MS. in Sir Thos. Phillipps's collection, as likewise in the printed editions, the following distinction is here made: Plascche, flasche, or broke: Torrens, lacuna. Plascche, or flasch after a rayne: Collurio, collurium. "Plasshe of a water, flacquet." PALSG. Elyot speaks of an herb "growynge in plashes, hanynge a lyttell stalke, whiche exceedeth not foure fyngers high. It is called Heraction syderion. Nepeta, an herbe—which of some men is called wyld peny royale, and groweth in plasshye groundes." Harrison, in the Description of Britain, says that the preservation of fresh-water fish "is provided for by verie sharpe lawes, not onelie in our riuers, but also in plashes, or lakes, and ponds." Holinsh. Chron. i. 224. "Lavage, a plash; a peece of land surrounded or drowned up by water. Patouillas, a plash or puddle." COTG. "A plash, lucus, lacuna." GOULDM. Bp. Kennett gives "Plashy waies, wet under foot: to plash in the dirt; all plash'd, made wet and dirty. To plash a traveller, or strike up the dirt upon him. In the North plosly, to ploshe," &c. Lansd. MS. 1033. The word plash does not appear in Forby's Glossary as still retained in East Anglia; it is used by Sir T. Brown, Vulgar Errors, B. iii. c. 13, where he speaks of the "polwygle." Compare Teut. plas, plasch, lacuna; fossa in qua stat aqua. Hence, perhaps, may be derived, some names of places, as Plashet Farm, near Lewes; Plashet, in the Essex marsh-lands; Plaistow, Pleshey.

<sup>3</sup> In Norfolk, according to Forby, to plaw signifies to parboil; the phrase, give meat a plaw, denotes a slight boiling. Ray, in the South and East Country words, gives "To play, spoken of a pot, kettle, or other vessel full of liquor, i. e. to boil; playing hot, boiling hot. In Norfolk they pronounce it plaw." The word is used in the following recipe for making vinegar, Sloane MS. 3542, f. 16, v<sup>o</sup>: "Take a pot ful of wyne, and steke yt wele aboute þat no þynges go ynne nor owte, and put it ynne a cowdrun ful of water, and layt yt play longe þerin, and yt schal be gode ayselle sone." Compare OVYRPLAW, p. 373.

Judges, xi. 32. "Playfere, mignon." PALS.G. Fere, a companion, is a word used by Chaucer, as also the expression "in fere," in company; Cant. T. 4742, 4814. Hall, in his relation of the death of James II. of Scotland, in 1460, says, that, having slain the Douglasses, "thynking himself a kyng without either peere or fere," he assembled a great army, and laid siege to Roxburghe castle, where he perished by the bursting of one of his own cannon, 32 Hen. VI. Ang.-Sax. foera, gefera, socius.

<sup>3</sup> This ancient name of the sport of hide and seek has not been noticed by Strutt. "All hidde, jeu ou un se cache pour estre trouvé des autres." SHERW. "Cline-mugette, the game called Hod-mad-blind; Harry-racket, or, are you all hid. Capifou, a play which is not much unlike our Harry-racket, or Hidman-blind." COTT.

<sup>5</sup> In the MS. PLEYNE is found placed between pleyfere and pleyynge: possibly it had been written pleyyn by the first hand. The King's Coll. MS. reads pleyin place, and pleyint. PLEYNYN likewise occurs in the MS. between playyn and pleyyn, possibly because it had been written originally pleyynyñ.

penter's plumb-line, "riglet," and the mariner's lead, "plomb de sonde." The plummet was used in ancient times as an instrument of torture, and also as a weapon. It is said in the Golden Legend that "the Provost of Rome dyde so bete St. Urban w<sup>t</sup> plummettes." Horman remarks that "Champanyons smyte at eche other with plummetz of leed sowed in leather."

"Hir belte was of plonkete, withe birdis fulle baulde."

In Mr. Robson's edition "blenket," st. xxix.; possibly the white stuff called in French blanchet. "Ploncket colour, bleu." PALSG. "Cæsius, graye of colour, or blunkette. Scyricum, blonket colour, or light wachet. Venetus, lyght blew, or blunket." ELYOT. "Couleur pers, skie colour, a blunket or light blue." COTG. The old Gloss on Spenser's Sheph. Cal. May, explains it as signifying grey. See Nares, and Jamieson, v. Bloncat.

<sup>2</sup> The poyntel, formed of metal, or other hard material, was used like the Roman stilus for writing upon portable tablets, or writing-tables. It appears in the well-known portraits of Chaucer, and is appended by a little lace to the lowest of three buttons which serve to close the fent of the collar of his gown at the throat. Copies of this interesting portrait are found in Roy. MS. 17, D. vi., f. 90, v<sup>o</sup>; Harl. MS. 4266, f. 22; Lansd. MS. 251, and Add. MS. 5141. The last has been taken as the subject of a plate in Shaw's Dresses and Decorations. Chaucer describes the Limitour in his progress, who preached and begged alms as he went, whilst his attendant was furnished with

 And a pointel ypolished fetisly,
 And wrote alway the names, as he stood,
 Of alle folk that yave hem any good." Sompn. Tale, v. 7324.

A beautiful ivory pointel, of the workmanship of the earlier part of the fourteenth century, formerly in the Du Sommerard Collection, is preserved in the Musée des Thermes, at Paris. It is stated in the Golden Legend that "a grefe (or greffe) is properly called a pointell to wryte in tables of waxe." St. Felix was killed by his scholars therewith. Horman, in his chapter on writing, mentions the various materials of which pointels were formed: "Poyntillis of yron, and of siluer, bras, boone, or stoone, hauynge a pyne at the ende, be put in theyr case (graphiario.)" "Poyntell or caracte, esplinyue de fer." PALSG. Bishop Kennett, in his Glossarial Collections, gives "Poitrel, a stile or writing instrument, with one end sharp, and the other broad." Lansd. MS. 1033.

"Scrobs, idem qu. fossa, a deche or a polke." Harl. MS. 1002, f. 142, v<sup>o</sup>. Sir Thomas Browne, in his account of fish taken on the coast of Norfolk, speaks of congers, which, in frosty weather, upon the ebb of the tide, are left in "pulks and plashes" on the Northern coast. The word is still used in Norfolk and Suffolk, and signifies a hole full of mud, a shallow place containing water. See Forby and Moor. Ray includes it amongst North-country words, and Jennings gives it as retained in Somersetshire.

<sup>2</sup> Sir Thomas Browne, in his Vulgar Errors, makes mention of "the Aquatile or water-frog, whereof in ditches and standing plashes we may behold many millions every spring in England," produced from spawn which becomes "that which the ancients called Gyrinus, we a Porwagle, or Tadpole." B. iii. c. 13. Forby gives Purwiggy, a tadpole, and polliwig, which he considers to be a corruption of the former word. Moor, however, states that the tadpole is called a pollywiggle in Suffolk. The fishermen of the Thames have given the name polewig to the spotted goby. Yarrell, i. 254. The tadpole was also called in former times a poled, or pole-head. In the Latin-English Vocabulary, Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. f. 55, v<sup>o</sup>, occur under "Nomina vermium, Lumbricus, Pole hede: Rullus, (?) Polhed." Palsgrave gives "Poled, a yonge tode, cauesot. Pulet, the blacke thyng that a tode cometh of, cauesot," and cauesot is rendered by Cotgrave "a pole-head, or bull-head, the little black vermine whereof toads and frogs do come."

i. 276. This bird, as likewise the parrot, seems to have been a favourite ornament, introduced on tapestry or embroidered works. It is again mentioned in the Inventory of Sir John Fastolfe's effects, taken 1459, "Clothis of Arras, and of Tapstre warke. Item, ij. clothis portrayed full of popelers;" and again, in one of the bed-chambers, "Item, j. hangyng clothe of Popelers." Archæol. xxi., pp. 254, 264. It appears subsequently that the POPELERE was considered by the compiler of the Promptorium to be the same as the shoveler-duck, Anas clypeata, Linn.; and it may be observed that in medieval decorations such birds were not unfrequently represented, as appears by the Caistor inventory, above cited, the vestments discovered at Durham, attributed to St. Cuthbert, and the entry in the Bursar's accounts, given by Mr. Raine, respecting an altar there, on "le verdos" of which were depicted the eider-ducks, termed the birds of St. Cuthbert.

<sup>2</sup> "Porray, porreta, porrata." CATH. ANG. This term implies generally pease pottage, still called in French purée, and the treatises on ancient cookery contain numerous recipes for its concoction. See the instructions of the chief master-cook of Richard II., regarding "Perrey of pesone," Forme of Cury, p. 39, and the recipe for "Blaunche perreye," Harl. MS. 279, f. 25. It has, however, other significations. In the Canterbury MS. of the Medulla occurs "porrata, porrey," with this marginal addition, attributed to Somner, "gesoden wyrt mete." According to the Ortus it seems to have denoted a pottage of leeks, "poratum est cibus de poris factus, Anglice porraye;" and in a curious MS. at Middle Hill, formerly in the Heber Collection, 2336, it appears that the dish called "rampaunt pore" was chiefly compounded of pears. Poreta or porrata signify, according to Ducange, leek-pottage, and likewise the vegetable called beet, in French poirée, or porrée. It is related in the Golden Legend that St. Bernard was so frugal that often he made pottage of holm leaves; whereat a demoniac being brought to him, the evil spirit thus reviled the saint: "Thou eter of porrette, wenest y<sup>n</sup> for to take me oute of my hous? Nay, thou shalt not."

The porcupine appears to have been known in England at an early period: it is described by the appellation stria in the account of the park formed at Woodstock by Henry I., as given by Will. Malms. lib. v. p. 161. He speaks of it as a native of Africa, and states that it was sent to the King by "Willielmo de monte Piserio." Stowe mentions also the "porpentines," and divers strange beasts which were sent from far countries, and preserved in the royal park at Woodstock. In the original edition of Hamlet this animal is termed a "porpentine," and the name occurs likewise in Machyn's Diary, 1552, edited for the Camden Society by Mr. John Gough Nichols, p. 31, where the crest of Sir W. Sidney is said to have been a "porpentyn."

<sup>2</sup> In Norfolk a cold in the head is still, according to Forby, called a pose. This word is used by Chaucer, Cant. T. v. 4150, 17,011. The following remedy for a rheum is given in a manual of miscellaneous collections, Add. MS. 12,195: "For the pose: Take smale note kernelys, and roost hem, and ete hem with a lytyl powder of peper whane thou gost to bedde." Andrew Boorde says, in the Breviary of Health, "Coriza—in English it is named the pose, or reume, stopping or opilating the nosethrilles that a man can not smell," c. 91; and again, c. 306, "of the pose or snyke: Rupia is the Latin word. In English it is named the pose." "be pose, brancus, caterrus, coriza." CATH. ANG. "Coriza est morbus narium, i. e. prefucatio, Anglice the pose. Cattarrus est fluxus reumatis jugis ex naribus, the pose." ORTUS. "Pose in the nose, rime. Pose dysease, caterre. This term is thus used by Horman, "Seth this in a posenet (auxilla) by hymself." Grose explained it as denoting a small iron pot with a handle on the side, and in the Craven Dialect it signifies a boiler. See Nares and Jamieson.

Compare Germ. Prangen, ornatum arrogantius ostendere, Wacht.; Belg. Pronken. Spenser speaks of some who "pranke their ruffes." <sup>1</sup> Candlesticks in ancient times were not fashioned with nozzles, but with long spikes or prykets. Representations of such candlesticks are given in Archæologia, xiv. 279, xv. 402, xxiii. 317, xxviii. 441, Didron's Ann. Archéol. tome iii., and Shaw's Dresses and Decorations. In the description of the supper, in the Awntyrs of Arthure, "preketes, and broketes, and standertis" are mentioned, placed at intervals on the table; brochettes being tapers fixed, in the same manner as prykets, upon a broche, or spike. In the Memoriale of Henry prior of Canterbury, A.D. 1285, the term "prikett" denotes not the candlestick, but the candle, formed with a corresponding cavity at one end, whereby it was securely fixed upon the spike. Cott. MS. Galba, E. iv. f. 45. See the note on CHAWNDELERE, p. 71, where "preketes" are mentioned amongst various kinds of candles.

explained by lexicographers as signifying to beg, and to steal. In the dialect of East Anglia at the present time to prog signifies to pry or poke into holes and corners, and Grose explains it as implying to hunt for provision, to forage. See Nares and Richardson.

poillaille signifying, according to Roquefort, volaille, pullastra. Palgrave gives "Pullayne, porllane, pullayle." Poultry are called pullen by Tusser, and the word is retained in the Northern and Suffolk dialects. See Nares and Moor. Gerarde observes that in Cheshire they sow buck wheat "for their cattell, pullen, and such like."

<sup>2</sup> To put, or push, as with the head or horns, a verb still in use in Yorkshire, has been derived from Fr. bouter, to butt. Robert Branne uses it in this sense, App. to Pref. xciv. See Jamieson. "To putte, pellere." CATH. ANG. To put signifies also to cast, as in Havelok: see Sir Frederick Madden's Glossary, and notes, p. 192; Sir Isambard, v. 606, where the favourite sport of pitching stones is mentioned, of which Fitz Stephen speaks, as an exercise in which the citizens of London delighted. See also Langt. Chron. p. 26; Octovian, v. 895; and Jamieson. Marshall, in the Rural Economy of Norfolk, gives amongst dialectical expressions the verb to put, to stumble, as a horse, but it is not noticed by Forby or Moor.

<sup>1</sup> It may deserve notice that in old parlance, a quire, which properly denoted a bundle of paper, comprising a certain number of sheets, frequently was used to signify any similar bundle of sheets, or unbound volume. Chaucer, in the Envoy of his Praise of Women, bids his "little quaire" go to his heart's sovereign. Thus also the Poetical Lament written by James I. of Scots, during his detention in England, was called "the King's Quair." Horman remarks that "boughtes, whether they be hole, or hoked, set to gether in order, chartæ complicatæ, seu justæ, seu unce-(? uncatæ.) make a quayre. Though there be fewar or mo bought; in a quayr yet it is com'only called a quayre." In inventories, wills, and other similar documents, any book in sheets is commonly termed a quire; thus "Ion of Croxton," of York, bequeaths, in 1393, "a quayer of Emunde Mirroure in ynglysch." Test. Ebor. i. 185. Transcribers usually reckoned their work by quires, and numbered the quaterni, as it proceeded. In the Paston Correspondence mention is made, in a letter written about 1465, of a scribe who had copied the Chronicle of Jerusalem, and the valiant acts of Sir John Fastolf, and estimated his labour, stating that "it drew more yan xxx. whayerys off paper." Vol. iv. 72. The word quire has been usually derived from the old Fr. quayer, cahier; or by some from quarreau, a square. Compare I-l. kwer, libellus, codicillus, unico pergameno conscriptus. Forby observes that a quire of paper is called in Norfolk a quaire. In the Issue Roll of the Exch. A.D. 1422, 9 Henry V., a payment of £3. 6s. is recorded, for 66 great "quaternes" of calf skins, purchased by John Heth, Clerk of the Privy Seal, to write a Bible thereon for the King's use. "Quayre of paper, une main de papier." PALSG.

<sup>2</sup> To quail still signifies, in the dialect of East Anglia, to curdle, according to Forby and Moor. In Harl. MS. 5491, f. 192, the following direction is given. "For quailing of mylk—cast þerto a letil flour, and styre it wele." In a collection of recipes in Sir Thomas Phillipps' possession (MS. Heber. 8126) a caution occurs regarding the use of spices; "A lessone, lerne hit well: to all potage put all maner of spyes to the setlynge, safe gynger, for he wol quayle the potage for certayne." See other examples of the use of this word in the Forme of Cury, p. 73, and the Account of the Inthronization of Abp. Nevill, Leland Coll. vi. 11. Ital. "Quagliare, to curd, or congeale as milke doth." FLORIO. "I quayle, as mylke dotthe, ie quaillebotte." PALSG.

<sup>2</sup> Robert of Gloucester says that Robert Curthose was so named on account of his stature, "vor he was somdel schort."

Quarry he was, and wel ymade vorto be strong." P. 412.

Horman speaks of "a quarry and well pyght man, homo staturâ corporis quadratâ." "Quarry, fatte bodyed, or great, corpulent." PALSG. "A quarry or fat man, obesus." GOULDM. In the Dialect of East Anglia quaddy has the like signification, according to Forby. In Rich. Cœur de Lion the epithet is applied to a lance—"a long schafft stout and quarry." v. 493. In the Seuyng Sages a large hall is described as "quaire."

<sup>3</sup> Horman, in his chapter de re edificatoriâ, observes that "a quauery or a maris, and unstable foundacion must be holpe with great pylys of alder rammed downe, and with a frame of tymbre called a crosseaundre (fistucâ). In Caxton's Mirrour of the World, part ii. c. 22, it is said, "understande ye—how the erthe quaueth and shaketh, that somme peple calle an erthe quaue, by cause they fele ther the meue and quave vnder their feet." "Quaue myre, foudriere, crouliere." PALSG. Forby gives Quavery-mavery, undecided, hesitating how to decide.

<sup>4</sup> To quell, as used by the old writers, signifies to destroy life in any manner, although here apparently taken in the sense of stifling. Minot, speaking of the Comyn, says that "in haly kirk thai did him qwell." Chaucer, describing a farm yard attacked by a fox, says, "the dokes crieden as men wold hem quelle." Cant. T. v. 15,396. <sup>1</sup> To queme, Ang.-Sax. cweman, placere, is commonly used by Langtoft, Chaucer, Gower, Spenser, and other writers. Chaucer uses also the verb to misqueme, to displease. In the Wicliffite version quemeful occurs in the sense of pleasing. In the curate's instructions to his flock, according to the directions given in the Flos Florum, Burney MS. 356, f. 82, the following passage occurs, in reference to the third petition of the Lord's Prayer. "Here whe byddeþ þat as anges and holy saules quemeth God in heuene, þat whe so mowhe wyth hys grace queme hym in erþe." Palsgrave gives the verb, "I queme, I please or I satysfye, Chauser, in his Caüterbury Tales; this worde is nowe out of vse." Jamieson gives it as retained in some parts of N. Britain.

<sup>2</sup> "Queane, garse, pailorde, gauttiere." PALSG. Chaucer uses the word in this opprobrious sense. In the Vision of Piers Ploughman it is said that in the church it is hard to distinguish a knight from a knave, or "a queyne fro a queene." See Paston Letters, iv. 360.

<sup>3</sup> "Noyer, to drowne, to whirken, to stifle with water. Noié, whirkened, ouerwhelmed, as with water. Suffoqué, stifled, whirkened, smothered." COTG. "Querkened, suffocatus." GOTLDM. Querken'd is still used in this sense, in the Craven Dialect.

In Dame Julian Bernes' instructions, in the Boke of Huntynge, it is said that the hart, buck, and boar are beasts of chase, which "wyth the lynere shall be vpreryd in fryth or in felde," but that all other beasts that are hunted "shall be sought and founde wyth ratches so fre." Compare the Mayster of Game, Vesp. B. XII. f. 89. A dog that discovered his prey by scent was termed a ratche, as distinguished from a grevhound. Ang.-Sax. Ræce, rendered in Ælfric's Glossary "bruccus," q. braccus, or bracco, indogator. Gesner gives a representation of the "Canis Scoticus soga," velgo dictus ane Rache," observing that Caius says of dogs which hunt by scent, that the male is generally called a hound, the female, by the English a Brack, by the Scotch "ane Rache." See Jamieson, v. Rache, and Brachell; Ducange, v. Bracco. In the Catholicon Angl. is given "Gabrielle rache, hic canalion."

<sup>2</sup> Chaucer uses this word both as a substantive and an adverb. In the Vision of P. Ploughman the verb to rape, to hasten, occurs, as also the adverbs rapely and rapelier.

<sup>3</sup> "Plebecula, lytelle folke or raskalle. Plebs, folk or raskalle." MED. Fabian, under the year 1456, speaks of "a multitude of rascall and poore people of the cytte." Certain animals, not accounted as beasts of chace, were likewise so termed. In the St. Alban's Book it is stated that "there be five beasts which we cal beasts of chace, the buke, the doe, the foxe, the marterue, and the roe; all other of what kinde soeuer terme them Rascall." It appears, however, from the Mayster of Game, that the hart, until he was six years old, was accounted "rascayle or foly." Ve-p. B. XII., f. 25. In the Survey of the Estates of Glastonbury Abbey, taken at the Dissolution, the deer in the various parks are distinguished as "deere of anntler" and "deere of Rascall." Hearne's P. Langt. ii. 345. Horman says, "He hath bought rascals and other shepe, reiuclaus emit et promiscuas oves.—This is but rochel and rascall wine, tortinum vinum." In the Household Ordinances of Henry VIII. A.D. 1526, some kind of fish is thus termed,

"I race a writyng, I take out a worde with a pomyce or pen-knyfe—ie cpare des mots, &c.—I race a thyng that is made or graven out, as the weather or tyme dothe,—ie abhittere. Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. Robert Fill, in the "Briefe sum of the Christian faith," translated from Beza, says, "My iniquities can no more fraye nor trouble me, my accountes and dettes beinge assuredly rased and wiped out by the precions blood of Jesus Christ," f. 13, b.

<sup>2</sup> This word is placed in the MS. and in p. between REFUGE and REHERSYNGE, probably because by the first hand it had been written RECHYNGE, as in the King's Coll. MS. Palsgrave gives various significations of the verb to reach. "I rathe, I stretche out a length, ie extends. If it be to shorte rathe it out. I rathe, I cathe, I have raught (Lydgat) ie attayns. <sup>3</sup> The musical instrument called a recorder appears to be the kind of flute of which a description and representation are given by Mersennus, designated as the "flute d'Angleterre, que l'on appelle douce, et à neuf trous." Harmonie Univ. I, p. 237. He exhibits the form and construction of a set of flutes which had been sent from England to one of the Kings of France, and these representations may serve to illustrate the observation of Bacon, that "the figure of recorders, and flutes, and pipes, are straight; but the recorder hath a less bore and a greater, above and below." In Holland's version of Pliny the single pipe or recorder is mentioned. "Recorder, a pype, flete à ix. trous." PALSG. Further information respecting the various flutes used during the middle ages is given by M. de Toulmon, in his Dissertation on Musical Instruments. Mem. des Antiqu. de France, xvii. p. 131. See Nares. The early note of song-birds was termed recording, probably, as Barrington suggests, from the instrument formerly called a recorder. "I recorde, as yonge byrdes do. ie patelle. <sup>2</sup> " Reficio, to agayne stable, or to refete." MED. MS. CANT. Compare the use of the word "refetiden," (reficiebant, Vulg.) in the Wycliffite version, Deeds, c. xxviii. 2.

<sup>3</sup> The reading supplied by the King's Coll. MS.—Refute, is in accordance with the obsolete form of the word, as found in the Wycliffite version (Deut. xix. 12. Jer. xvi. 19: plur. refuytis, Ps. ciii. 18.) So also in the version of Vegicius ascribed to Trevisa, mention is made of a "refute to rynne to." (Roy. MS. 18 A. XII. B. i. c. 21.) In old French, Refuy.

<sup>4</sup> This verb, occurring in alphabetical order between Refusyn and RehercyȢ, may have been written by the first hand—RegaggyȢ. It is used by an ancient writer on the virtues of herbs (Arund. MS. 42, f. 10 b.) Speaking of the cure of sore gums or "water cancre," as easy with prompt attention, he says—"I saw a worpy leche so angry & wroth with moderes & kepirs of children þt hadde longe a-byden, þt he reiagged hem hugely, and onneþis and (with) gret dyficulte durste he, or wolde, vnderfonge hem to cure." Skelton speaks of "beggars reiagged," (Why come ye nat to courte? v. 602,) which Mr. Dyce explains as signifying all-tattered.

<sup>5</sup> Forby gives the verb to Rake as still used in Norfolk, precisely in this sense. It means "to gad or ramble in mere idleness, without any immoral implication. It is often applied to truant children." Brockett has a similar word.—"Rake, v. to walk, to range or rove about. Su.-Got. reka, to roam."

<sup>2</sup> In the Wycliffite version, Jos. x. 28, it is said of the utter destruction of Maceda, —“he lefte not þerinne nameli litte relyues,”—non dimisit in ea nisi parvas reliquias. Vulg. Roquefort explains Relief as signifying broken meat, the scraps of the kitchen; it is thus used in the Wycliffite version, as in Ruth, c. ii. —“Sche brouȝt forþ and ȝaf to her þe relifis of hir mete;”—and Matt. xiv. —“Thei token the relifis of broken gobetis twelve cofyns ful.” In the version of Barth. de Propriet. Rerum, attributed to Trevisa, it is said of a banquet, —“At the laste comyth frute and spyces, and whan they haue ete, bord clothes and relyt þen borne awaye.” In Caxton's Boke for Travellers, —“The leynge of the table, le relief de la table.” See also Maundevile's Travels, p. 250, ed. 1725. The term seems also applied to the basket in which the fragments were carried away; as in a list of kitchen furniture, in Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. f. 25, b. —“Relief, particula.”

<sup>1</sup> This word has occurred previously,—Odowre or relece, p. 362. It occurs in Lydgate's Destr. of Thebes, in the narration of the burning of the bodies of the Greeks delivered by Theseus to their wives, for funeral rites,

“But what shuld I eny lenger dwelle
The old ryytys by and by to telle—
How the bodyes wer to ashes brent;
Nor of the gommies in the flaumbe spent,
To make the hayre swetter of relees.” Arund. MS. 119, f. 76 v<sup>o</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> The use of the obsolete form of the word remnant appears in the Craven Glossary, v. Remlin, and in Palmer's Devonshire Words, v. Remlet. It occurs in the inventory of effects of a merchant at Newcastle, in 1571, in whose shop were certain “yardes of worsett in Remlauntes.” Durham Wills and Inv. Surtees Soc. vol. i. 362. So also in the Boke of Curtasye, amongst rules for behaviour at table;

“Byt not on thy brede, and lay hyt down,
That is no curteyse to vse in towne;
But breke as myche as þu wyll ete,

<sup>3</sup> Bishop Kennett, in his Glossarial Collections, Lansd. MS. 1033, gives "Reer, raw, as, the meat is reer: a reer roasted egg. Kent. I had rather have meat a little reer than overdone." Ang.-Sax. hrere, crudus. Forby and Major Moor notice the word as retained in East Anglia. It is not uncommonly used by old writers. Thus Andrew Boorde, in his Breviary of Health, of things that comfort the heart, says "maces and ginger, rere egges, and poched egges not hard, theyr yolkes be a cordiall," and he recommends for Satyriasis to eat two or three "new layd egges roasted rere," with powdered nettle seed. Langham, in his Garden of Health, frequently commends their use. "Reere, as an egge is, mol." Palsg. See also Nares.

<sup>4</sup> Obsonium is defined in the Ortus Vocabulorum to be "parvus cibus et delicatus qui post cenam contra somnum sumitur." The curious notice of the habits of his times, given by Harrison, in which he ascribes the introduction of reare suppers to "hardie Canutus," is well known, and has been cited already in the note on BEUER, vol. i. p. 34. Horman observes, in his Vulgaria,—"Rere suppers (comesatio) slee many men. He kepeth rere suppers tyll mydnyght. In this vitaylers shoppe there is sette to sale all coceyttis and pleasuris for rere suppers and iunkettis and bankettis." Palsgrave has—"Rere supper, bancquet. Rere banket, Ralias," and Cotgrave renders "regonbillonner, To make a reare supper, steale an after snpper; bancquet late aughts." See Nares, v. Rere-banquet, and Halliwell's Dictionary.

<sup>1</sup> In Norfolk, to Ret still signifies to soak or macerate in water; and a pond for soaking hemp is called a Retting-pit. See Forby's account of the modes of retting. He conjectures that the derivation of the term may be from Ang.-Sax. rith, rius. Sea weeds were formerly called reits. Bishop Kennett has the following note,—"Reits, sea weed, of some called reits, of others wrack, and of the Thanet men wore," &c. "Leppe, sea-grasse, sea-weed, reits," COTG. The term to Ret may be derived from the Flemish,—"het vlas Reeten, to hickle, bruise, or breake flax: een Reete, a hitchell with teeth to bruise flax." Hexham's Netherdutch Dictionary. "Reten, Rouir du tin ou du chanvre." Olinger.

The figurative application of the word, so often heard in America, appears from Forby to be purely East Anglian. See Bartlett's Americanisms, p. To Roil, and Rily, turbid.

<sup>2</sup> "A ryb for lyne. To ryb lyne, costare, ex(costare), nebridare." CATH. ANG. Palsgrave has—"Ribbe for flaxe." The cleaning or dressing of flax was termed ribbing, as in the version of Glauville de Propriet. Rerum. attributed to Trevisa, lib. xvii. c. 97. Flax, it is stated, after being steeped and dried, is "bounde in praty nycthes and boundels, and afterward knocked, beaten and brayed, and carded, rodded and gnodded, ribbed and hekled, and at the last sponne." Rippling flax, the North Country term, is possibly synonymous with ribbing. See Ray, N. Country Words, and Brockett, who adds,—"Su.-Got., repa lin, Baum veltre, Tent. repen, stringere semen lini." Bishop Kennett also notices it thus,—"To ripple flax, to wipe off the seed vessels, Bor. Rather to repple flax with a repple or stick. A. S. repel, baculus. Rippo, or repple, a long walking-staff carried by countrymen, Cheshire." In an Inventory (taken at North-allerton?) in 1499, are mentioned,—"a hekyll, j. d. a ryppyll came, iij. d.—a payr of wool comes, v. d." Wills and Invent. Surtees Soc. vol. i. p. 104. See RYPELYNGE of flax, infra.

<sup>3</sup> This part of the appliances of a spinner is doubtless what is now called in Norfolk "a Trip-skin,—a piece of leather, worn on the right-hand side of the petticoat by spinners with the rock, on which the spindle plays and the yarn is pressed by the hand of the spinner." <sup>2</sup> Tyrwhitt, in his Glossary to Chaucer, gives the word "Reddour," explained as strength, violence. It is the old French "Redour, reddur,"—Roideur, fermeté, dureté." ROQUEFF. In a curious poem on sacred subjects, xv. cent. Add. MS. 10,053, it occurs thus (p. 159)—

"Also thenke with hert stedefast, Whan thou wote that Goddis mercy is,

In the Ortus, Ralla is explained to be "a Raster clothe," which appears to have been used in shaving. See RASTYR HOWSE, supra, p. 424. Rylle is perhaps only another form of the word Rail, Ang.-Sax. rægl, hrægel, restimentum. See Nares v. Raile. "Rayle for a womans necke, crerechief en quarttre doubles." PALSG. Sherwood gives—"a woman's raile, Pignon," and Cotgrave renders "un collet à peignoir,"—a large raile which women put about their neckes when they comb themselves."

<sup>2</sup> In the Book of Christian Prayers, Lond. 1590, f. 38 vº, it is said,—"Giue vnto the shepheardes, whome thou hast vouchsafed to put in thy roomth, the gift of prophesie." In a letter regarding the building of Abp. Whitgift's Hospital at Croydon, 1596, the writer states of certain trenches made in preparing foundation walls,—"We are now fillinge the voyde rometh therin." Ducarel's Croydon, p. 155. <sup>2</sup> Compare COOLDER, supra, vol. I. p. 86. In the Wardrobe Account of Piers Courteys, Keeper of the Wardrobe 20 Edw. IV. 1420, occurs a payment to "John Carter, for cariage away of a grete loode of robeux, that was left in the strete after the reparacyone made uppon a hous apperteignyng unto the same Warderobe." Harl. MS. 4780. In later times the word is written "rubbryshe." Thus Horman says, in his Vulgaria,—"Battȝ and great rubbryshe serueth to fyl up in the myddell of the wall;" and Palsgrave gives "Robrisshe of stones, plastras, fourniture." Forby gives Rubbage as the term used in East Anglia.

<sup>1</sup> This may be derived from rotare; as also irregular soldiery were termed, in Low Latin, rotarii or rotarii. Palegrave gives the verb "I rowte—I assemble together in routes, or I styre aboute, je me asroute. I lyke nat this geare, that y<sup>e</sup> commens begynneth to route on this facon." See Jamieson, v. Royt.

<sup>4</sup> RONNYN appears to signify congealed or run together,—Ang.-Sax. Gerunnen, coagulatus, as milk is coagulated by rennet, called in Gloucestershire running. See also Jamieson, v. To Rin, to become curdled, &c. As here used in reference to the knotted wood, of which masers were made, the term RONNYN seems to describe the coagulated appearance of the mottled grain, not dissimilar to ropy curds. See the note on MASERE, supra, p. 328. In the note on DOROŃ, p. 125, it has been suggested that the reading of the MS. may be corrupt, and that the word should be Dogon. In the Winchester MS. is found—"Doion", Dogena." This various reading had not been noticed, when the above mentioned note was printed. Dojoum, or dudgeon, appears to denote some kind of wood, used in like manner as the motley-grained material called Maser, but its precise nature has not been ascertained.

A wick clogged with tallow is termed a Ruffly. Roughie in N. Britain signifies also brushwood or beather. Funalia were torches formed of ropes twisted together and dipped in pitch.

<sup>1</sup> The directions given in the Sloane MS. 73, f. 211, date late xv. cent., for making "cheverel lether of perchemyne," may serve to throw light on this obscure word. The leather was to be "basked to and fro" in a hot solution of rock alum, "aftir take zelkis of eyren and breke hem smale in a disch as thou woldist make therof a caudel, and put these to thyn alome water, and chaufe it to a moderate hete; thanne take it doun from the fier and put it in thi cornetrey; thanne tak thi lether and basche it wel in this sabras, to it be wel drunken up into the lether." A little flour is then to be added, the mixture again heated, and the parchment well "basked therein, and that that saberas be wel drunken up into the lether; and, if it enters not well into the lether, lay it abroad in a good long vessel that be scheld, the fleschside upward, and poure thi sabrae al aboven the lether, and rubbe it wel yn." It is also recommended "to late the lether ligge so still al a nyzt in his owen sabras." In the Ancien Riwe, edited for the Camden Society by the Rev. J. Morton, p. 364, it is said that a sick man who is wise uses abstinence, and drinks bitter sabras to recover his health: in the Latin MS. Oxon. "potat amara." It may be from the Arabic, "Shabra, a drink." See Notes and Queries, vol. ii. pp. 70, 204. Mr. Halliwell, in his Archaic Glossary, gives—"Sabras, salve, plaster," which does not accord with the use of the term as above given; it has not, however, been found in any other dictionary.

<sup>3</sup> Sic, but probably for hefte. In K. and H., and also in Pynson's edition, we find the following distinction: Scale of an hefte (in K. capala manabreii is the Latin equivalent); and Scale of a leddyr, scalare. Compare the note on LEDDYR stafe, supra, p. 293. In the translation of Vegetius, Roy. MS. 18 A. XII., "scales of ladders" are mentioned, lib. 14, c. 2. "Scale of a ladder, eschellon," PALSG. "Eschelle, a ladder or skale. eschellon, a little ladder or skale, a small step or greece." CORG.

<sup>4</sup> Compare also CHYNCERY or scar(s)nesse, supra, p. 75. In the Legenda Aurea, f. 87, b., it is recorded of St. Pawlyne that she gave to the sick largely such food as they asked, "but to herself she was harde in her sekenes and skarse." Gower treats at length of "scarsnesse," parcimonia. "Scarse, nygarde or nat sufficient, eschars: scante or scarce, eschars," PALSG.

<sup>5</sup> In the Harl. MS., and also in the Winchester MS., the word SCHELLE is omitted, Testa being given as the Latin for SCHELDRAKE. There can be little doubt that the readings of the MSS. H. K., and of Pynson's text, give the correction of this clerical error.

<sup>1</sup> Compare CYBREDE, supra, p. 77. Ray gives Sibberidge or Sibbered, signifying in Suffolk the bans of matrimony, and Sir T. Browne includes Sibrit amongst Norfolk words; see also Forby, under Sybbrit. It has been derived from A. S. Syb, cognatio, and byrht, manifestus. It has also the signification of affinity. Vol. i. p. 145. "Syde as a hode, prolixus, prolixitas; Syde as a gowne, Detluxus, talaris." CATH. ANG. "Robon, a side cassocke reaching below the knees." COGE. Bishop Kennett remarks that, in Lincolnshire and in the North, the following expressions were in use,—a "side" field, i.e. long; a "side" house or mountain, i.e. high; and, by metaphor, a haughty person was called "side." In the description of Coveitise, P. Ploughm. Vis. v. 2,857, his lolling cheeks are said to be "wel sidder than his chyn and chyveled for elde;" and, in the Mayster of the Game, a light deer and swift in running is contrasted with such as have "side bely and flankes," that is loose or hanging down, so as to hinder his speed. A. S. Side, longus.

<sup>4</sup> "Libistita, fabula, fatera," occurs in a glossary cited in Ducange. If we derive Libistica from Λιβυστίνος, Libyan, this term may have reference to some African writer of fables, as Apuleius, whose Metamorphoseon was familiar to the mediæval scholar. "Fabulæ aut Æsopiceæ (sunt) aut Libysticæ. Æsopiceæ sunt, cum animalia muta inter se sermocinasse finguntur, vel quæ animam non habent, ut urbes, &c. Libysticæ autem, dum hominum cum bestiis aut bestiarum cum hominibus fingitur vocis esse commercium." <sup>1</sup> "Cluniculum, an hole or a spayre of a womans smoke or kyrtell." ORTUS. "Sparre of a gowne, fonte de la robe." PALSG. In the curious chapter De Vestibus, in Vocab. Roy. MS. 17 C. XVII. occur, "Manicipium, spayere; apertura, spayere; transmearium, spare-bokylle," the latter being probably a brooch which closed the vent or fent of a dress. Compare FENTE, fibulatorium, supra, p. 156. "Laccema, a speyre; Urta, a speyre-hole." The term may have designated the openings in the dress, either at the neck, or at the sides, like pocket-holes, as seen in mediæval costume. The Cathol. Abbrev. 1497, thus explains "cluniculum,—le pertuis qui est es vestemens des femmes iouste le coste." Skelton gives a lament of the nun for her favourite bird—"wont to repayre and go in at my spayre," or creep in "at my gor of my goune before." Philip Sparow.

In Will. and Werwolf, we find Spelde, with the same signification as Spalle. See Brockett.

This term, of such frequent occurrence in local names in many parts of England, has been derived from Ang.-Sax. "Totian, eminere tanquam cornu in fronte." See Dr. Bosworth's A. Saxon Diet. We find, however, the verb to Tote in several old writers, signifying to look out, to watch, to inspect narrowly, to look in a mirror, &c. See P. Ploughman, Spenser, Skelton, Tusser, &c. Thus in Havelok, 2105, "He stod, and totede in at a bord;" Grafton, 577, describes a "totyng hole" in a tower, through which the Earl of Salisbury, looking out, was slain by shot from a "goon," at the siege of Orleans in 1427. Gouldman gives the verb "to toot," as synonymous with to look. Mr. Hartshorne, in his Salopia Antiqua, enumerates several of the numerous instances of the name Toothill, Castle Tute, Fairy Tcote, &c. and the list might be largely extended. The term seems to denote a look-out or watch tower. In the version of Vegetius, Roy. MS. 18 A. In the earlier Wicl. version, 2 Kings, V. v. 7 is thus rendered; "Forsothe Daud toke the tote hil Syon (arrem Sion) that is, the citee of Daud;" and v. 9, "Daud dwellide in the tote hil" (in arce) in the later version "Tour of Syon." Again, Isai. xxi. 8, "And he eriede as a leoun vp on the toothhil (speculam) of the Lord I am stonde de contynuelly by day, and vp on my warde I am stonde de alle nyztus;" in the later version, "on the totyng place of the Lord." The Emperor's steward walking overhead hears her moan, and intercedes for her.

<sup>3</sup> A traves or travers is explained by Sir H. Nicolas in his Glossarial Index, Privy P. Exp. of Eliz. of York, p. 259, as a kind of screen with curtains for privacy, used in chapels, halls, and other large chambers; he cites several instances of the use of the term in household accounts and other documents, to which the following may be added. In the inventory of effects of Henry V. in 1423, we find "j. travers du satin vermaille, pris viij. li. avec ij. quishons de velvet vermaille," &c. probably for the king's chapel; also a "travers" for a bed; see Rot. Parl. vol. iv. pp. 227, 230. Chaucer, in the Marchantes Tale, it will be remembered, thus uses the term in the narrative of the nuptial festivity—"Men dranken, and the Travers drawe anon." In a Survey of the manor of Hawsted, in 1581, it is stated that Sir William Drury possessed "Seitum manerii, &c. uno le mote circum-jacente, uno le traces ante portam messuagii predicti, et unam magnam curiam undique bene edificatam." Cullum's Hawsted, p. 142. Sir T. More was so greatly in favor during 20 years of his life at the court of Henry VIII. that, as Roper says, "a good part thearof used the kinge upon holie daies, when he had donne his owne devotions, to sende for him into his traverse, and theare, sometimes in matters of Astronomy, Geometry, Divinity, and suche other faculties, and sometimes of his worldly affaires, to sit and converse with him." In this and other instances a traverse seems to have been a kind of state pew, or closet. So likewise we read that when Queen Elizabeth visited Cambridge in 1564, on the south side of the chapel at King's College was hung a rich Traves of crimson velvet for the queen's majesty; and when she entered the chapel, desiring to pray privately, she "went into her Travyes, under a canopy." Le Keux, Mem. of Camb. vol. ii. King's Coll. pp. 20, 21. Thus also Fabian relates that the king coming to St. Paul's "kneled in a trawers purveyed for hym" near the altar. Chron. 9 Hen. VI. A Traverse is explained in the Glossary of Architecture as having been a screen with curtains, in a hall, chapel, or large chamber.

<sup>1</sup> "A trave for to scho horse in, Ferratorium," CATH. ANG. This term, it will be remembered, is used by Chaucer, in his description of the Miller's young wife, where he says—"she sprong as a colt in a trave" (rhyming to save). Miller's Tale. This is doubtless the frame used for confining an unruly horse whilst being shod. According to Forby, a smith's shoeing shed is called in Norfolk a Traverse. Edm. Heyward, of Little Walsingham, blacksmith, bequeaths to his wife, in 1517, "my place wiche is called the house at the traverse," a term which may probably have been connected with that occurring above, Norfolk Archaeology, vol. i. p. 266. Palsgrave gives only "Trough for smythes, Auge à marichal."

<sup>2</sup> Antidotum, MS. and S. P. The composition of various kinds of Theriaca, an antidote for bites of serpents and venomous animals, is given by Pliny and other writers. Scribonius Largus speaks of it as made of the flesh of vipers. In the Middle Ages it was highly esteemed against poison, venom of serpents, and certain diseases; the nature of the nostrum may be learned from ancient medicinal treatises, such as Nic. de Hostresham's Antidotarium, Sloane MS. 341. The Treacle of Genoa appears to have been in very high repute; its virtues are thus extolled by Andrew Borde, physician to Henry VII. "Whan they do make theyr treacle a man wyll take and eate poysen and than he wyl swel redy to borst and to dye, and as sone as he hath takyn trakle he is hole agene." Boke of the Introd. of Knowledge, 1542. Thus also says Caxton, in the Book for Travellers, "of bestes, venomous serpentes, lizarts, scorpions, flies, wormes, who of thise wormes shall be byten he must haue triacle, yf not that he shall deye!" We cannot marvel that costly appliances were often provided wherein to carry so precious an antidote, so as to be constantly at hand, such as the "pixis argenti ad tiriacam," Close Roll 9 Joh.; the "Triacle box du pere apelle nue Hakette, garniz d'or," among the precious effects of Henry V.; the Godet, having treacle, the gift of John de Kellawe, found with relics and offerings to the shrine of St. Cuthbert at Durham, in 1383; and the "Tracleere argenteum et deauratum cum costis de birall," bequeathed by Henry, lord Scrope in 1415 to his sister. A curious illustration of the great esteem in which Treacle of Genoa was held, and of the difficulty of obtaining it unadulterated, occurs in the Paston Letters, vol. iv. p. 264; and in 1479, during the great sickness in England, John Paston entreats his brother Sir John to send him speedily "11 pottys of tryacle of Jenne, they shall coste xvj.d.—the pepyll dyeth sore in Norwiche;" vol. v. pp. 260, 264. In Miles Coverdale's translation of Wermulierus' Precious Pearle, it is said that "the Phisitian in making of his Triacle occupieth serpents and adders and such like poison, to driue out one poyson with another." The term occasionally occurs to designate remedies differing greatly from the true theriaca. In Arund. MS. 42, f. 15 b. we read that juice of garlic "fordoþ venym and poyson myztly, and þat is þe skyle why it is called Triacle of vppebond, or ellys homly folkys Triacle."

<sup>3</sup> Compare IOGULOWRE, supra, p. 263. In the later Wicliffite version 2 Chron. c. 33, v. 6, is thus rendered, "Enchaunteris (ether tregetours) that disseyuen mennis wittis." Chaucer uses the word, and also Treget, in allusion to marvellous tricks resembling those still practised in India. See Frankeleyn's Tale, and Tyrwhitt's note on line 11,453. Horman says, in his Valyaria, "a ingler with his troget castis (caframentis) deceueth mens syght; —the trogettars (prestigiatores) behynd a clothe shew forth popett; that chatre, chlyde, iuste and fyghte together." <sup>1</sup> Possibly a trippet, which, according to Mr. Halliwell's Prov. Dict., is the same as trip, a ball of wood, &c. used in the game of trip, in the North of England, as described by Mr. Hunter in his Hallamshire Glossary. The ball is struck with a trip-stick. Tritura is rendered in the Ortus merely in its ordinary sense of threshing.

<sup>4</sup> In provincial dialect, in some localities, Trussel signifies a stand for a cask. Mr. Wright, in his useful Dictionary of Obsolete English, states that the word signifies also a bundle, the diminutive doubtless of truss, and, in Norfolk, a trestle, a use of the term which Forby has overlooked. Moor gives, in his Suffolk Words, Tressels or Trussels, to bear up tables, scaffolds, &c. "Trussulla, a trussell." ORTUS. This word also designated the punch used in coining. "Trousselan, a trussell, the upper yron or mould that's used in the stamping of coyne." COTE.

Among the gifts of Adam, abbot of Peterborough, 1321, a chasuble is mentioned "de tule samito." Sparke, 232. See also in Sloane MS. 73, f. 214, a "Resseit for to make bokerham tuly, or tuly bred, secundam Cristiane de Prake et Beme;" the color being described as "a maner of reed colour as it were of crophe mader," which by a little red vinegar was changed to a manner of redder color.

<sup>3</sup> The mineral Turbith, a yellow sulphate of mercury, may be here intended. The word is found in the Winchester and Add. MSS. only. The term Turpethum, however, is explained by Rulandus in his Lexicon Alchemia, as derived from Arabic, and used to designate some bark or root of a plant, which may have been the spice with which the compiler of the Promptorium was familiar.

<sup>4</sup> See FLAGGE, supra, pp. 163, 164, and SWARDE, p. 482. “Turfe of the fenne, Tourbe de terre. Turfe flagge sworde, Tourbe.” PALSG. “A Turfe, cespes, gleba. A Turfe grafte, turbarium.” CATH. ANG. The distinction above intended seems to be retained in East Anglian dialect, according to Forby, who gives the following explanation;—“Turf, s. peat; fuel dug from boggy ground. The dictionaries interpret the word as meaning only the surface of the ground pared off. These we call flags, and they are cut from dry heaths as well as from bogs. The substance of the soil below these is turf. Every separate portion is a turf, and the plural is turves, which is used by Chaucer.” In Somerset likewise, peat cut into fuel is called turf, and turves, according to Jennings' Glossary. In a collection of English and Latin sentences, late xv. cent. Arundel MS. 249, f. 18, compiled at Oxford for the use of schools, it is said,—“I wondre nat a litle how they that dwelle by the see syde lyvethe when ther comythe the eny excellent colde, and namely in suche costys wher ther be no woodys; but, as I here, they make as great a fire of torves as we do of woodes.”

It may be observed that before the manufacture and common use of earthenware, cups, mazers, and various turned vessels of wood were much employed, and the craft of the turner must have been in constant request. Chaucer, in the Reve's Tale, describing the skill of the Miller of Trumpington in various rural matters, says he could pipe, and fish, make nets, "and turnen cuppes, and wrastlen wel and shete."

<sup>3</sup> Hardyng relates that St Ebbie and the nuns in her company cut off their noses and upper lips, (which was "an hogly sight") for fear of the Danes—"to make their foes to hoke (al. bouge or vgge) sowith the sight." Chron. c. 107. "Uglysome, horryble, exceuable," PALSG. "To Hug, abominari, detestari, rigere, execrari, fastidire, horrere. Hug-some, abominacio, &c. To Vg, abominari, &c. ut in H. litera. <sup>4</sup> "Vyce, a tournynge stayre, Vis. Vyce of a enppe, Vis. Vyce to putte in a vessel of wyne to drawe the wyne out at, Chauch pleure," PALSG. Chaucer describes how suddenly waking in the still night, he paced to and fro, "till I a winding staire found—and held the vice aye in my hond," softly creeping upwards. (Chaucer's Dream). Here Vice seems to designate the newel, or central shaft of the spiral stair. In the Contract for building Fotheringhay church, 1425, is this clause,—“In the sayd stepyll shall be a Vyce tournynge, serving till the said body, aisles, and qwere both beneth and abof;” the “vyce dore” of the steeple is mentioned in Churchwardens’ accounts at Walden, Essex; and amongst payments for building Little Saxham Hall, 1506, occur disbursements for a vice of free-stone, and another of brick, which last is called in the context a “staier.” Gage’s Suffolk, pp. 141, 142. In the earlier Wicliffite Version, Ezck. 41, v. 7, is thus rendered—“and a street was in round, and stiede upward bi a vice (rochteam), and bar in to be soler of þe temple by cumpas; (styngie upward by the hec; toure” later version.) “A vyce, ubi a turne grece,” CATH. ANG. Roquefort gives “Viz. ; escalier tournant en forme de vis.”

<sup>1</sup> Some kind of brooch, a fastening for the hood, seems to be here intended. The capitulum, or chevesaille, was closed at the neck with some such ornament, to which, from certain peculiarities in its fashion, the name spira may have been properly assigned. Chaucer describes, Rom. of the R. v. 1080, that with a tasseled gold band and enameled knops "was shet the riche chevesaille" worn by Richesse.

<sup>2</sup> Vinarium, according to Ducange, may signify a vineyard, or a wine-vessel, poculum. The term which occurs above may, however, designate a vessel for vinegar, Vinaigrier, Fr. The cruets for wine, or burettes, for the altar, are sometimes called vinageria, or vinacheria.

<sup>3</sup> This term may probably be traced to the French Vironner, to veere, turne about; Virer, to wheel about, &c. COTG. From the rotatory movement doubtless certain mediæval machines were called Vernes, or Farnes, as in accounts of works at Westminster Palace, t. Edw. I., where, with payments for ropes, &c. mention frequently occurs of "gynes voe' fernes;" and, in the Compotus of W. de Kellesey, clerk of the works, 1328, many payments occur for timber and iron-work, "circa facturam ejusdam Verne sive Ingenii constructi pro meremio majoris pontis aquatici Westmonasterii rupti decaso et jacente in aqua Tamisie ibidem exinde levando et guyndando." <sup>4</sup> The ring of metal now termed a ferrule. The Duchess of Brabant gave to her father Edw. I., as a new year's gift, "j. par cultellorum magnorum de ibano et eburn' cum viroll' arg' deaur." Lib. Gard. 34 Edw. I. In the St. Alban's Book, sign. h. j. are directions for making a fishing-rod;—"Vyrell the staffe at bothe endes with longe hopis of yren or laten in the clenest wysc, with a pyke in the nether ende, fastnyd wyth a rennyge vyce to take in and oute youre crophe" (i. e. the top joint).

<sup>1</sup> Although written WERLDE, it would appear by its place in alphabetical arrangement that this was written WERDE by the first hand, as in other MSS. So in the Paston Letters, passim; for instance, vol. iii. p. 350, in allusion to troublous times of Henry VI., "Feyth! here is a coysy werd." In the version of Vegesius, Roy. MS. 18 A. XII., we read that "it happethe ofte to somme of ther wordi dedes to be chosen to dignities."

<sup>2</sup> In P. Ploughm. Crede, v. 866, the ploughman's wife is described as following him—"wrapped in a wynwe shete to weren hire fro wederes." In the curious description of armour in the Romance of Clariotes, some are said to prefer target and spear, some a strong targe, "and some a pavelde his body for to were." See also Havelok, R. Brunne, &c. A.-Sax. verian. manice.

<sup>2</sup> The precise nature of the weapon here intended has not been ascertained; in the Roll of effects of Sir John Fastolfe, i. Henry VI. occur in the Great Hall at Caistor six "wifles," hanging up with cross-bows, a boar-spear, &c. Archæologia, vol. XXI. p. 272. Sir S. Meyrick supposed they were swords of wood for practice. At the great muster of citizens of London in 1539, described by Hall, there were "Wyfflers" on horseback, with "propre iavelyns or battel-axes in ther handes," and 400 Wyfflers on foot, active persons clad in white silk, &c. "euery man hauyng a javelyn or slaugh sword." Forby, Vocab. of E. Ang., describes the active Whiffers who cleared the way for the processions of the Corporation at Norwich, bearing swords of lath or latten, which they keep in constant motion, "whiffing the air on either side." He proposes to derive the term from A.-S. wæflere, blatens. It appears, however, more probable that they received the name from the weapons called wyfles. Douce, in his Illustrations of Shakespeare, K. Henry V. act 5, supposes the "mighty whiffler 'fore the king," preparing his way, to have been a fifer. Minshew defines him to be a club or staff-bearer. See Nares's Glossary. In Bagford's collection, Harl. MS. 5944, f. 174 b, is a curious representation of the Ages of Man, engraved by Stent, 1665. Childhood appears as the "hinch boy" to the Mayor. Youth is dressed as a "swashing whiffler," with his staff and chain.

<sup>3</sup> The invention of combustible or explosive compounds for purposes of war dates from remote antiquity in the East. Their origin and nature has been fully investigated by H. M. the Emperor of the French, in his remarkable work on the History of Artillery; we may refer also to the treatise De l'Ar Grégeois, by MM. Reinaud and Favé, and to the Essai sur le Feu Grégeois, by M. Lalanne. The term Wild Fire, here given as synonymous with Greek fire, occurs repeatedly in the Romance of Coer de Lion, written about t. Edw. I. The dromond captured by Richard between Cyprus and Acre was laden "with wyld fyr and other vytayle;" line 2463; wild fire was projected by tubes called "trumpes;" at the siege of a city were used "arweblast of vys," with quarrels, staff-slugs, and trebuchets, and the besiegers "blewe wyld fyr in trumpes of gynne;" line 5229. A distinction seems occasionally made; in a sea-fight Richard east out of his galley wild fire into the sky, "and fyr Gregeys into the see," so that the water appeared all burning with the dreadful compound. In Chron. of Eng. written about t. Edw. II. a strange tale may be found of the hot bath concocted by King Bladud, with many things craftily combined in brass tuns,—brimstone, salgemme and saltpetre, sal ammoniac and nitre, "with wyld fur ymad ther to." Ritson, Metr. Rom. vol. ii. p. 277. The popular tales regarding these inextinguishable compounds are not without interest as connected with the prototypes of those appliances of war which in our days arrest such universal attention. Caxton, in the Mirour of the World, part ii. c. 21, says of divers fountains, that there is one towards the East "wherof is made fyre grekyssh with other myxtyons that is put therto, the whiche fyre whan it is taken and light is so hoot, that it can not be quenched with water, but with aysel, uryne, or with sonde only. The Sarasyns selle this water right dere and derrer than they doo good wyne." After the time when gunpowder came into general use the deadly volants and compositions devised by the Arabs, as detailed in M. Reinaud's curious treatise, were not wholly abandoned. Grafton tells us that, at the siege of Guisnes, in 1410, the men of war within "shotte so fiercely, and cast out wilde fyre in such abondance, that the assaylants were faine to retyre." In the following century we find evidences of the continued use of such combustible appliances of war. Amongst munitions for a fleet which conveyed troops to Scotland, in 1545, under the Earl of Lennox, occur—"xx. Tronkes chardged with wylde fyer: vj. morest spyckes laden with wylde fyer, vj. horstakes laden with wylde fyer." State Papers, vol. III. p. 543. Again, in an inventory of stores in Royal Arsenals, taken on the accession of Edw. VI. in 1547, we find, at Berwick, arrows for fire-works; and, at Newhaven, arrows with wild-fire, &c. MS. Soc. Ant. Lond. "Wylde fyre, Feu Sauvage, feu Gregois." PALS. The term sometimes designates some disease, possibly erysipelas, of which and of its remedies see Sloane MS. 1571, f. 51, b. Robert of Gloucester, indeed, affirms that English blood is so pure that the dire disorder, that men call "Holy fur or wilde fuyr," cometh not to this realm, and that French men visiting our shores are healed of that evil. The word was moreover used as signifying tinder or some inflammable fungus; thus we find "Wildfire, Lichen, vide Liverwort." GOULD. See the notes on GUNNE, supra, p. 218.

<sup>3</sup> See BOTME of threde, or clowchen, supra, p. 45, and CLOWCHYN, or clowe (al. clewe), p. 83. Globus and glomus signify, according to the Ortus, "coadunatio et glomeratio filorum—a clewe of threde." Clowchyn was probably a diminutive; according to Forby three skeyns of hempen thread are called a clue in Norfolk.

such sylvan creatures being of a savage nature. In the sixteenth century the word became corrupted into Woodhouse, a familiar family name in East Anglia. Horman observes, in his Vulgaria, "Woode wosis be vpwarde nostrelde; Satgri sunt sili."

<sup>3</sup> Leland, Itin. vol. vii. f. 70 b. describes the “polecye,” whereby, in 1247, the haven at Bristol was improved; in old time ships came only up by Avon to a place called the Bek, where the bottom was very rough. By cutting a channel, and introducing the waters of the river Frome there was, “made softe and whosy harborow for grete shipps.” Lye, in his Add. to Junius Etym. gives “Wos, woose, humus padulosa, vet. Angl.” The name Blakewose, a priory in Kent, may have been taken from the clayey or miry soil. R. Brunne, relating the landing of William the Conqueror by a plank laid from his ship to the shore, says,—

<sup>1</sup> In the Harl. MS., which has been used as the text in preparing this edition of the Promptorium, no uniform rule appears to have been laid down in regard to the use of the Anglo-Saxon character þ, in place of which Th constantly occurs, probably through carelessness of the transcriber. Here, however, the words thus commencing are found in the usual position assigned to þ, towards the close of the Anglo-Saxon alphabet; each being accompanied by the same word, written with Th, as if its more recondite or archaic form required such explanation. These circumstances are not undeserving of notice. In the King's College MS. the repetition is not found, the words being written with þ only. In the Middle Hill MS. they are written thus—Yanne or thann—Yowtyng or thowtyng, the character y being uniformly used in that MS. instead of þ. In the Winchester MS. þ is commonly, but not invariably, used throughout, and the words in this portion of the alphabet are written without uniformity. Pynson and Julian Notary printed invariably with y for þ, and, in the copy of the rare edition by the former in the Royal Library, British Museum, the following MS. note is found: "All these Y. stande for Th. acordinge as the Saxon carracte was in this sorte—þ, and so we pronounce all these wordes at this day with Th." In W. de Worde's edit. 1516, the whole of the above are omitted, and, immediately after the alphabetical section W, follow Ya, Yanyng, &c., to the close, printed with Y. instead of ȝ, as in all the other texts which have been available for collation. This may, however, be merely a typographical error.

<sup>2</sup> Compare THOWTYN, or seyn thow to a mann, Tuo, supra, p. 492; and ȝEETYN, or sey ȝee, infra, p. 537, where the reading in other MSS. and in Pynson's text is "seyn ȝe with worchep, or worship." the language of prayer, is well known. Of its use as betokening contempt, or in addressing inferiors, examples might be cited from an early period. Shakspeare describes the foolish suitor in "Twelfth Night," desirous to provoke his rival the Duke of Illyria with a challenge, and thus advised—"If thou thou'st him some thrice it shall not be amiss." Act iii. sc. 2. At an earlier period the question of monastic propriety in regard to addressing novices contemptuously by thee and thou was thought deserving of discussion at the General Chapter of Northampton (See c. x. de Novitiis). Erasmus in his Adagia relates the crafty subterfuge of a miserly patient, who repaid his German physician with idle promises; whereupon the latter meeting him one day reminded him of the obligation. "Cum forte medicus eum Latine numero singulari appellasset, ibi, velut atroci laeessitus injuria, vah! inquit, homo Germanus tuissas Anglum?" and so on that pretence the fee remained unpaid. Thus, likewise, in his treatise "de ratione conscribendi epistolas," c. xii., Erasmus says, "Quid me tuissas? tuissa famulos tuos."

"Yarroway, yarroway, bear a white blow;
 If my love love me, my nose will bleed now."

See Forby's Vocab. E. Angl., App. p. 424. The omen may possibly have been regarded as of greater value by the use of this particular plant because it was a homely remedy against bleeding. Thus Langham, in his Garden of Health, says of "Milfoyle or Yarrowe"—stamp it and apply it to wounds to stop the blood, and to stop bleeding at the nose."

Gerarde observes that rhubarb is commended by Dioscorides as a remedy for "Yexing or the Hicket;" and, in Andrew Boorde's Breviary of Health, c. 325, "doth shewe of yexing or the hicket: singultus is the Latin word; in English it is named the yexe or the hicket, and of some the dronken man's cough." A race of green ginger, he adds, is an excellent remedy. Dr. W. Turner assures us that the broth of leaves and seed of dill "swageth y<sup>e</sup> hickoke." Chaucer uses the word yexing as signifying sobbing. Test. of Love, l, f. 272 b.

ORTHOGRAPHIC INDEX.

In this Index are given the principal words which are irregularly spelled, together with their modern spelling. Those archaic words are consequently omitted which have no modern orthography. It has not been thought necessary to enlarge the index by the insertion of those words which, although somewhat irregularly spelled, are but little out of their alphabetical place. As has been stated in the Advertisement, p. vii., the sole object has been to facilitate the reference to such words as are mis-spelled and considerably out of place.

<sup>a</sup> It has been suggested that it would be convenient if the words illustrative of certain special subjects were grouped together under general heads. For Architecture, Armour, Cookery, Dress, the Fauna and Flora with which the author seems to have been conversant, and some other subjects, this Index supplies means of reference, not only to the notes, but also to most of the kindred words occurring in the Promptorium under each class respectively, but to which only brief allusion, if any, will be found in the Notes. Of the words last mentioned the lists will be found at the foot of the page.

ADDITIONAL NOTES AND CORRECTIONS.

Page 5, b. line 26, for A-cethen, read A-cethe. The word is written in the Harl. MS. a-cethē, but the final contraction must be regarded as an error of the transcript. In the Winch. MS. it is written "a-cethe." Compare Fulfyllyñ, or make a-cethe in thyng þat wantythe, p. 182; and Make a-cethe, p. 321.

Page 8, note 4, in the quotation from the metrical paraphrase of Vegetius, Cott. MS. Titus A. xxiii. the word "remue" should apparently be read "reumé:" in the original, "rheuma." Compare the curious version attributed to Trevisa, Roy. MS. 18. A. XII. where the word is thus rendered: "This ebbing and flowing that is called rewme of the see." B. iv. c. 42. See also Lansd. MS. 285, f. 136, b. In the French version attributed by Caxton to Christine de Pise the word is translated "rheume." Akyr, Eagre, Higre, or Agar, is a name to be traced probably to that of the great Ocean-god of the Northern Mythology, Oegir or Ægir; the drowned were the prey of Rán, his consort. In Lyly's Galathea is the following allusion to the Akyr: "He [Neptune] sendeth a monster called the Agar, against whose coming the waters roare, the fowles fle away, and the cattle of the field, for terror, shun the banks." Finn Magnussen derives Ægir from the verb ægia, to flow.

Page 15, note 3. It should be observed that the printed volume cited in this note, and elsewhere, as Mr. Wilbraham's Latin-English Dictionary, has been ascertained to be Pynson's edition of the Ortus, described in the Preface, p. lvii. The variations in the rendering of Ciniflo, in MSS. of the Medulla Grammaticæ, are given in the Preface, p. xxii. See also the note, ibid. In a Nominale xv. cent. in the possession of Mr. Joseph Mayer, F.S.A., and edited by Mr. Thomas Wright, in his Volume of Vocabularies, cap. 4, p. 212, "Nomina dignitatum laicorum," occurs, amongst servants, "Hic cimiflo (sic) a nask-kyste," namely, as Mr. Wright explains it, "the askfyse, the servant who made and blew the fire." Hexham gives, in his "Netherdutch" and English Dictionary, 1648, "Assche-vijster, one that sits alwayes on the hearth, hanging his head over the ashes."

- Page 37, a. line 24, for nemor read nenior. Compare Lullyñ, p. 317.
 ——— line 26, for sepicio read sopicio.
- Page 41, a. line 10. In Winch. MS. Blowyn as man with wonde. Both honde and wonde are doubtless for onde. Compare Oonde, or brethe, p. 364. This ve does not occur in MS. K.
- Page 46, a. line 13. Compare Budde, fly, p. 54, and Maltebowde or wevyl, p. 323. Warbote, p. 516, may be another compound of the word boud, bode, &c. See Mr. Adams' remarks on names of certain insects, Trans. Philol. Soc. 1858, p. 102.
- Page 61, b. line 7. At the end of a MS. of the Medulla Grammaticæ in the editor's possession, (described Pref. App. p. l.) is twice written "Dedule, dedule, care away, care away."
- Page 65, b. line 11; Celf wylly, Winch. MS.
- Page 66, b. line 19, for pentys read serpentys. This correction is supplied by the reading of MS. S. which was not known to the Editor when this page was printed. The sense being thus ascertained, it is obvious that the curious passage cited in the note is wholly foreign to the purpose.
- Page 69, b. line 11, for Charyawnt the Winchester MS. gives Chargabyl.
- Page 73, a. line 8; the reading of the MS. —tetyñ—seems questionable. Compare Fretyñ or cheryñ, p. 179. The Winchester MS. however, agrees with the Harl. MS. and gives Cherwyn', or tetyñ'.
- Page 85, a. line 6. Cocurmete, MS. S. Compare Cookerynge mete, Carificio, p. 86, occurring amongst the nouns. Mr. Halliwell gives "Cokyrmete, clay, Pr. Parv.; corresponding to the Spanish tápiā." Archaic Dict. "Tápiā, a mud wall." Perceval's Span. Dict.
- Page 89, note 2, See Forby, v. "Malt-cumbs," malt-dust; the little sprouts, . . . separated by the screen."
- Page 93, b. line 17, Corphynn, S. Jamieson cites Aberdeen Reg. 1543, "ane thousand corf keyling," corft fish being as he says boiled in salt and water. In the Household Book of James V. King of Scots, 1529, occur "mulones corf; mulones recentes," &c. On the Eastern coast a floating basket for keeping fish, is called a Corf; possibly "Corphun" may denote herrings either salted in a corf, or packed for conveyance in a basket so called.
- Page 96, a. line 13. In Winch. MS. Cowerde, herteles, longe thoke. Compare Thoke, p. 491. Ray, Sir T. Browne, and Forby give "Thokish, slothful, sluggish." In Lincolnshire "Thoky."
- Page 97, transpose notes 4 and 5.
- Page 109, a. line 17, for zeue read zeue.
- Page 116, b. line 9, for Aristotelis read Aristoteles.
- Page 117, a. line 11, after androchiatorium insert κ. Compare Vacherye, or dayrye, p. 507.
- Page 122, b. line 2; the reading of the MS. is "arbitrer," but the word ought doubtless to have been written arbitër, according to the Catholicon.

Page 122, b. line 17. Holomochus, the reading of the Harl. MS., is doubtless corrupt, as has been noticed in the Preface, p. xxxiv. note c. Aristotle repeatedly uses the word Βωμολοχος, a low jester. Thus likewise I find in the Ortus "Bomolochus, i. seurra (a brawler); Bomolochia, i. seurrilitas."

Page 125, note 3. The conjecture that the reading of the Harl. MS. (Doron) is corrupt, and suggesting "dogon" as a correction, has been confirmed by collation of MS. A, with which the editor had not been acquainted. The reading there found is "Doion", Dogena;" of this Latin word the signification has been sought in vain. Dugon (Jamieson), dudgeon, dungeon (N. country), dogone, A. N., seem to have been terms of contempt. See Wright's Dict. of Obsolete and Provincial Words. "Dungy, cowardly," Wiltz. M. de Haan Hetteema, in his list of Archaic words compared with Frisian and Dutch, gives "Dogone, a term of contempt. F. dogeniet, D. deugniet, nequam." Trans. Philol. Soc. 1858, p. 153.

"though I am plain and dudgeon,

I would not be an ass and to sell parcels."—Beaum. and Fletcher; Captain.

"Think'st thou my spirit shall keep the pack-horse way,

That every dudgeon low invention goes?"—Drayton.

Nares cites many authorities, from which it would seem that "Dudgeon" was a mottled or hard wood for hafting daggers, to which allusion is made by Shakespeare. It was likewise used for drinking bowls, or masers. Compare Ronnyn as dojoun or masere, p. 436 b. supra. Amongst gifts to St. Alban's Abbey we find "ciphum de dugun ornatum argento cum cooperculo de eodem ligno." Cott. MS. Nero D. vii. f. 103.

Page 126, b. line 20, fulle wroste; and page 129, b. lines 6, 8, Dowsty, and Dostyr. It has been suggested that in these words the s should have been printed f. Probably the author wrote "wroust, dowty, dowtyr;" a copyer may have supplied the guttural by an f, which was possibly mistaken for an s. It deserves notice that gh is not unfrequently, especially in the Eastern counties, pronounced like f, as in cough, laugh, trough, &c. and thus also in the name Rougham in Suffolk.

Page 143, note 2. In MS. S. "Ese, fyschys mete for a hooke." Compare Medulla Gramm. MS. Cant. "Inesco, i. pascere vel per escam decipere, to bayte or ease."

Page 145, b. line 3. Facet is the title of a popular moral work in Leonine verse supplementary to Cato, or the Liber Cathonis. See p. 63. Fabricius states that it is cited by Ugutio, who wrote about 1190. Warton affirms that it was written by Daniel Ecclesienis, or Church, an officer at the court of Henry II. about 1180. It was called "Cato parvus" or "minor," and Urbanus; it was translated into English by Benet Burghie, and also possibly by Lydgate. Dibdin, Typ. Ant. vol. i. p. 201.

It was printed frequently, among the Auctores octo Morales, and separately at Lyons, in 1488 and 1490; Deventer, 1496; Cologne, &c. Dom Rivet attributes it to John de Garlandia, but erroneously. MSS. of the Poema Faceti or l'arvus Cato are numerous; see Harl. MS. 2251; No. 1627 amongst Sir Kenelm Digby's MSS. in the Bodleian; MS. Caius Coll. Cantabr. 1051; MS. Trin. Coll. Dub. 275, &c.

Page 310, b. line 7; compare Lokdore, p. 311, and Lukchester, p. 316. Mr. Wright, in a memoir on the History of the English Language read at a meeting of the Historic Society of Lancashire and Cheshire (see their Transactions, vol. ix. p. 155), observes that in the vernacular of Oxfordshire a woodlouse is called a lockchester, or lockchest.

Page 341, a. line 1, for mancus, read mantus, thus explained in the Catholicon: "mantus, quia manus tegat tantum, est enim brevis amictus," &c.

Page 440, note 1. In a Nominale, MS. xv. cent., in possession of Mr. Joseph Mayer, printed in the volume of Vocabularies edited by Mr. T. Wright, I find, under the head "De speciebus liguminis,—Hoc pomarium, appul-juse; hoc jurcellum, jur-sylle; hoc sarabracium, sarabrase," &c. p. 241. It has been suggested that the term sabrace may have some connection with "Sabrierium, condimentum acuti saporis," in French saupiquet. Ducange.

Page 489, note 2, at the feast on the marriage of Margaret sister of Edward IV. 1468, a roast swan was brought to table, "standing in a tarrage." Exc. Hist. p. 237. "Terrage, terrasse;" Gloss. Gall. in Du Cange, edit. Henschel, t. vii. See also "Terragium," t. vi., explained as signifying a terrace or raised ground; thus also certain vessels of plate are described "à deux terrages d'argent ez pattes esmaillez de vert."
